Nasser Seeks 4 'Chicago 7' Defendants Given Jets, Maybe Russ Pilots Stiff Jail Terms for Contempt

CAIRO — President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic is pressing the Soviet Union for MIG-23 fighter planes and scientific aid to intercept the Israeli bombers that have been flying almost at will over this country, but he is hesitating about asking for Soviet pilots to join the Middle East war.

This is a delicate question, he said in an interview at the presidential residence here Friday night. "I have to think about that, but also I have to say something. If these air raids reach the industrial centers, this will not only be the industrial centers of Egypt. It will also be the industrial centers of Israel."

Nasser took an unyielding position against making any territorial concessions to Israel, and dismissed a suggestion of limited ceasefires during Jewish and Muslim religious holidays. When the recorded interview was over, he said that the United States would lose its CHICAGO (UPI)—U.S. District Judge Julius J. Hoffman sent the marathon riot conspiracy trial of the "Chicago Seven" to a jury Saturday and then, amidst shouting and tumult, began sentencing defendants to stiff jail terms on contempt charges.

Hoffman imposed sentences ranging from two years and five months to eight months on four of the antiwar militants charged with conspiring to incite the riots that tore Chicago during the 1968 Democratic National Convention.

He finally declared a recess, but made it plain he would start in again at 10 a.m. today in sentencing the remaining three defendants, along with defense attorneys William M. Kunstler and Leonard I. Weinglass, for "intolerable disruptions . . . anarchy" during the 28-week trial.

While Hoffman handed down his sentences, and while the defendants denounced him from the courtroom floor before being led off to jail, a jury of 10 women and two men deliberated nearby as to their guilt or innocence in what has become one of the most tumultuous and controversial trials in U.S. judicial history.

Shortly before 3 p.m. PST the jury went to its hotel quarters for the night, without having reached a verdict. Deliberations were scheduled to resume about 7:30 a.m. today.

Among Victims in Vegas Area Crash

Six men, including three from Orange County, died in a single-engine plane crash early Saturday morning about 45 miles northwest of Las Vegas.

Spokesmen at Hamilton Air Force Base in California reported finding the six-place Cessna 205 at 3 p.m., about 12 hours after the crash on the Nevada-California border near Death Valley.

AMONG THE dead were Max C. Tiplon of 14771 Briarcliff Place, Tustin, William Martin of 13802 Howard Circle, Garden Grove; and James A. Williams of 26501 Granvia Drive, Mission Viejo.

Martin and Tiplon were vice presidents of Robert M. Grant & Co., an Orange County land development firm. Williams was a land attorney.

The Federal Aviation Administration said the plane, flying without a flight plan, had apparently left for Las Vegas from Ash Meadows, a small resort.

THE PILOTS and the sixth man were all from the Las Vegas area, a spokesman for the California company said.

He said company officials didn't know why the men took off on the early morning flight.

"My girlfriend takes advantage of me," said the young man. "I invited her out for dinner and a show and she asked me if she could bring a date."

A. It is best not to refreeze any food because the bacteria found in all food multiply while it is thawing, according to Marie Harrington, home adviser for the University of California Extension Division. "Cooking kills most of the bacteria, but refreezing only inhibits the growth. Freezing does not kill bacteria that have already formed," Miss Harrington said. "It is fairly safe to refreeze some foods if ice crystals still are visible, but hamburger meat, poultry and fish should never be refrozen under any conditions," she added. ## Air Controllers Set for Slowdown CENTEREACH, N.Y. (UPI) — A crippling slowdown set for today by the nation's air controllers was all but certain Saturday, because the U.S. Transportation Department failed to meet the controllers' deadline for a meeting to discuss their grievances.

A slowdown could disrupt air traffic at major airports throughout the nation.

F. Lee Bailey, attorney for the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization, said the scheduled slowdown — which he said would not be a strike but an action of the individual controllers — would take place today unless the U.S. Transportation Department and the Federal Aviation Administration agreed to a meeting by noon today.

Bailey, who was joined by officers of the controllers, held a news conference at Centereach, N.Y., a Long Island community near MacArthur Airport, control center for busy New York area airports and major center of complaint among air controllers.

John M. Boggs, undersecretary of transportation, has agreed to meet with traffic controllers Monday if the organization did not stage the slowdown today.

But John Britton, spokesman for the controllers, said a Monday meeting was "absolutely not" satisfactory.

He said Boggs, Secretary of Transportation John A. Volpe, and the FAA had been told of the

THE UPROAR began soon after Hoffman commenced reading contempt citations against defendant David T. Dellinger, 53, almost as soon as the jury had left the courtroom.

Suddenly Dellinger's blonde eldest daughter, Mrs. Natasha Burd, 20, was in the middle of a mass of kicking, screaming, shouting men and women. U.S. marshals said Mrs. Burd kicked one of them in the stomach and she was led away crying, "Tell my daddy I love him."

Mrs. Burd was later released, but two other persons, including the girl friend of one of the defendants, were held in the marshal's lockup. As the deliberations ground on, a crowd of about 100 demonstrators began gathering in the chill Chicago night outside the federal building where the trial was being held.

Through the turmoil, Hoffman read off citations for contempt and imposed sentences of two years, five months and 16 days for Dellinger, two years, a

HERE'S WACKY KIND OF WILL POWER

By MOLLY BURRELL
Staff Writer

Recently a crusty senior citizen in his handwritten last testament affirmed: "I am in my right mind in making this will and anyone who says I'm not is a son of a bitch, including the judge..."

A few years ago an eccentric wrote his will on the bottom rung of a step-ladder, thereby launching an incident which nearly upset the usually solemn operation of the county probate machinery.

Time has obscured the reason for the ladder writing. Legend has it that the ladder was stored in the Los Angeles county vault, as required by law, along with other conventionally drafted documents. The ladder disappeared one day after a covey of workmen spent the morning in minor repairs to the room.

Search began, and the will turned up on the next floor where it was doubling as support for a burly janitor.

"Pardon me but you're standing on our will," the probate representative said with a straight face.

The workman's answer, as recalled, was unprintable.

The ladder-will writer was, of course, quite within his rights, explains Long Beach probate attorney Ann Stodden. "All that's required is that the will be dated, signed, and written entirely in the handwriting of the testator," she explains.

"The classic example is the law-school lesson of the prospector who scrawled in the dust of a model-A Ford," she adds. "I've seen them on paper towels, grocery sacks, backs of envelopes."

One of the most unusual in recent Long Beach history, she feels, is that of the $30-a-month trust fund left for the care of a grey alley cat. The Bank of America is trustee, and sends investigators at regular intervals to discern the state of health of the feline. The cat is still sleek and lively after 20 years, and trustees are beginning to suspect possible substitutions.

In another recent will the author bequeathed his shoes to his brother-in-law because "he always thought he could fill mine," Miss Stodden recalls.

Pets are frequently well provided for both in life and in death, says this 10-year veteran of probate matters. Many will writers include provisions to put the pet to sleep when they die, and some even designate funds for burial in a pet cemetery and flowers on the grave.

A recent Long Beach testament left an entire estate to two cats.

Another specified four trustees to administer the estate "for the care, maintenance, and protection of animals." This will also authorized the quartet to rent facilities or do anything they decide is necessary to carry out the intent of the document.

Among the more complicated probates of recent months have been those of victims of two recent commercial airplane crashes in the ocean off California. In the absence of bodies, the court must find that the will writer did die and must fix the time before any other procedures can be begun.

Miss Stodden became a county probate attorney after five years in private practice. Her job is to examine between 100-200 documents a week before they are submitted to the probate court. She looks for errors in jurisdiction, filing of notices, payment of accounts, taxes, distribution of property to proper heirs, and correct attorney fees as fixed by law.

Her job is one which originated in Los Angeles 20 years ago to expedite probate matters and relieve judges of the burden of checking details on an enormous volume of petitions.

It is a system which has been copied by almost every county in California and by most of the states.

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

Prince Philip Flies to 'Moon' Site

Combined News Services

— Prince Philip of Britain made a make-believe pin-point landing on the moon Saturday during a day-long tour of America's spaceport at Cape Kennedy, Fla.

Philip, a veteran pilot, climbed into a lunar-landing craft simulator with Apollo 10 astronaut John W. Young and with the help of a computer steered the craft to a landing.

A computer-camera system flashed pictures of the approach to the moon on a screen outside the simulator window. Craters and mountain ridges sped past as they zeroed in from an altitude of 10,000 feet, touching down on a large black circle that represented their target.

"He's a good pilot," Young said later. "He landed right on top of it. We ought to sign him up."

BANDIT AT 16

Pistol in hand, a robber in wig and fake mustache took $35,000 from the Frankfort State Bank near Chicago and fled in a stolen car before he was captured after a bullet-punctuated chase. His age — 16.

Authorities Saturday questioned him to find out more about him. They declined to disclose what they had learned.

The boy, during the first phase of the questioning, said he was from Louisville, Ky. The car he used for his unsuccessful escape had been stolen in Indiana.

Authorities said he entered the bank Friday wearing a black wig and false sideburns and mustache. He ordered four customers and two tellers to stand aside. Then he tossed a pillow case to another teller and told him to fill it with money.

Bank executive vice president James Walker was inside his office and tripped the alarm before the youth ordered him out. "He had a strong voice, but he was really shaking. He couldn't hold the gun steady," Walker said.

Clutching the gun and the money-filled pillow case, he was met outside by Frankfort Police Chief A.D. Massey and patrolman Wayne Mangun. The bandit struggled with the car doors, jumped inside and sped away with police bullets following him.

His tire flattened, he screeched to a halt and jumped out of the car.

"He fell on the ground screaming that he would surrender," Massey said.

A retired British businessman who had lived most of his life in mainland China crossed the border into Hong Kong unexpectedly Saturday after he was released from four months of detention in Communist China.

William McBain, 78, was wheeled across the border checkpoint of Lowu on a baggage cart and taken to a hospital, where officials described his condition as fair.

McBain, whose younger brother, Edward, 72, made a special flight to London last month to appeal to Communist Chinese diplomats to free his brother, was arrested in Shanghai Oct. 23.

McBain worked most of his life in China for a London export firm and remained there after his retirement some years ago. The Communists gave no reasons why they arrested him.

JAVA RITE

Former President Sukarno's eldest son, 26-year-old Guntur, was quietly married Saturday in the West Java mountain city of Bandung to a Japanese beauty queen, Henny Emilia Harsa, but his father was not permitted to attend the Moslem ceremony.

The wedding was held without fanfare in the home of former vice president Mohammed Hatta, an old friend of the Sukarno family.

The wedding was given by Hatta and Guntur's mother, Madame Fatma Wati, Sukarno's first official wife. She divorced him last year.

HOT AIR FLIER

A 21-year-old American is planning history's first crossing of the English Channel by hot air balloon.

Link Baum, son of a South Orange, N.J., real estate dealer, said in London he expects the trip to last about two hours.

His nylon balloon is kept aloft by hot air generated by propane gas burners. He has developed for the trip an enclosed gondola looking like a space capsule. It is made of fiberglass and has a flotation ring in case of an unscheduled descent.

Huge Battle for Aerospace Contract

By HERB SHANNON
Staff Writer

ROBERT ANDERSON
Sees Boost for State

RICHARD F. WALKER
'Affects Thousands'

After losing out to McDonnell Douglas of St. Louis in the $3-billion, F-15 air supremacy fighter competition, one of Southern California's primary aerospace firms is making a determined effort to recoup by winning an equally lucrative contract to develop the proposed Air Force B-1 strategic bomber.

For North American Rockwell's Los Angeles Division, the multibillion dollar project is more than a second chance to regain its position as a leading airframe manufacturer. The B-1 contract, scheduled to be awarded before next summer, is the last major military aircraft program on the books for the foreseeable future.

NR corporate executives make no bones about the importance of the contract to the company and to the general health of the local aerospace industry, which has been running a temperature since the announcement of surgery to space programs in President Nixon's recent budget message.

AN ESTIMATED 16,000 jobs in Saturn-Apollo related programs are expected to be lost in the next nine months under the budget cuts. The brunt of the cut-back will be felt by NR's Space Division plants at Seal Beach and Downey, and McDonnell Douglas Astronautics in Huntington Beach.

NR Executive Vice President Robert Anderson emphasizes the regional aspect of the company's bid for the bomber contract in competition with Boeing in Seattle and General Dynamics of Ft. Worth.

"We are cognizant not only of the company's need to win, but also of the great impact it would have on the economy of California," Anderson said.

Richard F. Walker, new president of the Los Angeles Division and NR's B-1 program manager, puts it more bluntly:

"Loss of the contract will mean dissipation of a national asset we can ill afford to lose — the most extensive reservoir of talented, experienced aerospace manpower in the nation, as well as some of the most outstanding facilities in the industry."

WALKER, who heads a new divisional management team assembled since the F-15 award to McDonnell Douglas last month, pledges an aggressive, all-out campaign for the contract.

"If we are successful, California will be the winner as well," he said, pointing out that thousands of workers who might otherwise be laid off would be retained for the program.

Walker said the effects of winning or losing the contract would also be felt by thousands of NR suppliers throughout the state. The company traditionally subcontracts about half of its aerospace work, primarily to California firms.

Full B-1 employment requirements are not known. However, on the comparable F-15 program, NR estimated it would have needed between 22,000 and 25,000 company and subcontractor employees at the peak of production.

aircraft could be as high as $2.3 billion. The new supersonic bomber will replace Boeing's subsonic B-52 Stratofortress, which has been in operation as the mainstay of the Strategic Air Command for nearly 20 years.

GENERAL features of the proposed B-1 include speed between two and three times the speed of sound, size slightly smaller than the B-52 but larger than its predecessor, the Boeing B-47, and greater payloads than either, because of improved engine performance over previous models.

B-1 costs, based on comparative expense of developing other new aircraft, would run between $22 and $25 million each, on a procurement assumption of 200 production aircraft. The total cost of this production program, in terms of 1968 purchasing power, would be about $9 billion. This would not include ground support equipment or special weapons systems.

North American Rockwell's bid for the B-1 contract is backed by more than a need to stay in the business. The company has performed 15 Air Force study programs relating to the advanced aircraft since 1964.

It also was the producer of the XB-70, originally procured by the Air Force as a production bomber, which exceeded the proposed B-1's speed maximum, and was the largest aircraft ever to fly at three times the speed of sound.

THE COMPANY also has been in continuous production of supersonic aircraft since building the nation's first operational supersonic fighter, the F-100 Super Sabre, in 1953.

Follow-on programs include the hypersonic X-15 rocket plane, and current production of the carrier-based RA-5C Vigilante reconnaissance aircraft, capable of double the speed of sound.

The X-15 program was cited by the government as the most successful aircraft research program in history, and led to refinements of flight techniques used by the astronauts in their trip to the moon.

The firm also has available some of the most advanced research and production facilities in the industry, including metallurgical technology developed in the XB-70 program, and approximately 10 million square feet of covered area in the Los Angeles Division plant.

Marine Copter Unit on Last Lap Home

The last of three Marine Corps aviation units being redeployed from Vietnam is scheduled to arrive in San Diego Monday and will be assigned Wednesday to the Marine Air Station at Santa Ana.

Marine Heavy Helicopter Squadron 361 is arriving home aboard the USS Tripoli, which is expected to dock at Piers M and N at San Diego's North Island Naval Air Station at about 4 p.m.

In Vietnam since last July, the squadron is returning to the U.S. as part of President Richard M. Nixon's "Phase Three" redeployment of U.S. forces from Vietnam.

While in Vietnam, squadron elements flew 9,050 combat sorties, air-lifted more than nine million pounds of cargo, and transported more than 81,000 passengers to various locations throughout "I" Corps territory in the northern part of the country, spokesmen reported.

During ceremonies at the Santa Ana Marine facility Wednesday, the squadron officially will become part of the Third Marine Aircraft Wing, Aircraft Group-56.

IWO JIMA

This Is How It Was in Marines' Bloodiest Battle

By MARY NEISWENDER
Staff Writer

Greying . . . balding . . . pot-bellied . . . they'll puff up the black sand beach at Iwo Jima this week, running ashore as they did 25 years ago.

But this time things will be different. Instead of dodging enemy bullets and mortar shells, watching their fellow-Marines dying on all sides, they'll be sidestepping rusting landing craft and empty beer cans, watching their middle-aged companions trying not to show their age.

Although circumstances have changed, the valor of the men who lived through the bloodiest battle in history — and those that didn't — hasn't changed.

This week, 25 years older than when they first stormed the beach of that pork-chop island, the men of three Marine divisions return to Iwo Jima.

They'll return again to a Japanese-held island, but this time "permission" was granted by the far east government.

When the U.S. Marines finally planted the flag atop Mt. Suribachi, it was the climax of 26 days and nights of fighting in which 6,821 Americans and 19,000 Japanese died.

When the flag came down from atop the battle-scarred peak — two years ago — it was in a simple ceremony marking return of the Volcano and Bonin Islands to Japan. No one was hurt — except, perhaps a few of Iwo's battle-scarred veterans, who admitted the return of the war prize was "a little hard to take."

"BUT TIME heals all wounds, I guess," they shrugged.

Although the wounds are healed, most veterans claim they will never forget the days on Iwo Jima — the days they saw fellow Americans die in the water, in the mud, in shell craters and in landing craft.

"I can't forget it — and I never will," says former Cmdr. Gordon Hebert of 9712 Bloomfield St., Cypress. "It was hell — and you don't forget that, ever."

Hebert, who holds the Bronze Star for his work as beachmaster of Yellow Beach One, claims his remembrances are "pretty gory."

"All I remember is death."

Twenty thousand men of the 3rd, 4th and 5th Marine Divisions swept ashore that day, and before the fighting was over on that small dot in the Pacific, the American casualty roster listed 23,000 killed and wounded. Most were in the first wave that hit the beach at 9 a.m. on a foul, rainy day.

Hebert recalls that death began in the water — landing craft, loaded with men, getting direct hits; many, which successfully ran through the barrage of bullets, swamped in heavy surf trying to get ashore.

AMERICANS DIED before they touched the black beach.

Others died kneecap-deep in water.

Others died when they got to shore.

Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal, whose picture of the flag-raising on Iwo Jima won him world-wide acclaim, summed it up: "Surviving on that beach was like standing in the rain and hoping you wouldn't get wet."

Constant explosions shook the shore as the Japanese "walked their mortar bursts up the beach, scattering men and equipment."

The beach was a tangled mass of wrecked landing craft and dead, dying and wounded men.

"When we hit the beach — those that made it — were pinned down for five hours, with the Japanese entrenched 30 feet from the beach," Hebert recalls.

To move at all, the ex-Navy man says, meant almost certain death.

"We were stacked into the shell craters like cord wood. I remember jumping into one that was pretty full. One of the men didn't like the crowded quarters, so he jumped up and dove into the next hole, just six feet away, just as a mortar hit it. It blew his face off."

Hebert, a sales executive for the ISI Sales Corporation, was a cavalryman during World War I and a Navy lieutenant commander during World War II. On that bitter February morning 25 years ago his job was to boss operations on the beach.

His duties: to maintain a steady flow of supplies from the invasion fleet and keep the beach clear of wrecked craft so others could land to unload their cargoes of men and machines and evacuate the wounded to ships offshore.

FOR FIVE DAYS the job was a 24-hour-a-day one, as Marines clawed their way off the beach through defenses that had been "in making" for 40 years.

One hill, Hebert recalls, wasn't much larger at its base than a small house, but it was defended by four tanks buried up to their turrets, three 77 mm antitank guns, 12 double machine guns, four heavy machine guns and countless light machine guns. It had almost 20 sunken pillboxes and so many caves they were never numbered, some several levels deep.

Defenders, the veteran says, were on top of the cliffs, in the cliffs, on the ground and under the ground.

Ten years after the fighting ended on the volcanic strip, Marines conducting maneuvers on the island uncovered two caves, containing the bodies of 2,000 Japanese. Although more than 8,000 U.S. servicemen died on the island, the fierce fighting left almost 20,000 Japanese dead.

"It's a God-forsaken island," Hebert says, "and no use to us now. When we fought for it, we needed it as a place for planes to refuel or land on bombing runs from Guam to Japan."

Although Hebert claims he'd "mortgage my teeth" to join two veterans on their return to the island, he won't be able to make it.

"But I've got my piece of Iwo," he says, "The only bit I want."

It's a bottle of black sand — from the bloody beach on which the bloodiest battle in Marine Corps history was fought.

LBJ 'Wrong' to Assume Viet Powers, Says Aiken

MONTPELIER, Vt. (U.P.) — Sen. George D. Aiken, ranking Republican member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said Saturday that former President Lyndon B. Johnson misinterpreted the 1964 Gulf of Tonkin resolution.

Aiken said he probably would vote for repeal of the resolution if such a vote were taken now.

"Congress didn't mean to give the President the power to do whatever he wanted to do in Vietnam," Aiken said after delivering a speech at a foreign policy symposium in his home state.

"The Congress never for a moment felt it was authorizing the President to use military forces whenever and wherever he saw fit."

Asked whether he thought President Nixon also has misinterpreted the resolution, Aiken said: "No. He inherited the problem, and he's getting out of it the best way he can."

SEN. GEORGE AIKEN
"Nixon Understands"

In his speech, Aiken suggested the member-nations of the North American Treaty organization should be persuaded to assume a greater responsibility in bringing peace to the Middle East.

"Right now," Aiken

said, "some of our European friends seem to think we are doing so much for Israel they can afford to play the politics of petroleum."

Aiken said oil literally is fueling the arms race between Israel and the Arab states, and he added that some European countries seem to be selling arms to Arab countries primarily to ensure continued oil supplies. He named France as an example.

"Oil played a big part in France's decision to sell airplanes to Libya, some of which will undoubtedly find their way into Egypt," Aiken said.

"This is an intolerable situation in which we, as well as other nations on both sides of the war, are heavily involved."

"Western European countries must take some responsibility for preventing the conflict in the Middle East from escalating, unless they are themselves committed to a policy of national suicide."

Cite Lead Poisoning Epidemic

NEW YORK (UPI) — Rep. William F. Ryan, D-N.Y., Saturday called for action against lead poisoning which he said had reached epidemic proportions in New York City.

Speaking at a news conference held in the dilapidated Upper West Side apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Salvadorio Santana, Ryan said there probably were "some 30,000 cases" of undetected lead poisoning in the city.

THE CONGRESSMAN compared this with the polio epidemic of 1955 — the worst in 30 years — in which 2,500 polio cases were reported.

Ryan also showed newsmen and community residents a new machine which detects the amount of lead in paint by means of radiation scanning.

The machine, developed by scientists of the New York University Medical Center's Institute of Environmental Medicine, emits cadmium-109 gamma rays onto a sample of the paint in question, analyzes the rays and provides a reading of the amount of lead in the paint sample.

THE MACHINE is regarded as a breakthrough in the fight against lead-poisoning since most cases occur when small children eat flakes of lead-based paint. Previously, the only way to determine the lead content of paint was by laboratory tests.

A test of the peeling walls of the Santana apartment showed the paint was 37 per cent lead.

West German Fire That Killed 7 Elderly Jews Attributed to Arson

New York Times Service

BONN, West Germany — A fire that killed seven elderly Jews in Munich has been attributed to arson. Two of the victims had survived internment in Nazi concentration camps.

The federal minister of interior, Hans-Dietrich Genscher, posted a reward of 75,000 marks ($20,491) — the highest in post war German history — for information leading to the capture of the arsonist. Genscher flew to Munich this morning to inspect the scene — a four-story building housing a Jewish old people's home and a synagogue.

News of the blaze stirred a wave of outrage and sorrow across West Germany. Chancellor Willy Brandt, in Denmark on an official visit, said: "We will do everything to capture the culprit or culprits."

A special 30-member investigation team was assigned to the case. It is the same group of federal and Bavarian state policemen who are investigating the Arab terrorist attack on El Al Airline passengers at Munich airport last Tuesday, in which one person was killed.

POLICE authorities in all 10 West German states and West Berlin posted special guards at Jewish community houses and synagogues, including 30 such institutions in Munich.

The police based the arson theory on the discovery of a gasoline can in the stairwell of the Jewish community center, and on the way the fire developed.

This Is How It Was in Marines' Bloodiest Battle

By MARY NEISWENDER
Staff Writer

Greying . . . balding . . . pot-bellied . . . they'll puff up the black sand beach at Iwo Jima this week, running ashore as they did 25 years ago.

But this time things will be different.

Instead of dodging enemy bullets and mortar shells, watching their fellow-Marines dying on all sides, they'll be sidestepping rusting landing craft and empty beer cans, watching their middle-aged companions trying not to show their age.

Although circumstances have changed, the valor of the men who lived through the bloodiest battle in history — and those that didn't — hasn't changed.

This week, 25 years older than when they first stormed the beach of that pork-chop island, the men of three Marine divisions return to Iwo Jima.

They'll return again to a Japanese-held island, but this time "permission" was granted by the far east government.

When the U.S. Marines finally planted the flag atop Mt. Suribachi, it was the climax of 26 days and nights of fighting in which 6,821 Americans and 19,000 Japanese died.

When the flag came down from atop the battle-scarred peak — two years ago — it was in a simple ceremony marking return of the Volcano and Bonin Islands to Japan. No one was hurt — except, perhaps a few of Iwo's battle-scarred veterans, who admitted the return of the war prize was "a little hard to take."

"BUT TIME heals all wounds, I guess," they shrugged.

Although the wounds are healed, most veterans claim they will never forget the days on Iwo Jima — the days they saw fellow Americans die in the water, in the mud, in shell craters and in landing craft.

"I can't forget it — and I never will," says former Cmdr. Gordon Hebert of 9712 Bloomfield St., Cypress. "It was hell — and you don't forget that, ever."

Hebert, who holds the Bronze Star for his work as beachmaster of Yellow Beach One, claims his remembrances are "pretty gory."

"All I remember is death."

Twenty thousand men of the 3rd, 4th and 5th Marine Divisions swept ashore that day, and before the fighting was over on that small dot in the Pacific, the American casualty roster listed 23,000 killed and wounded. Most were in the first wave that hit the beach at 9 a.m. on a foul, rainy day.

Hebert recalls that death began in the water — landing craft, loaded with men, getting direct hits; many, which successfully ran through the barrage of bullets, swamped in heavy surf trying to get ashore.

AMERICANS DIED before they touched the black beach.

Others died kneecap-deep in water.

Others died when they got to shore.

Associated Press photographer Joe Rosenthal, whose picture of the flag-raising on Iwo Jima won him world-wide acclaim, summed it up: "Surviving on that beach was like standing in the rain and hoping you wouldn't get wet."

Constant explosions shook the shore as the Japanese "walked their mortar bursts up the beach, scattering men and equipment."

The beach was a tangled mass of wrecked landing craft and dead, dying and wounded men.

"When we hit the beach — those that made it — were pinned down for five hours, with the Japanese entrenched 30 feet from the beach," Hebert recalls.

To move at all, the ex-Navy man says, meant almost certain death.

"We were stacked into the shell craters like cord wood. I remember jumping into one that was pretty full. One of the men didn't like the crowded quarters, so he jumped up and dove into the next hole, just six feet away, just as a mortar hit it. It blew his face off."

Hebert, a sales executive for the ISI Sales Corporation, was a cavalryman during World War I and a Navy lieutenant commander during World War II. On that bitter February morning 25 years ago his job was to boss operations on the beach.

His duties: to maintain a steady flow of supplies from the invasion fleet and keep the beach clear of wrecked craft so others could land to unload their cargoes of men and machines and evacuate the wounded to ships offshore.

FOR FIVE DAYS the job was a 24-hour-a-day one, as Marines clawed their way off the beach through defenses that had been "in making" for 40 years.

One hill, Hebert recalls, wasn't much larger at its base than a small house, but it was defended by four tanks buried up to their turrets, three 77 mm antitank guns, 12 double machine guns, four heavy machine guns and countless light machine guns. It had almost 20 sunken pillboxes and so many caves they were never numbered, some several levels deep.

Defenders, the veteran says, were on top of the cliffs, in the cliffs, on the ground and under the ground.

Ten years after the fighting ended on the volcanic strip, Marines conducting maneuvers on the island uncovered two caves, containing the bodies of 2,000 Japanese. Although more than 6,000 U.S. servicemen died on the island, the fierce fighting left almost 20,000 Japanese dead.

"It's a God-forsaken island," Hebert says, "and no use to us now. When we fought for it, we needed it as a place for planes to refuel or land on bombing runs from Guam to Japan."

Although Hebert claims he'd "mortgage my teeth" to join two veterans on their return to the island, he won't be able to make it.

"But I've got my piece of Iwo," he says, "The only bit I want."

It's a bottle of black sand — from the bloody beach on which the bloodiest battle in Marine Corps history was fought.

LBJ 'Wrong' to Assume Viet Powers, Says Aiken

MONTPELIER, Vt. — Sen. George D. Aiken, ranking Republican member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said Saturday that former President Lyndon B. Johnson misinterpreted the 1964 Gulf of Tonkin resolution.

Aiken said he probably would vote for repeal of the resolution if such a vote were taken now.

"Congress didn't mean to give the President the power to do whatever he wanted to do in Vietnam," Aiken said after delivering a speech at a foreign policy symposium in his home state.

"The Congress never for a moment felt it was authorizing the President to use military forces whenever and wherever he saw fit."

Asked whether he thought President Nixon also has misinterpreted the resolution, Aiken said: "No. He inherited the problem, and he's getting out of it the best way he can."

SEN. GEORGE AIKEN
'Nixon Understands'

In his speech, Aiken suggested the member-nations of the North American Treaty organization should be persuaded to assume a greater responsibility in bringing peace to the Middle East.

"Right now," Aiken

said, "some of our European friends seem to think we are doing so much for Israel they can afford to play the politics of petroleum."

Aiken said oil literally is fueling the arms race between Israel and the Arab states, and he added that some European countries seem to be selling arms to Arab countries primarily to ensure continued oil supplies. He named France as an example.

"Oil played a big part in France's decision to sell airplanes to Libya, some of which will undoubtedly find their way into Egypt," Aiken said.

" . . . This is an intolerable situation in which we, as well as other nations on both sides of the war, are heavily involved."

"Western European countries must take some responsibility for preventing the conflict in the Middle East from escalating, unless they are themselves committed to a policy of national suicide."

Cite Lead Poisoning Epidemic

NEW YORK (UPI) — Rep. William F. Ryan, D-N.Y., Saturday called for action against lead poisoning which he said had reached epidemic proportions in New York City.

Speaking at a news conference held in the dilapidated Upper West Side apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Salvadorio Santana, Ryan said there probably were "some 30,000 cases" of undetected lead poisoning in the city.

THE CONGRESSMAN compared this with the polio epidemic of 1955 — the worst in 30 years — in which 2,500 polio cases were reported.

Ryan also showed newsmen and community residents a new machine which detects the amount of lead in paint by means of radiation scanning.

The machine, developed by scientists of the New York University Medical Center's Institute of Environmental Medicine, emits cadmium-109 gamma rays onto a sample of the paint in question, analyzes the rays and provides a reading of the amount of lead in the paint sample.

THE MACHINE is regarded as a breakthrough in the fight against lead-poisoning since most cases occur when small children eat flakes of lead-based paint. Previously, the only way to determine the lead content of paint was by laboratory tests.

A test of the peeling walls of the Santana apartment showed the paint was 37 per cent lead.

economic interests in the Arab world in less than two years if it gave more Phantom jet planes to Israel.

The Egyptian president, who permitted the use of a government telex line to assure that an uncensored transcript of his remarks would leave Cairo, made the following points:

—He could not accept giving Israel one inch of Arab territory; he wanted peace but peace meant the complete evacuation of the Israeli-occupied territories, including Jerusalem, a solution of the Palestinian refugee problem, and the creation of a nonfanatical, multireligious Israeli state.

—“After that the recognition of Israel, the right of Israel to exist, the freedom of navigation in the Suez Canal, then there will be peace. There will be no need of police forces, no need of demilitarized zones, because if we solve the refugee problem, and Israel declares about the borders without expansion, there will be a solution.”

—He was sure Israel wanted more and more territory, not only everything it had conquered in the June, 1967, war but more in the next generation.

—His central committee has been discussing whether to agree to a partial settlement for the Israeli evacuation of Sinai without solving the problem of Jerusalem and the west bank, but nobody agreed about that. The only border rectifications they had in mind were minor adjustments to accommodate villages that were partly on one side of a border and partly on the other.

—He had no plan for attack on Israel in June, 1967. “We were not capable to attack Israel at that time, because a big part of our army was in Yemen — about three divisions.”

He was clearly fascinated and frustrated by the military technology available to Israel through the United States, and quietly furious about the prospect of facing more new American Phantoms when, as he conceded, Israel already commanded the air over the Arab world.

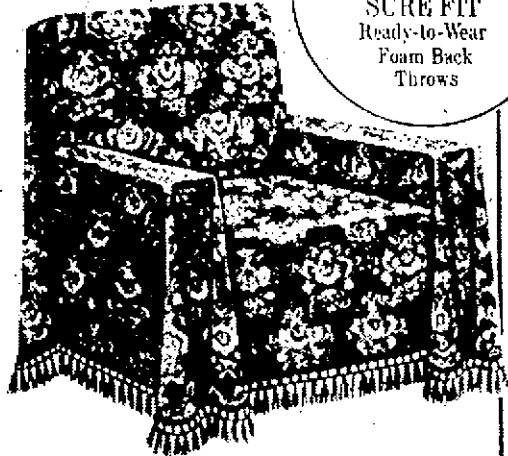

Everything, he seemed to be saying, had gone against him: his old friends in the west, now helping his enemy. His major aim of bringing about the modernization and social reconstruction of his country had been hampered by the imperatives of defense. But never mind: he would fight on, he would not compromise, and in the end the size and long historical tradition of the Arab peoples would prevail.

The United States and Israel and Britain were to blame for all the troubles that had beset him since he came to power in his mid-30's. Now, in his 50's, he was saying that the Nixon Administration's efforts to introduce an even-handed American policy in the Middle East were worse than the Johnson Administration's eight-point Middle Eastern program of 1968, that Washington was merely following the policies and desires of Jerusalem, often in official Israeli language, and that the Israeli raid on the suburbs of Cairo last week was not a technical error but a calculated raid to trap and kill the munition factory workers between shifts.

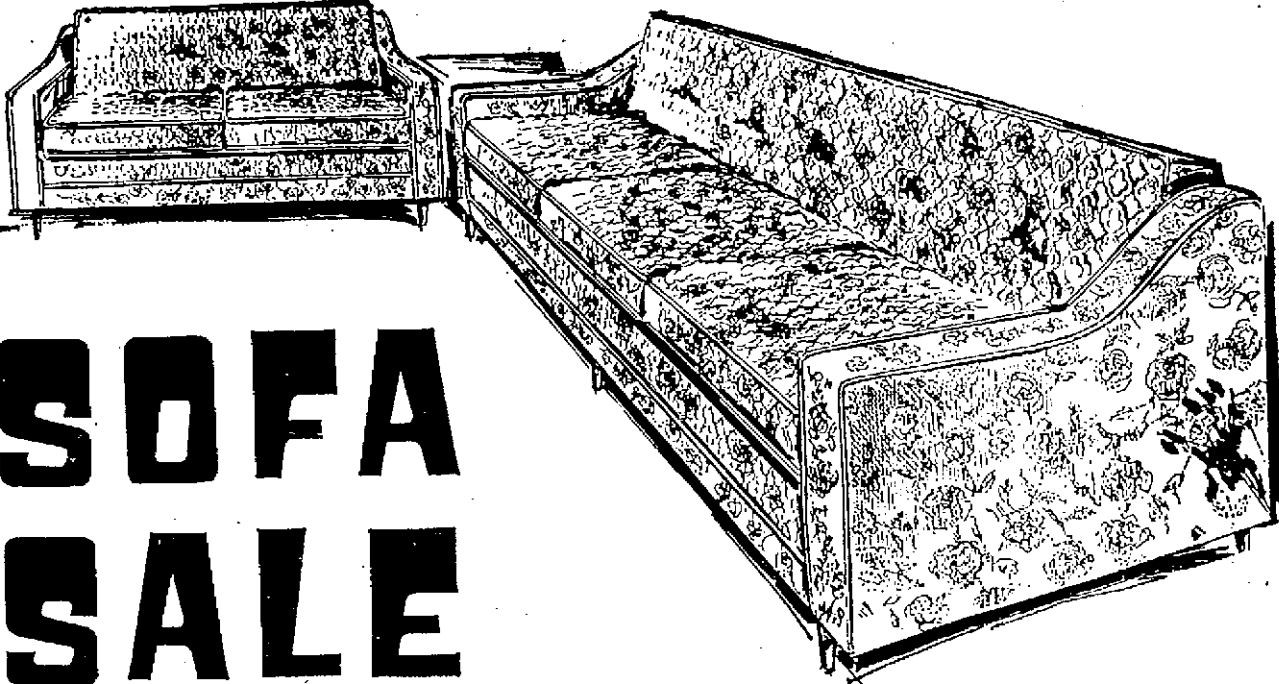

All this was said with a kind of quiet and even modest inner conviction: there was no honor in the West, nothing but ambition and aggression in Israel.

3 Counties Eye Combined Mass Transit Proposal

By BOB GEIVET
Staff Writer

A three-county study of mass transit needs would be made with federal funding — if supervisors of Los Angeles, Orange and San Diego counties approve.

The so-called Comprehensive Planning Organization of San Diego County is spearheading a drive for acceptance of an overall plan for high-speed transit, such as oversize trains, linking the Southland's three most-populous counties.

BUT THE proposal seems to have met with only limited enthusiasm — and most of it is in San Diego County where the planning group is headed by Richard Brown, an El Cajon city councilman.

Chairman Alton E. Allen of the Orange County Board of Supervisors said that federal funds of $1 million are available for planning mass transit, but applications for allocations of funds must be filed by April 1.

This does not allow much time for careful study of various proposals, he insisted.

Allen said the planning proposal was not bolstered by any cost estimates, nor was it specific about what kind of vehicle would be the mass transit solution.

HE SAID he was "skeptical" over the "vagueness" of the suggestions by the San Diego organization, which showed pictures of high-speed trains such as are in use in Japan and are being perfected in France.

Supervisor Warren Dorn of Los Angeles County said that he wasn't impressed.

"I don't want anything like that going through my county," he declared, referring to France's proposed high-speed trains.

Harvey Scheidte, vice chairman of the San Diego County Board of Supervisors, said his board is in favor of a regional-type study to be financed partly by federal funds.

SUCH STUDIES also would need funding from state sources — and some have suggested diversions of gasoline tax moneys for this.

Supervisor Allen said Orange County opposes diversion of gas tax funds for such surveys.

He indicated that his board of supervisors may be asked soon for an official expression of position on the mass transit study, and hinted that he would oppose it at this time because of uncertainties of funding and objectives of the study.

Scheidte said that the San Diego County Comprehensive Planning Organization would propose a "task force" of 15 members, representing the three counties, the Southern California Association of Governments, the Southern California Rapid Transit District and the State of California.

The Orange County Rapid Transit District, thus far only an advisory group which has not been active, said it was not informed of the study proposals.

Heroin 'on Prescription' Urged

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

Organized crime could be dealt a deadly blow if law enforcement agencies had a medical program to supply heroin addicts with drugs, a Long Beach sociologist says.

That way, the enormous profit from the sale of illegal drugs would not be available to organized crime "to buy immunity from corrupt public officials."

Dr. Martin R. Haskell, a sociology professor at California State College at Long Beach, proposed sweeping reforms to fight drug addiction, juvenile delinquency and organized crime in a book published this week. He co-authored the book, "Crime and Delinquency," with Dr. Lewis Yablonsky.

Legalization of marijuana — under strict controls — also would set back organized crime, which makes much of its profits from the narcotics trade, Dr. Haskell says.

He notes that "almost the entire recent crime increase in America can be accounted for in the increase of hard drug addicts and the enforcement of marijuana laws."

Dr. Haskell said doctors should be allowed to dis-burse sufficient heroin to quieten addicts now forced into crime because they support habits that cost up to $50 a day. If the drugs were dispensed through legal, medical channels, the cost to addicts could be reduced to $15 a month.

"This would remove the immense profits reaped by illicit drug dealers, who import large quantities of heroin from Europe and elsewhere," Dr. Haskell said.

He added that present law enforcement programs — and massive efforts such as Operation Intercept — have "hardly made a dent" in organized drug traffic and almost always net only users or small-time pushers.

"The people at the top of the organized crime syndicates are well protected through levels of hierarchy and bribery of public officials," he said.

At present, Dr. Haskell charged, the federal Bureau of Narcotics is "contributing greatly to organized crime" by prosecuting doctors who dispense heroin to addicts, and lobbying against opening legal drug channels.

Present marijuana laws also encourage use of heroin, he said.

"When we tell young people that marijuana and heroin are both dangerous drugs — and when they experiment with marijuana and find it's not seriously harmful — they're less likely to fear harder drugs."

Dr. Haskell proposes that cigarettes, alcohol and marijuana — "all of which are about as dangerous" — should be dispensed from state stores, drying up illegal marijuana channels and providing revenue.

Can public opinion be mobilized to bring about such change?

"The public just isn't sufficiently aware of the real problem, and politicians are afraid to go out on a limb for fear they won't get public support," he said.

"People are most concerned with direct protection from crimes such as robbery and burglary," Dr. Haskell said. "So the first thing they think of is putting addicts in jail. But that hasn't been very effective."

"We need to get at the root of the problem and find ways the addict can either be cured or supplied with drugs through medical prescription." There's been very little success in curing most heroin addicts, he adds.

Dr. Haskell has had 12 years teaching experience, worked as aftercare director at the Berkshire Farm for Delinquent Boys in New York, and has served in many advisory roles in police, criminology and sociological institutes.

Students Bury 1970 Auto

LOS GATOS (UPI) — College students wearing surgical masks pushed a 1970 yellow Maverick 14 miles to San Jose Saturday where they planned to give it a funeral and bury it.

The burial ceremony was to be the climax of a week-long survival fair at San Jose State College, a collection of exhibits and events protesting pollution of the environment.

The Maverick, which sells for $2,600, was pushed by 15 members of Kappa Sigma Fraternity and escorted by people on horseback.

Chuck Farmer, a salesman at the Los Gatos Ford dealer, watched the car rolled away on its journey and said:

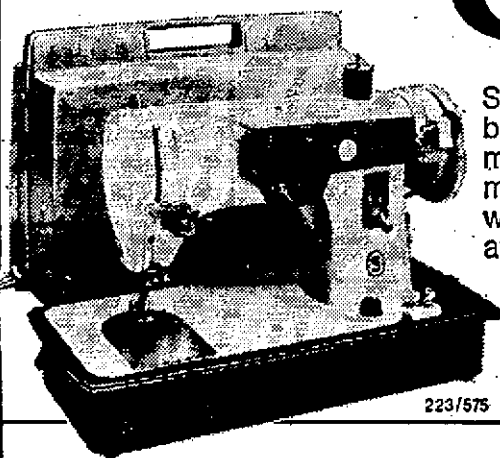

"I think it's going for a good cause. I hope it does some good — but I doubt it."

3 Counties Eye Combined Mass Transit Proposal

By BOB GLIVET
Staff Writer

A three-county study of mass transit needs would be made with federal funding — if supervisors of Los Angeles, Orange and San Diego counties approve.

The so-called Comprehensive Planning Organization of San Diego County is spearheading a drive for acceptance of an overall plan for high-speed transit, such as over-size trains, linking the Southland's three most-populous counties.

BUT THE proposal seems to have met with only limited enthusiasm — and most of it is in San Diego County where the planning group is headed by Richard Brown, an El Cajon city councilman.

Chairman Alton E. Allen of the Orange County Board of Supervisors said that federal funds of $1 million are available for planning mass transit, but applications for allocations of funds must be filed by April 1.

This does not allow much time for careful study of various proposals, he insisted.

Allen said the planning proposal was not bolstered by any cost estimates, nor was it specific about what kind of vehicle would be the mass transit solution.

HE SAID he was "skeptical" over the "vagueness" of the suggestions by the San Diego organization, which showed pictures of high-speed trains such as are in use in Japan and are being perfected in France.

Supervisor Warren Dorn of Los Angeles County said that he wasn't impressed.

"I don't want anything like that going through my county," he declared, referring to France's proposed high-speed trains.

Harvey Scheidle, vice chairman of the San Diego County Board of Supervisors, said his board is in favor of a regional-type study to be financed partly by federal funds.

SUCH STUDIES also would need funding from state sources — and some have suggested diversions of gasoline tax moneys for this.

Supervisor Allen said Orange County opposes diversion of gas tax funds for such surveys.

He indicated that his board of supervisors may be asked soon for an official expression of position on the mass transit study, and hinted that he would oppose it at this time because of uncertainties of funding and objectives of the study.

Scheidle said that the San Diego County Comprehensive Planning Organization would propose a "task force" of 15 members, representing the three counties, the Southern California Association of Governments, the Southern California Rapid Transit District and the State of California.

The Orange County Rapid Transit District, thus far only an advisory group which has not been active, said it was not informed of the study proposals.

L.B. DOCTOR SUGGESTS ONE WAY TO BEAT CRIME

Heroin 'on Prescription' Urged

By WALT MURRAY
Staff Writer

Organized crime could be dealt a deadly blow if law enforcement agencies had a medical program to supply heroin addicts with drugs, a Long Beach sociologist says.

That way, the enormous profit from the sale of illegal drugs would not be available to organized crime "to buy immunity from corrupt public officials."

Dr. Martin R. Haskell, a sociology professor at California State College at Long Beach, proposed sweeping reforms to fight drug addiction, juvenile delinquency and organized crime in a book published this week. He co-authored the book, "Crime and Delinquency," with Dr. Lewis Yablonsky.

Legalization of marijuana — under strict controls — also would set back organized crime, which makes much of its profits from the narcotics trade, Dr. Haskell says.

He notes that "almost the entire recent crime increase in America can be accounted for in the increase of hard drug addicts and the enforcement of marijuana laws."

Dr. Haskell said doctors should be allowed to dispense sufficient heroin to quieten addicts now forced into crime because they support habits that cost up to $50 a day. If the drugs were dispensed through legal, medical channels, the cost to addicts could be reduced to $15 a month.

"This would remove the immense profits reaped by illicit drug dealers, who import large quantities of heroin from Europe and elsewhere," Dr. Haskell said.

He added that present law enforcement programs — and massive efforts such as Operation Intercept — have "hardly made a dent" in organized drug traffic and almost always net only users or small-time pushers.

Hippies Help Paramount in Drugs Fight

By ARLINE SHERER
Staff Writer

Hippies have "dropped in" to Paramount. But instead of spreading the underground gospel of pot, pills and peyote, they are helping the community establish an antidrug abuse program.

The hippies are members of the Do It Now Foundation, a nonprofit educational and charitable organization with no political or religious ties. As a pilot project, they have been hired by the Board of Education in Paramount to act as consultants in assisting the community in its fight against the increasing drug problem.

For five weeks, they have worked in Paramount — surveying the drug problem; meeting with teachers, parents, students and community leaders; setting up a 24-hour crisis phone line; and training counselors. They will be in the community for four more weeks.

Russell Ball, principal of Paramount Senior High School, said the district is paying $8,000 to the Do It Now Foundation, and that the money is well spent.

"LIKE ALMOST ALL OTHER high schools, we have a drug problem," he said. "Unlike many of them, we are trying to do something about it. The Do It Now Foundation people have held seminars with the teachers, answered questions for parents and students, worked toward getting hospitals in the area to set up beds for kids who have taken overdoses of drugs, and asked industry leaders to establish a community center for the kids. The foundation approach is another arrow in our quiver to use in the fight against drugs."

The foundation has been active as an underground organization for three years. It was formed by a group of ex-drug users and professional people.

"We are half establishment and half hip, but we see eye-to-eye," said Harry Richardson, a co-director of the foundation.

He explained that when foundation volunteers are not helping schools and community groups, they are manning a hot line for drug abusers in Hollywood.

"MOST OF OUR CALLS USED to be from people who had bad trips with acid (LSD) and speed (amphetamines). Now there has been a switch to reds (barbiturates)."

Nancy Gray, also a co-director for the foundation, pointed out that young people don't realize the danger of barbiturates. "Downers can be as addicting as heroin, and you suffer withdrawal symptoms," she said.

She added that the group's survey of hospitals in the Paramount area showed 60 to 70 barbiturate overdoses a month. "One mortuary in Paramount said it had 20 kids die of drug overdoses in the last two years," she said.

Richardson said the foundation does not condemn or condone the use of marijuana and other psychedelics. "We just tell the kids it's illegal and antisocial because the large majority of the population will reject you for using it. We don't have enough facts to make a decision on the effects of marijuana. What we are trying to do is take hot shots at the harder drugs."

"IN THE LAST SIX MONTHS, we have had a mass campaign emphasizing that 'speed does kill.' It was used by German and Japanese pilots during World War II bombing missions. It creates paranoia and fear."

"We got rock n' roll stars and people the kids listen to, such as Timothy Leary and Allen Ginsberg, to issue statements against speed, and we put their statements in a booklet, on a record and in radio spots."

To reach the kids in Paramount and other school districts, the foundation staff uses light shows, films, records and person to person contact.

"We have found the kids usually have heard the facts about drugs, they just don't believe them," said Mrs. Gray.

"It's the teachers and parents who need the information. The kids need to hear from their peers what the problems with drugs are. When we went into Paramount, we started the drug education program with the teachers and parents. We are hoping now that a dialogue between adults and young people can be established."

SHE TRACED THE BREAKDOWN in communication to the issue of marijuana. "The establishment told the kids that marijuana is a killer weed and will lead to heroin addiction. The kids try it and find the dire predictions are not true, so they no longer trust what the establishment says."

Mrs. Gray explained her theory on why the younger generation has turned to drugs. "The kids are not being involved in life and challenged. They feel they have no function in the family. In agricultural times, the kids helped the family on the farm. During the Depression, they went to work. Now, with the affluent family, the kids have no challenge. They feel impotent and alienated."

"Another problem, particularly in Paramount, is that the kids have no places to hang out without being told to move or picked up for loitering. They need a teen center. When we talked to some of the kids in Paramount, they told us they wanted a place where they could work on their cars. The girls wanted a place where they could sew and do creative projects."

SOME OF THE OTHER INFORMATION the staff gained from Paramount students and parents was more unsettling.

"Parents told me of the drug problem among elementary school children," Mrs. Gray said. "The kids play a game called grab bag. They take pills from their parents' medicine chest, put them into a bag and grab."

She explained that parents had a chance of reaching the young children, since they still obeyed adult authority, but the process was difficult with older children.

"We try to make the parents understand that if their kids are involved with drugs, they will usually come out of it," said Richardson.

"The kids may not be the same — their life style and values may have changed. But it doesn't mean the kids will be bad, just different."

RICHARDSON ADDED THAT THE foundation's goal in Paramount is to have an on-going antidrug program run by the community.

"The community response has been mindblowing, and we are getting calls for help from Lakewood as well," said Mrs. Richardson.

Richardson explained that the foundation has rejected offers of government and church aid in order to avoid being identified as an establishment group.

"We are self-supporting by our work and donations. Our trip is easy to understand. We've seen too many groovy people get messed up. Some of our friends have died."

NARCOTICS ANONYMOUS

There's Help for Young Drug Addicts

BY ANNE HOWE
Staff Writer

Johnny Edwards, 45, listens intently as the teenage boy talks in halting phrases, slowing sipping a coke. "I'm trying to get unhooked," the boy says.

The boy with shoulder-length hair and the bespectacled man are members of Narcotics Anonymous.

The set, as the group is called, officially meets on week nights at the Paramount Methodist Church, but other, more intense sessions, take place in coffee shops, at midnight in sponsors' homes, and on street corners. When a kid needs help kicking the drug habit, he can't wait for a weekly meeting.

Meeting night procedures are similar to those originated by Alcoholics Anonymous. The small group of members sit around a table trying to identify their experiences with those of other members. They share the same problems and find help through some of the same solutions.

For the newcomer in the group, the regulars look

Snowstorm Leaves Paris Powerless

PARIS (UPI) — A snowstorm blew down five miles of high tension wires in the Cherbourg area Saturday leaving some 200,000 residents without power, and laid a blanket of white over much of northern France, where gale force winds have wrought death and destruction for two days.

Police in Cherbourg said emergency measures were put into effect to insure electric power to hospitals and public facilities. Loudspeaker cars moved through the city broadcasting instructions on the use of gas fires for heat and cooking.

Electric company officials said they could not estimate how long it would take for power to be restored, since the damage was extensive.

St. Valentine Trophies Awarded

TERNI, Italy (UPI) — This city which houses the tomb of St. Valentine has awarded its 1970 "Golden St. Valentine" trophies to composers Mikis Theodorakis of Greece and Hoagy Carmichael of the United States.

The awards are given each year to people who best express "a message of love," as decided by a committee from the city of the patron saint of lovers.

too clean to have experienced any of the hardships he is going through trying to kick the habit.

IT'S ONLY WHEN a former addict member gets up to speak that the newcomer knows, by the realism of the language used in describing his problems, that the other kid has really gone the whole route.

This local Narcotics Anonymous set was started five years ago by Edwards for teenagers. "Once they pass 20 they don't trust us anymore," he said. "It takes an addict to help an addict. That's why we try to get guys who have made it to continue our initial groundwork efforts. The kids can relate to each other, and the former addict has an image to live up to."

Edwards, a 30 year newspaper veteran, has seen a lot of kids go wrong, written a lot of stories about the results of their mistakes, and developed an understanding empathy.

A story he wrote for a local newspaper about a Palm Springs priest and his work in the field of narcotics rehabilitation got him started in Operation Judo, the master plan for Narcotics Anonymous.

Operation Judo, named after St. Jude, is for alcoholics, but the basic principles can be applied to breaking the drug habit.

"The need to know that there is someone who has made it after being as far down in the dregs of society as the user and climbed back is the program's primary function," Edwards said.

"For the addict to know that he can get unhooked is the most important anchor we can offer," he explained.

"THE NORMAL person never understands the drug users, like alcoholics, don't really want to live the way they do."

"There is always just enough reality in their daily lives to make them realize what they are having to do to support their habit."

"They continue their habit out of fear," Edwards added. Not fear of facing society again, but the all consuming fear of dying while they are trying to come back from the living dead.

There is no easy way to kick either habit at any age. They both are a gamble. The months of agony necessary to combat the chemical effects of a year or more of addiction are terrifying.

"For a habitual drug user of 13, and we see some, the prospect of withdrawal symptoms for as long as two years is defeating. The guilt they feel about what they have had to do to support their habit during their drug ways is another monster to face," Edwards said.

AT 25 LARRY walks with his head held high. Since he was 10, he has tried various drugs. For five years now he has been clean. He's now finishing the high school education he didn't before. A former addict helped him back and now he's part of the living world again, repaying his debt by helping others. How long he will stay clean, whether he will go back someday, no one has the answer. They don't keep records.

Narcotics Anonymous has about 50 different sets in the southern part of Los Angeles County. Help is offered on a one-to-one basis, one counselor and one addict. The groups are small and closely bound together by their common feeling of being outcasts from the so-called normal society. The kids find acceptance and the road back through others with the same background. Eventually they eliminate the non-addict adult counselor who has gotten them started through his volunteer time and money.

"When this happens we know the kids are on the right track. The rest will have to come from a power within themselves, and whatever form of religious guidance they can accept as honest. We never get involved in a sympathetic parent type role. These kids don't respect sympathy."

"No body was born an addict. They got that way on their own and they have to break it on their own. We're just there to try to help them get a better start," Edwards concluded.

The hippies are members of the Do It Now Foundation, a nonprofit educational and charitable organization with no political or religious ties. As a pilot project, they have been hired by the Board of Education in Paramount to act as consultants in assisting the community in its fight against the increasing drug problem.

For five weeks, they have worked in Paramount—surveying the drug problem; meeting with teachers, parents, students and community leaders; setting up a 24-hour crisis phone line; and training counselors. They will be in the community for four more weeks.

Russell Ball, principal of Paramount Senior High School, said the school district is paying $8,000 to the Do It Now Foundation, and that the money is well spent.

"LIKE ALMOST ALL OTHER high schools, we have a drug problem, he said. "Unlike many of them, we are trying to do something about it. The Do It Now Foundation people have held seminars with the teachers, answered questions for parents and students, worked toward getting hospitals in the area to set up beds for kids who have taken overdoses of drugs, and asked industry leaders to establish a community center for the kids. The foundation approach is another arrow in our quiver to use in the fight against drugs."

The foundation has been active as an underground organization for three years. It was formed by a group of ex-drug users and professional people.

"We are half establishment and half hip, but we see eye-to-eye," said Harry Richardson, a co-director of the foundation.

He explained that when foundation volunteers are not helping schools and community groups, they are manning a hot line for drug abusers in Hollywood.

"MOST OF OUR CALLS USED to be from people who had bad trips with acid (LSD) and speed (amphetamines). Now there has been a switch to reds (barbiturates)."

Nancy Gray, also a co-director for the foundation, pointed out that young people don't realize the danger of barbiturates. "Downers can be as addicting as heroin, and you suffer withdrawal symptoms," she said.

She added that the group's survey of hospitals in the Paramount area showed 60 to 70 barbiturate overdoses a month. "One mortuary in Paramount said it had 20 kids die of drug overdoses in the last two years," she said.

Richardson said the foundation does not condemn or condone the use of marijuana and other psychedelics. "We just tell the kids it's illegal and antisocial because the large majority of the population will reject you for using it. We don't have enough facts to make a decision on the effects of marijuana. What we are trying to do is take gut shots at the harder drugs."

"IN THE LAST SIX MONTHS, we have had a mass campaign emphasizing that "speed does kill." It was used by German and Japanese pilots during World War II bombing missions. It creates paranoia and fear."

"We got rock 'n' roll stars and people the kids listen to, such as Timothy Leary and Allen Ginsberg, to issue statements against speed, and we put their statements in a booklet, on a record and in radio spots."

To reach the kids in Paramount and other school districts, the foundation staff uses light shows, films, records and person to person contact.

"We have found the kids usually have heard the facts about drugs, they just don't believe them," said Mrs. Gray.

"It's the teachers and parents who need the information. The kids need to hear from their peers what the problems with drugs are. When we went into Paramount, we started the drug education program with the teachers and parents. We are hoping now that a dialogue between adults and young people can be established."

SHE TRACED THE BREAKDOWN in communication to the issue of marijuana. "The establishment told the kids that marijuana is a killer weed and will lead to heroin addiction. The kids try it and find the dire predictions are not true, so they no longer trust what the establishment says."

Mrs. Gray explained her theory on why the younger generation has turned to drugs. "The kids are not being involved in life and challenged. They feel they have no function in the family. In agricultural times, the kids helped the family on the farm. During the Depression, they went to work. Now, with the affluent family, the kids have no challenge. They feel impotent and alienated."

"Another problem, particularly in Paramount, is that the kids have no places to hang out without being told to move or picked up for loitering. They need a teen center. When we talked to some of the kids in Paramount, they told us they wanted a place where they could work on their cars. The girls wanted a place where they could sew and do creative projects."

SOME OF THE OTHER INFORMATION the staff gained from Paramount students and parents was more unsettling.

"Parents told me of the drug problem among elementary school children," Mrs. Gray said. "The kids play a game called grab bag. They take pills from their parents' medicine chest, put them into a bag and grab."

She explained that parents had a chance of reaching the young children, since they still obeyed adult authority, but the process was difficult with older children.

"We try to make the parents understand that if their kids are involved with drugs, they will usually come out of it," said Richardson.

"The kids may not be the same—their life style and values may have changed. But it doesn't mean the kids will be bad, just different."

RICHARDSON ADDED THAT THE foundation's goal in Paramount is to have an on-going antidrug program run by the community.

"The community response has been mindblowing, and we are getting calls for help from Lakewood as well," said Mrs. Richardson.

Richardson explained that the foundation has rejected offers of government and church aid in order to avoid being identified as an establishment group.

"We are self-supporting by our work and donations. Our trip is easy to understand. We've seen too many groovy people get messed up. Some of our friends have died."

NARCOTICS ANONYMOUS

There's Help for Young Drug Addicts

By ANNE HOWE
Staff Writer

Johnny Edwards, 45, listens intently as the teenage boy talks in halting phrases, slowing sipping a coke. "I'm trying to get unhooked," the boy says.

The boy with shoulder-length hair and the bespectacled man are members of Narcotics Anonymous.

The set, as the group is called, officially meets on week nights at the Paramount Methodist Church, but other, more intense sessions, take place in coffee shops, at midnight in sponsors' homes, and on street corners. When a kid needs help kicking the drug habit, he can't wait for a weekly meeting.

Meeting night procedures are similar to those originated by Alcoholics Anonymous. The small group of members sit around a table trying to identify their experiences with those of other members. They share the same problems and find help through some of the same solutions.

For the newcomer in the group, the regulars look too clean to have experienced any of the hardships he is going through trying to kick the habit.

IT'S ONLY WHEN a former addict member gets up to speak that the newcomer knows, by the realism of the language used in describing his problems, that the other kid has really gone the whole route.

This local Narcotics Anonymous set was started five years ago by Edwards for teenagers. "Once they pass 20 they don't trust us anymore," he said. "It takes an addict to help an addict. That's why we try to get guys who have made it to continue our initial groundwork efforts. The kids can relate to each other, and the former addict has an image to live up to."

Edwards, a 30 year newspaper veteran, has seen a lot of kids go wrong, written a lot of stories about the results of their mistakes, and developed an understanding empathy.

A story he wrote for a local newspaper about a Palm Springs priest and his work in the field of narcotics rehabilitation got him started in Operation Judo, the master plan for Narcotics Anonymous.

Operation Judo, named after St. Jude, is for alcoholics, but the basic principles can be applied to breaking the drug habit.

"The need to know that there is someone who has made it after being as far down in the dregs of society as the user and climbed back is the program's primary function," Edwards said.

"For the addict to know that he can get unhooked is the most important anchor we can offer," he explained.

"THE NORMAL person never understands the drug users, like alcoholics, don't really want to live the way they do."

"There is always just enough reality in their daily lives to make them realize what they are having to do to support their habit."

"They continue their habit out of fear," Edwards added. Not fear of facing society again, but the all consuming fear of dying while they are trying to come back from the living dead.

There is no easy way to kick either habit at any age. They both are a gamble. The months of agony necessary to combat the chemical effects of a year or more of addiction are terrifying.

"For a habitual drug user of 13, and we see some, the prospect of withdrawal symptoms for as long as two years is defeating. The guilt they feel about what they have had to do to support their habit during their drug ways is another monster to face," Edwards said.

Snowstorm Leaves Paris Powerless

PARIS (UPI) — A snowstorm blew down five miles of high tension wires in the Cherbourg area Saturday leaving some 200,000 residents without power, and laid a blanket of white over much of northern France, where gale force winds have wrought death and destruction for two days.

Police in Cherbourg said emergency measures were put into effect to insure electric power to hospitals and public facilities. Loudspeaker cars moved through the city broadcasting instructions on the use of gas fires for heat and cooking.

Electric company officials said they could not estimate how long it would take for power to be restored, since the damage was extensive.

AT 25 LARRY walks with his head held high. Since he was 10, he has tried various drugs. For five years now he has been clean. He's now finishing the high school education he didn't before. A former addict helped him back and now he's part of the living world again, repaying his debt by helping others. How long he will stay clean, whether he will go back someday, no one has the answer. They don't keep records.

Narcotics Anonymous has about 50 different sets in the southern part of Los Angeles County. Help is offered on a one-to-one basis, one counselor and one addict. The groups are small and closely bound together by their common feeling of being outcasts from the so-called normal society. The kids find acceptance and the road back through others with the same background. Eventually they eliminate the non-addict adult counselor who has gotten them started through his volunteer time and money.

"When this happens we know the kids are on the right track. The rest will have to come from a power within themselves, and whatever form of religious guidance they can accept as honest. We never get involved in a sympathetic parent type role. These kids don't respect sympathy."

"No body was born an addict. They got that way on their own and they have to break it on their own. We're just there to try to help them get a better start," Edwards concluded.

State Labor Group Opposed to Carswell

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The California Labor Federation, AFL-CIO, urged the state's two U.S. senators Friday to reject the nomination of Judge G. Harold Carswell to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Thomas L. Pitts, secretary-treasurer, said in a letter that Carswell's confirmation could undermine seriously "the prestige and functional efficiency of the court" and "cause millions of black Americans to lose faith in our democratic process."

Mayor Tells Off, Fines a Violator

NORWALK, Ohio (UPI) — Eighteen-year-old Tim H. Finch pleaded guilty Saturday to a minor traffic violation in mayor's court and became the first high school student in the court's history to pay both the fine and court costs of $17. Teen-agers normally are given a stern lecture and let off with a warning.

When asked how he pleaded to driving on the wrong side of a city street, Finch replied: "I guess, guilty." "You bet you're guilty," said Mayor Harold E. Finch, his father.

L.B. SHIP IN MINOR PACIFIC COLLISION

PEARL HARBOR — The fleet oiler Ponchatoula and the amphibious landing ship Point Defiance collided at sea 300 miles north of here Friday, the Navy reported Saturday.

Three crewmen of the Point Defiance were slightly injured but immediately returned to duty, the Navy said. Both ships received only minor damage.

The accident occurred in the early afternoon during refueling and the cause is being investigated, the Navy said. Both ships were expected to reach Pearl Harbor by Sunday.

The Point Defiance, based at Long Beach, was bound for the West Coast with 200 Marines who are returning from duty in Southeast Asia.

The Ponchatoula is based at Pearl Harbor.

The Navy didn't say what caused the delay in reporting the incident.

AFTERMATH OF CAMP PENDLETON BRAWL

15 Black Marines Arrested; Dissidents Hit

By VERN SMITH
Staff Writer

CAMP PENDLETON — Fifteen black Marines have been placed under arrest here in connection with Wednesday's wild barracks brawl, a Marine spokesman said Saturday.

The Marines were placed in confinement Friday after "evidence indicated these individuals were involved in the destruction of government property," the Marine base's Joint Public Affairs Office said.

Speaking in San Diego, Gen. Leonard P. Chapman, Marine Corps Commandant, blasted the dissident in-ranks Movement for a Democratic Military, saying it threatened "the destruction of the Marine Corps . . . and the defense of this country."

At least one Marine Corps spokesman has reportedly blamed the MDM — which advocates more civil rights for servicemen — with causing Wednesday's melee at Camp Pendleton, 35 miles north of San Diego.

A request to interview the Marines in confinement, or those injured, was turned down by Marine officers at the sprawling base. The spokesman said those Marines injured had been treated and released.

The 90-minute fight involving black and white Marines erupted Wednesday night when about three dozen black Marines reportedly stormed barracks in a staging area housing men headed for Vietnam.

The group, armed with broom handles, smashed windows, overturned desks, lockers and locker boxes. About 30 black and white Marines were treated for injuries at the base hospital.

A board of inquiry charged with finding the cause of the brawl was convened Thursday at Camp Pendleton by Maj. Gen. Donn J. Robertson, the base commander.

Their findings have not been disclosed, but Col. Ross E. Miner, commanding officer of the staging area involved, said in a statement he feels "the disturbance was planned in advance and is the result of outside influence."

Marine spokesmen at the base declined to elaborate on the "outside influence," but Gen. Chapman, speaking to the press at a recruit depot, said the MDM "runs exactly counter to the discipline necessary on the battlefield . . . to prevent loss of efficiency and loss of lives."

"We will, in accord with orders, stop anything that is detrimental to the good health, morale and discipline of the corps," he added.

At Camp Pendleton, a black military policeman who said he was on duty the night of the fracas, told the Independent Press-Telegram that base intelligence officers had knowledge of the black Marine's plan hours before the incident took place.

The M.P. said a former Marine, whose last name was Scott, was seen "passing out literature of a subversive nature" earlier Wednesday.

The M.P. then declined further comment on the advice of a companion, who warned him of possible reprisals from Camp Pendleton authorities.

The Marine spokesman said it is believed the black Marines were "intending to bring forth grievances of a minor nature during the fight."

Meanwhile, the Marine commandant admitted to reporters that "tension, 'racial and otherwise,' existed in the corps, but said "this is a reflection of our society . . . the corps is coping with the problems by facing up to them."

Other officials have said they have been aware for at least a month of dissatisfaction among black Marines at the base, but reported incidents of racial violence at Camp Pendleton date back as far as June of 1969.

Since then, there have been stories charging that blacks were "enslaving" whites at the Pendleton brig, and several incidents where blacks and whites clashed.

3 Jailed in Market Hold-up, Slaying

Three Orange County men were jailed Saturday on suspicion of murder and robbery after a Fountain Valley market owner was shot and killed in a stick-up.

The dead man was identified as James W. Oates, 13096 Blackbird St., Garden Grove, who was killed late Friday at the Tic Toc Market, 9457 Heil Ave.

In Orange County Jail are Gary Lee Johnson, 18, a transient; Herman Grant, 22, of 527 E. Walnut

St., Santa Ana, and Robert Clements, 21, of 14811 Alcester St., Westminster.

Fountain Valley police said the trio was captured in Garden Grove when officers pulled over their car for a routine check.

One man pulled a gun and fired twice and then fled on foot with another suspect, police said. The third man was arrested in the car.

They were also booked on suspicion of assault with intent to commit murder of a police officer.

U.S. Patrol Rips Bunker in Costly Fight

SAIGON (UPI) — A U.S. Army patrol moving behind tanks and other armored vehicles discovered a Communist bunker complex near the Cambodian border Saturday, touching off a three-hour battle that was one of the costliest of the year for the Americans.

The U.S. command said the American unit lost seven dead and 27 wounded. In addition, Communist rocket-propelled grenades from the complex destroyed one Sheridan tank, damaged another and demolished an armored reconnaissance vehicle.

The 34 total casualties in the fighting were the highest American losses in a single action since Jan. 6, killed and 59 wounded in an attack near Da Nang, when 13 Marines were last Thursday, nine more Marines were killed and five injured in another battle near Da Nang, the northern coastal city.

The fighting Saturday

occurred in a jungle area near South Vietnam's "Black Virgin" mountain, 62 miles northwest of Saigon and only a few miles from the Cambodian border.

The patrol was composed of soldiers from the 1st Air Cavalry Division and armored vehicles from the 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment.

The command said the Communist force, thought to be mostly North Vietnamese regulars, opened fire on the patrol with automatic weapons and rocket grenades.

Spokesmen said 31 bodies were found in Communist bunkers after the battle.

Earlier Saturday, Allied sources reported that Viet Cong saboteurs operating in Saigon are recruiting high school youths for terror attacks. Assassination squads also were reported to have infiltrated the capital city.

Air Raids Over Laos to be Cut

SAIGON (UPI) — U.S. fighter-bomber strikes in the secret air war over Laos will be cut by more than 10 per cent during the Phase II troop withdrawal, informed U.S. sources said Saturday.

The cut will come with removal from Southeast Asia of more than 50 F-4 Phantom jet fighter-bombers now based at Cam Ranh Bay, a reduction of about 17 per cent in the number of high performance aircraft the air force has available for strikes against the Ho Chi Minh Trail complex in Laos.

U.S. spokesmen decline to comment on American air strikes in Laos, but Air Force sources have said that types of first-line combat aircraft used against North Vietnamese targets before the bomb halt in November 1968, now are flying virtually all of their strikes in Laos.

Meat Held for Mercury Trace Tests

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tests last week of meat from seven Oregon beef cattle suspected of mercury poisoning showed "some mercury" but were not conclusive. Agriculture Department spokesmen said Friday.

Officials said they had sent for additional samples from the suspect carcasses, which were impounded Feb. 6 at four Portland, Ore., packing plants, in order to make further tests.

The carcasses were examined after a ranch hand reported they might contain mercury residues derived from feeding on grain treated with a fungicide.

Officials reported they had traced nearly all meat from the seven bulls, but conceded that up to 69 pounds of offal could not be accounted for.

They were also booked on suspicion of assault with intent to commit murder of a police officer.

U.S. Patrol Rips Bunker in Costly Fight

SAIGON (UPI) — A U.S. Army patrol moving behind tanks and other armored vehicles discovered a Communist bunker complex near the Cambodian border Saturday, touching off a three-hour battle that was one of the costliest of the year for the Americans.

The U.S. command said the American unit lost seven dead and 27 wounded. In addition, Communist rocket-propelled grenades from the complex destroyed one Sheridan tank, damaged another and demolished an armored reconnaissance vehicle.

The 34 total casualties in the fighting were the highest American losses in a single action since Jan. 6, killed and 59 wounded in an attack near Da Nang, when 13 Marines were last Thursday, nine more Marines were killed and five injured in another battle near Da Nang, the northern coastal city.

The fighting Saturday

occurred in a jungle area near South Vietnam's "Black Virgin" mountain, 62 miles northwest of Saigon and only a few miles from the Cambodian border. The patrol was composed of soldiers from the 1st Air Cavalry Division and armored vehicles from the 11th Armored Cavalry Regiment.

The command said the Communist force, thought to be mostly North Vietnamese regulars, opened fire on the patrol with automatic weapons and rocket grenades.

Spokesmen said 31 bodies were found in Communist bunkers after the battle.

Earlier Saturday, Allied sources reported that Viet Cong saboteurs operating in Saigon are recruiting high school youths for terror attacks. Assassination squads also were reported to have infiltrated the capital city.

Air Raids Over Laos to be Cut

SAIGON (UPI) — U.S. fighter-bomber strikes in the secret air war over Laos will be cut by more than 10 per cent during the Phase III troop withdrawal, informed U.S. sources said Saturday.

The cut will come with removal from Southeast Asia of more than 50 F-4 Phantom jet fighter-bombers now based at Cam Ranh Bay, a reduction of about 17 per cent in the number of high performance aircraft the air force has available for strikes against the Ho Chi Minh Trail complex in Laos.

U.S. spokesmen decline to comment on American air strikes in Laos, but Air Force sources have said that types of first-line combat aircraft used against North Vietnamese targets before the bomb halt in November 1968, now are flying virtually all of their strikes in Laos.

Meat Held for Mercury Trace Tests

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tests last week of meat from seven Oregon beef cattle suspected of mercury poisoning showed "some mercury" but were not conclusive. Agriculture Department spokesmen said Friday.

Officials said they had sent for additional samples from the suspect carcasses, which were impounded Feb. 6 at four Portland, Ore., packing plants, in order to make further tests.

The carcasses were examined after a ranch hand reported they might contain mercury residues derived from feeding on grain treated with a fungicide.

Officials reported they had traced nearly all meat from the seven bulls, but conceded that up to 69 pounds of offal could not be accounted for.

Contempt Sentences in Chicago

month and 18 days for Remond C. "Rennie" Davis, 29; one year, two months and 14 days for Thomas E. Hayden, 29, and eight months for Abbott H. "Abbie" Hoffman, 32.

Each told Judge Hoffman what he thought of him, but Davis probably reached the heights of vituperation with the words, "You are all that is old, ugly, repressive. Our generation is going to devour your kind."

A S. DELLINGER was led away, he shouted back to his companions, "Right on, beautiful people, black people, Vietnamese people, young people." Defendant Jerry C. Rubin, 31, raised his arm in a Nazi salute to Hoffman and shouted, "Heil Hitler."

Still waiting for sentencing, along with Kunstler and Weinglass, were defendants Rubin, John R. Froines, 30, and Lee Weiner, 30.

These five considered a quick flight to Los Angeles to attend a rally there Saturday night, but the jury, which began deliberations shortly after noon CST, did not recess until 10 p.m. and the judge's orders had barred defendants and their attorneys from leaving until the jury was locked up for the night.

At that hour, Kunstler announced that the flight would not be attempted, as the party would have only 30 minutes "turnaround" under the best conditions to attend the rally, at the University of California at Los Angeles. However, Dellinger's daughter, Natasha, and a member of the defense staff, Susan Hathaway, Libertyville, Ill., left for Los Angeles earlier in the evening.

In addition to the contempt sentences, each of the defendants faces sentences of up to 10 years and fines of $20,000 on the indictment under which they are charged — conspiring to cross state lines to incite a riot and using the facilities of interstate commerce to hatch such a conspiracy.

A NY CONVICTION is certain to be appealed, as are Hoffman's contempt sentences. The federal law under which the defendants were tried has never been tested in a major court case before and there are some legal experts who believe it could be found an unconstitutional violation of freedom of speech.

In his two-hour charge to the jury, Hoffman took pains to note that the right of free speech is "one of the most vital and precious liberties we have protected by the First Amendment."

Despite the personal opinions of the defendants which he expressed after the jurors were gone, he counseled them beforehand not to be influenced "by any personal antagonism you might feel for the defendants' dress, hair styles, courtroom demeanor, political beliefs or speech."

BUT HOFFMAN also told the jurors that the government, in seeking a conspiracy conviction, did not have to prove that the purposes of the conspiracy had been achieved, or that all the defendants knew all the plans of any alleged conspiracy, or even that all of the defendants knew each other before they came to Chicago.

Nor he said, does the constitution "protect speech that is calculated to induce an unlawful act."

All the government had to do, the judge said, was to prove that the defendants "tacitly came to an unlawful understanding."

The Remarkable New Lightweight Fabric That Gives Warmth In Winter . . . Cool Comfort in Summer

Years of search for a fabric that would provide year 'round comfort were rewarded when a particular breed of sheep who graze on the high, windswept plateaus of Tasmania were discovered. These sheep were blessed by Nature with an unusual fleece that kept them comfortable both in the blazing heat of the summers and the damp, penetrating cold of the winters of that far-off island.

There remained the problem of finding a way to spin this unique fleece fine enough and weave it to take advantage of its rare characteristics to give a shape-holding firmness—and yet have a finish that was luxurious to the touch and effortless to wear.

For over 3½ long years technical men worked diligently on the product until — just recently — they found the answer and named it WHISPER VERSE—a name which aptly describes the softness of its texture (very like the feel of fine cashmere) . . . its lightness of weight . . . it offers the wearer in the way it's woven to "breathe" for coolness in hot weather and insulate against the frigid cold.

Yank Immortalized by Queen Mary Carving

By JACK BALDWIN
Staff Writer

Wood carving was a very popular pastime among the 765,429 troops who rode the Queen Mary during World War II.

The warbound soldiers whittled away the weary hours by carving their name or initials in the teakwood stringer that caps the ship's rail. There were also many other places on the ship that suffered the incisions made by scalpel-sharp bayonets and highly honed pocket knives carried by the GIs. After her wartime duty as the "Gray Ghost," the Queen Mary, which had carried as many as 15,000 troops at a time, was returned to England and put into drydock at Southampton. For nearly a year 4,000 workmen swarmed over the ship, re-outfitting her as a transatlantic luxury liner.

THEY HOLYSTONED the pock marks from her decks and sanded away the thousands of carvings in her teakwood rail. In other places where carvings were found they were either sanded away or putted and painted over.

When the refurbishing job was done all the names and initials had been removed — all, that is, except two!

Through the ensuing years one set of initials carved in the deck faded away, a victim of heavy foot traffic.

Today, somewhere, if he is still alive, is a GI who has achieved a unique fame of which he knows not.

His name is N. Gibb. The name, cut in the bottom ladder (stairway) leading upward from the portside Sun Deck, is the only GI carving to be found aboard the ship.

THE AUTHORITY for such a claim is Joe Allen, who served aboard the Queen Mary for 24 years. He was the chief deck steward when the former luxury liner steamed into Long Beach on Dec. 9, 1967. He now is chief deck steward aboard the Queen Elizabeth II.

"This is the only one left. All others have been sanded away," Allen assured reporters.

Officials of the Museum of the Sea Aboard the Queen Mary acted quickly to salvage the unusual artifact for display in the Queen Mary Story section of the museum.

While N. Gibb, however he is, can now boast of a unique claim to fame, his fame will never quite match that of another much traveled World War GI named Kilroy.

Facts You Should Know About Diamonds

by Joe Stoltz
LAWSON'S JEWELERS
250 Pine Avenue
Downtown Long Beach Only A Mills Store

This is the concluding article on DIAMOND APPRAISALS. We have tried to show the many problems inherent in an appraisal of a diamond by a jeweler who did not sell you the diamond he is appraising.

The question really is "Why do you take your diamond for an appraisal at all?" A diamond is unique, no two diamonds are exactly alike. Diamonds, when mounted, will all be different. When you have enough confidence to buy your diamond from your jeweler, then why do you doubt him after the sale?

For many items of jewelry there is no price that can be set because the jewelry is unique, man-created. It is like a painting. If you like it, desire it, our advice is BUY and be happy. Forget the price you paid if you like what you bought. If you are unhappy because you no longer like the jewelry, then whatever you paid would be too much. Many people seek an appraisal for insurance purposes. The insurance companies have been steadily increasing the rate you pay for coverage on your jewelry. The latest rate is $72.60 per $1000.00 for 3 years. And the rate is going higher.

What good is your appraisal if the insurance company, after accepting your premium, refuses to pay you for the valuation stated in your policy?

The only way you could receive full payment is when your policy reads: "INSURED FOR AND VALUED AT $.....". Today, most insurance companies will not write such policies. Instead your jewelry is valued at _____, to be replaced at cash value.

For the purposes you may desire an appraisal, our advice is simply: HAVE THE JEWELER WHO SOLD YOU THE DIAMOND, APPRAISE IT!

Remember, if you are interested, please write or contact us at Lawson's Jewelers, 250 Pine Ave., Downtown Long Beach Only. A Mills Store.

POLICE BATTLE PICKETS OUTSIDE THE INDEPENDENT-JOURNAL IN SAN RAFAEL

700 DEMONSTRATORS BLOCK PUBLISHING

6 Hurt in Newspaper Strike Violence

SAN RAFAEL (UPI) — A crowd of 700 shouting, rock-throwing strikers and demonstrators prevented a suburban San Francisco Bay area newspaper from publishing Saturday.

Three policemen and three demonstrators were injured and 12 persons arrested at the Independent-Journal, a daily of 45,000 circulation.

Publisher Wishard Brown was grazed by a steel bolt hurled through a third-story window. Nearly every window in the newspaper plant was broken out, and the rear of the building splattered with red and blue paint. A company truck was set afire in the parking lot.

BROWN SAID the Saturday-edition would be produced and distributed on Sunday, when the Independent-Journal does not normally publish.

"At the request of the police and in order to allow the police to disperse the mob of pickets and other union sympathizers with a minimum of personal injury it was determined to take this course," he said.

"We regret . . . that collective bargaining with the unions in the Bay area has been reduced to such a dangerous and economically expensive exhibition. But the Independent-Journal will never allow unions to gain by such tactics of violence and intimidation what they cannot gain at the bargaining table."

Officer John Rosentangel, 54, of the San Rafael police department was the most seriously hurt. He suffered multiple fractures when clubbed in the face with a two-by-four, but was reported in good condition one of the demonstrators suffered a broken leg. All other injuries were minor.

Four of those arrested were accused of assaulting a police officer and two others were charged with carrying concealed weapons. The other six were accused of misdemeanors, including unlawful assembly and failure to disperse. Three of the suspects were deaf-mutes. Bails ranging from $125 to $6,250 were posted by union officials.

The other injured policemen were identified as patrolmen John Mandler and William Palamini.

THE MASS demonstration ended about 3 p.m. but the union said it would keep pickets at the plant all night. Police Lt. Jay Fletcher said police would remain all night also.

Fletcher said Local 21 of the San Francisco Typographical Union, which struck the newspaper Jan. 7, was orderly. He said most of the violence came from "outside agitators" including members of the Teamsters, Longshoremen and Seafarers unions. Fletcher said some were armed with chains and one with a claw hook.

The newspaper had been continuing to publish despite the strike. But the Teamsters Union, angered by a federal restraining order against picketing newspaper shipments on the San Francisco docks, helped call the massive demonstration.

An estimated 150 police from every community in Marin County, a suburban area across Golden Gate bridge from San Francisco, formed a ring around the building. The force included sheriff's officers, California Highway Patrolmen, and security forces from San Quentin state prison.

Nixon Widens Germ War Ban to Include Military 'Poisons'

New York Times Service

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. — President Nixon Saturday extended his ban on production and use of biological weapons to military toxins — poisons produced biologically but used as chemical warfare agents.

The White House characterized the order as "another significant step, which we are willing to take unilaterally, to bring about arms control and to increase the prospects of peace."

White House officials at the President's weekend retreat in Florida conceded, however, that the order was aimed at closing a loophole left open last Nov. 25, when Nixon renounced U.S. use of germ weapons but reserved the right to produce chemical, warfare agents for defensive purposes only.

"It was a slip-up," said one White House official.

THE PRESIDENT'S ORDER represented a victory for opponents of chemical and biological warfare, who had feared Nixon would be swayed by the military into permitting continued production and stockpiling of toxins.

The confusion over whether toxins had been included in the President's renunciation of germ weapons resulted from the fact that they are dead, but poisonous, products of bacteria.

Although they cannot be produced without first producing bacteria — which Nixon ruled out — the Pentagon was said to have sought to keep toxins in military arsenals on the ground they would be used in the same way as chemical agents.

Unlike other biological agents, toxins are not communicable from one individual to another, meaning that they would not have the potential for producing "global epidemics," which the President cited as the chief reason for eliminating germ weapons.

THE PENTAGON SOUGHT to retain toxins, but the State Department and the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency were said to have urged Nixon to ban them.

The diplomats reportedly feared continued production of toxins would undercut both the practical and propaganda effects of the President's decision to renounce germ warfare.

Nixon ordered an interdepartmental and National Security Committee study of the toxin issue. Two weeks ago he was presented with the result, a paper proposing three options:

(1.) Keeping toxins for retaliation against enemy attacks.

(2.) Giving up toxins now, but retaining the right to use them if research showed they could be produced chemically.

(3.) Ruling out their use altogether.

The President chose the third option.

"We are demonstrating we are serious about the arms control race. We are willing to take risks for peace," said a White House official who explained the decision to reporters.

New Off-Shore Dump Limit Urged

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — Gov. William T. Cahill, a sewerage sludge emergency just behind him, Saturday called for extending the distance for dumping such wastes to 100 miles off the New Jersey coast. The present limit is 12 miles.

He said the new and vastly extended limit could be accomplished either by agreement with disposal companies or congressional enactment. He said this should remain in effect for at least five years — the time it is expected to take to construct land based disposal facilities.

Cahill a week ago proclaimed a state of emergency and urgently requested that the White House authorize use of U.S. Coast Guard tugboats to pull barges at seven disposal plants in northern New Jersey where a tugboat strike had caused sludge wastes to build up to an emergency level.

President Nixon concurred and during the past week, U.S. Coast Guard tugs have been hauling sludge-laden barges out to sea where the waste has been deposited.

NEED SEEN FOR STRONGER BACK UP FORCE

New Look at Reserve and Guard Ordered

By FRED S. HOFFMAN
WASHINGTON (AP) — With the regular Army being cut back, Gen. William C. Westmoreland has told his top aides "it is time now to reorient our thinking" and strengthen the Reserves.

strength and capabilities of the active Army and a period wherein we must place increasing reliance on the capabilities of our Army Reserve components," the chief of staff said.

In a memo to the heads of Army staff agencies, Westmoreland said they will be required to make the Army National Guard and Reserve "full partners on our Army team" with material, personnel, and "improved recognition and cooperation."

He made clear he expects all of his key generals and their staffs to drop any attitude of noncooperation with the Reserves.

Reserve officers have complained the Regulars have given backup forces only reluctant support, often relegating the Guard and Reserve to second-class status.

Westmoreland's memorandum was circulated in late December. A copy has become available as new attention is being focused on the role of the Guard and Reserve in the U.S. defense structure after Vietnam.

Secretary of Defense Melvin R. Laird indicated recently an all-volunteer force — a major objective of the Nixon administration — will be possible only if there is a "large, up-to-date, modern, well-equipped Reserve and National Guard."

The Regular Army, along with the other services, is being reduced in strength as the United States withdraws gradually from Vietnam and heads into a period of probably disengagement from overseas defense commitments.

By next June 30, the Army is expected to be down to 1,239,000 men — a drop of about 273,000 from the high level two years earlier.

The Nixon administration has proposed spending about $2.5 billion on the Guard and Reserve in the coming fiscal year, maintaining their total strength at about 660,000 but improving weapons and equipment.

Democratic administrations also hoped to strengthen the Guard and Reserve, but the Vietnam war diverted much of the expensive gear which originally had been earmarked for the backup forces.

Controls on Wages, Prices Predicted

OLYMPIA, Wash. (UPI) — Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., who has called upon President Nixon to impose standby wage and price controls to curb inflation, said Saturday he thinks pressure for such a move is mounting.

Jackson, on a speech-making swing through his home state, said he thinks there is "a real possibility Congress will soon pass legislation to give the President such powers" until wage and price guidelines can be established.

JAIL OVERCROWDED

Indians Bite the Dust When They Get 'Shot'

GALLUP, N.M. (UPI) — Drunken Indians, expelled from the city jail because of overcrowded conditions, lay in the streets of Gallup Saturday, and the police chief said the "catastrophic" conditions would get worse.

The Gallup detention center, which normally takes in 200 or more drunks on each weekend night, was ordered by a federal court to admit no more than 60 persons because of overcrowded and unsanitary conditions.

As a result, residents of this "Indian capital of the world" were found lying in gutters and alleys early Saturday.

"THERE ARE more bars and places in Gallup to get liquor than any place else I have heard of, and bartenders sell drinks to people already drunk," said Dr. Shirley Witt, an Indian anthropologist who runs summer camps for Indian youths.

"What does Gallup expect?" she asked. "To continue exploiting Indians and never be called upon to even up the score? Life is not like that. Gallup has reaped the whirlwind. Gallup has richly deserved it."

Gallup, a town of 16,000 persons has at least 26 bars, its own bottling plant for inexpensive wine, and a jail now limited to 60 drunks.

Police Chief Manuel Gonzales said: "I imagine we are going to have some cases of exposure and lots of 'rollings'. And some of them are going to get run over."

WHEN THE order of U.S. District Judge Howard C. Bratton went into effect Friday at the request of the Navajo Legal Aid Service, 183 prisoners were released.

The problem could last as long as a year, until a new 250-prisoner center can be built, or until as some Indian leaders suggest rehabilitation replaces incarceration as a solution.

"Friday night was nothing compared with what we expect it could be," Dr. Michael Ogden, director of the Gallup Indian Medical Center, said.

The staff at the federal public health facility examined about 30 "extra" drunks brought to them by the police Friday night and, finding no medical reason for hospitalization, turned them back into the streets.

Building Slump Laid to Nixon

Meany, Haggerty Say Industry Used as 'Whipping Boy'

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — George Meany and other AFL-CIO leaders blamed President Nixon's anti-inflation policies Saturday for the layoffs of thousands of construction workers, and for hurting efforts to hire more Negroes.

"The construction boys are the whipping boys," said the 75-year-old Meany, president of the 13.6-million member labor federation.

"They're using this industry to cut off the economy," said President C. J. Haggerty of the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department, referring to Nixon's sharp cutbacks in federal construction.

HAGGERTY, speaking for 17 unions with a total of about 3.5 million members, said unemployment among construction workers has risen to 8 per cent, or some 400,000 men. The nation's over-all unemployment rate is 3.9 per cent.

Haggerty announced plans for a "summit" conference between union officials and the National Constructors Association, which handles $10 billion of construction a year.

The conference is designed to reduce strikes, put union contractors in a better competitive position, and attempt to prevent such incidents as two Florida construction site brawls last week, one over jurisdiction between two unions and the other in a union protest of the hiring of nonunion workers.

HE SAID the construction unions also will continue cooperating in voluntary programs to bring more Negroes and other minority group workers into union construction jobs, such as agreements reached recently in Chicago and Pittsburgh.

However, the AFL-CIO building trades leaders are miffed over the Labor Department's recent announcement of plans to extend the controversial Philadelphia plan to 18 other cities if voluntary minority hiring agreements are not reached.

The Philadelphia plan, which Meany says is a political tool that will prove of little value, requires contractors as part of a government contract to pledge to hire a certain number of Negroes or other minority workers.

Only one contract in Philadelphia has been signed containing the provision.

Florida Oil Slick Kills Birds, Threatens Fish

Associated Press

A barge specially designed to scoop up oil started cleaning up Florida's Tampa Bay Saturday after an 18-square-mile slick broke up into patches and threatened wildlife and waterfront properties.

The oil spilled into the bay Friday when the Greek tanker Delian Apollo ran aground in a ship channel and ruptured her hull in several places. The oil is owed by the Humble Oil Co.

Gov. Claude Kirk said "thousands of dollars in damage" had occurred and blamed the Port of Tampa for not having the proper equipment on hand.

Tampa Port Captain Anthony Figaro and the U.S. Coast Guard said most of the oil was still off shore.

Officials said the oil spillage had already taken the lives of an undetermined number of pelicans, ducks and other sea birds.

Education Institute Plan Told

Nixon Slated to Ask Congress to Create
U.S. Research Unit

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. (UPI) — President Nixon will ask Congress to create a national institute for education to direct research and experiments in human learning with the hope of improving America's school system, school administrators were told Saturday.

Dr. James E. Allen Jr., U. S. commissioner of education, said the institute would "concentrate the same degree of skill, attention and resources on educational research that the national institutes of health have brought to medical research."

AT THE opening session of the annual meeting of the American Association of School Administrators, Allen said Nixon also planned to seek establishment of a commission on school finance to help localities plan financing of future school needs.

The institute, he said, would be part of the Health, Education and Welfare Department and manned by a permanent staff of scholars in psychology, biology and the social sciences as well as education.

Among its duties would be experiments in "revolutionary staffing patterns" and "technologically assisted teaching" to find improvements that some day may involve "recasting of the entire educational system in the United States."

FELLOWSHIPS and traineeships would be offered to provide training in educational research for outstanding young scholars at the institute, Allen said.

ARMED

NORWICH, England (UPI) — Department store detective Pauline Colgate thought Lionel Downing was acting suspicious and grabbed him by the arm as he left the store where she worked.

The arm came off in her hand.

A court was told Downing used an artificial left arm to cover the fact that his real arm was holding a bagful of stolen goods under his overcoat.

INFILTRATES

BANBURY, England (UPI) — Alfred Reynolds was made up and dressed in women's clothes for an amateur vaudeville show when he slipped and dislocated his elbow.

When he woke up in the hospital later he found himself in the women's ward.

"I was frightened that things had got out of control," he said. "But then it was explained to me that there was no room in the men's ward and I was staying in the women's ward only a couple of hours."

HELMETACHE

LONDON (UPI) — Police, the monthly magazine of the British police force, reported a case in which a man was fined $24 for kicking a policeman on the head during a demonstration but $36 for damaging the policeman's helmet.

"To value the helmet more than the head inside is simply adding insult to injury," commented the magazine.

AMENDED

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A few weeks ago an employee at Commerce Department, which is undergoing an air conditioning installation, tore his pants on a piece of machinery standing in the corridor.

He put in a claim for $12 for mending. The deputy general counsel who handled the case finally decided it on Friday. He said no; the employee should have looked where he was going.

The deputy signed the rejection order, opened his door, stepped into the hall, and — perhaps because it was Friday the 13th — tore his pants on a piece of air conditioning machinery.

He walked back into the office and in some embarrassment notified his supervisor. The supervisor, when he stopped laughing, reversed the deputy's decision on the earlier $12 mending claim and granted the deputy's own claim for a $12 mending job.

39 Hijacked S. Korea Passengers Returned

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI) — Thirty-nine passengers of a hijacked South Korean airliner returned to loved ones Saturday after spending 65 days in detention in Communist North Korea. Twelve others, including the crew, remained in North Korea along with the plane.

The returning South Koreans, some crying and others singing their national anthem, arrived in Seoul at 7:50 p.m., two hours after their release at the truce village of Panmunjom.

The plane was commandeered last Dec. 11 while on a regular flight from Kangnung to Seoul. North Korea said the plane was flown to its territory by the pilot and copilot, who chose to defect. South Korea denied this, charging the plane was stolen and the people aboard it kidnapped.

The pilot and copilot and two stewardesses did not return and North Korea said other passengers firmly decided not to return to South Korea where the people are suffering from exploitation and oppression and poverty under the military fascist-terror rule of the U.S. imperialists and their stooges.

The returning group, consisting of 43 men and six women, arrived at Panmunjom at 4:44 p.m., and boarded buses for the trip to Seoul after brief turnover ceremonies.

BOLZANO, Italy (UPI) — An avalanche buried 13 Italian alpine soldiers Friday night, but a military patrol quickly rescued all of them, army officials said Saturday.

Luxury Car Owners' Policies 'Subsidized'

DETROIT (UPI) — Owners of low and moderate-priced cars may be subsidizing the insurance purchased by owners of luxury cars, thus pushing up the cost of insurance for everyone, Michigan Sen. Philip A. Hart said Saturday.

Each year American consumers spend $51 billion for auto repairs and auto insurance, a figure that would drop if insurance rates were structured to increase competition, Hart said.

"More importantly," Hart said, "premiums do not reflect differences in rates and costs of repairs among models in the same price range."

"If they did, the consumer might be tempted to buy the car which qualified for the lower rate, thus encouraging manufacturers to compete by manufacturing cars designed to cut repair costs."

Hart's Senate antitrust subcommittee has been taking testimony on auto repair costs for the past year.

HART ALSO said that his proposal for federal performance standards and a nationwide system of inspection centers would help reduce the cost of auto repairs. He pointed out that the consumer pays about $8 billion a year for repairs which were either improperly done or were not done at all.

"Considering that since 1964, the cost of auto repairs has risen 23.5 per cent and the cost of auto insurance is up 38.1 per cent, the effort to reduce these costs is an important part of the effort to control inflation," Hart said.

NORDEHEIM, Tex. (UPI) — Land that was leasing for $50 an acre a week ago leased for $400 an acre today after a major gas discovery was reported. Wildcatter William Herbert Hunt's discovery well reached 10,800 pounds of pressure Friday.

106 Biafrans Herded into House, Blown Up

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — An international observer team reported Saturday it had been told by village elders in fallen Biafra that federal Nigerian troops herded 106 civilians into a cinder-block house last Christmas Day, then blew it up. Survivors from the blast were shot, the report said.

It listed physical evidence of the alleged massacre near Afikpo, north-east of the final Biafran enclave.

The report also confirmed rape, looting and indiscipline at the war's end. It said: "Indiscipline hampered relief operations and restoration of law and order." But, it added, there was no evidence of genocide.

It was the strongest report yet issued by the observers, senior officers from Britain, Canada, Poland and Sweden who were invited here in September 1968 to investigate allegations of genocide. The government announced recently they are to leave by the end of February.

THE FEDERAL Defense Ministry issued a companion statement blaming the reported Amasari Afikpo massacre on Biafran terrorists. It said a full investigation was made.

The observers made two trips to Amasari. During the first, the report said, they "learned of an incident which took place on 25 December in which 70 people of one compound of Ndukwe village part of Amasari were killed and their homes destroyed — allegedly by federal troops."

On the second trip, they said, elders of the village gave this fuller account:

Federal soldiers surrounded the Ndukwe compound before anyone was up on Christmas morning. They started firing, setting huts ablaze. Those alive were herded into a cinder block house, shut inside and blown up with charges. Survivors were shot.

The report, quoting the elders, went on:

"The dead included all the men, women and children of the compound. The elders stated that the total number of dead was 106. The relatives of the dead came and took the bodies away for burial.

"THE TEAM was told by villagers that similar incidents had taken place in all villages of Amasari and in surrounding towns."

Observers reported they found no evidence of a battle, but that some compounds were burned and "all houses of the compound where the incident of 25 December allegedly took place were burned and some were destroyed."

They said one cinder block house was partly destroyed and there were two craters of two or three-foot diameter against a wall and there was a grave inside.

Observers noted the sector commander had told them of intensive terrorist activity by the Biafran organization of Freedom Fighters in the area. The observers quoted the commander as saying his troops had tracked the terrorists to Amasari and had sought them out and destroyed them, presumably before Christmas.

$ Million Hashish Seized

ANDOVER, Mass. (UPI) — Customs agents seized 600 pounds of hashish worth $1.2 million Saturday. They said it was the largest haul ever taken in the U.S. Three men were arrested.

The drug, a black resin taken from the flowering tops of the marijuana plant, was moulded into cakes about 8 inches wide and 4 inches long. It was packed in wax and flown in from India in 30 crates with fake bottoms, officials said.

"It looks like a candy bar, doesn't it?" said Willie Davis, a U.S. attorney involved in the arrest. The bars still contained a gold stamp from the Indian company processing the drug.

Agents said the hashish was loaded in false bottoms of 30 crates covered with sitars, stringed Indian musical instruments. It was shipped in on commercial air freight and sent to a warehouse owned by Afro Imports, Inc., of Andover.

Officials would not comment further on the details of the arrest.

The three men arrested were Norman Casas, 22, of Deerfield, N.H.; Anthony King, 32, of Cambridge, and Stephen T. Curwood, 22, of North Andover. They were arraigned before U.S. Commissioner Robert Popco.

FBI BAN CITED

Unions Hit Employers' Use of Lie Detectors

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A labor group Saturday urged a federal law to ban the use of polygraphs (lie detectors) by police, government agencies and employers.

"Unions have encountered instances in which management has utilized the polygraph to quiz employees on their union activities in violation of federal labor law," said the report by the AFL-CIO Maritime Trades Department.

"And the record is replete with instances in which, via the 'lie detector,' employees have been subject to inquisition on such subjects as personal finances, drinking habits, sexual activities, marital relations and even political beliefs, all of which are hardly job-related," said the report prepared by Edward J. Carrough, organizing director of the Sheet Metal Workers Union.

"THEY CLAIM they are 100 per cent reliable," Carrough said of polygraph firms. "We say they're unreliable," he said. "If they're not totally reliable, then they're useless."

The report said employers have a legitimate concern in trying to stop some $15 billion a year in "internal" thefts, but "labor insists this is a matter for the police to investigate — not the employer."

It said many government agencies, police departments and employers still use the so-called lie detectors even though FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover has said they don't detect lies and has stopped their use in his agency.

"In reply to your inquiries, the FBI has not used the polygraph for several years," the report said. Hoover told Carrough's labor committee.

THE REPORT said the FBI conducted 2,314 lie detector examinations in 1963, before a congressional subcommittee headed by Rep. John E. Moss, D-Calif., investigated the practice.

"It should be pointed out that the polygraph, often referred to as a 'lie detector,' is not in fact such a device," the report said. Hoover told the Moss subcommittee.

But Dr. Nelson A. Watson of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, asked by the labor committee where lie detectors are used by police, replied: "Probably in most major cities."

The Maritime Trades Department, representing 41 unions with a total of 7.5 million of the AFL-CIO's 13.6-million members, said the polygraph is an invasion of privacy and urged it be banned by state laws and by collective bargaining agreements until a federal law is enacted to bar its use.

The report said the polygraph, originally developed as a medical research tool to measure breathing, blood pressure and skin moisture, had developed into a multimillion-dollar business using largely untrained operators.

FBI BAN CITED

Unions Hit Employers' Use of Lie Detectors

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — A labor group Saturday urged a federal law to ban the use of polygraphs (lie detectors) by police, government agencies and employers.

"Unions have encountered instances in which management has utilized the polygraph to quiz employees on their union activities in violation of federal labor law," said the report by the AFL-CIO Maritime Trades Department.

"And the record is replete with instances in which, via the 'lie detector,' employees have been subject to inquisition on such subjects as personal finances, drinking habits, sexual activities, marital relations and even political beliefs, all of which are hardly job-related," said the report prepared by Edward J. Carlucci, organizing director of the Sheet Metal Workers Union.

"THEY CLAIM they are 100 per cent reliable," Carlucci said of polygraph firms. "We say they're unreliable," he said. "If they're not totally reliable, then they're useless."

cern in trying to stop some $15 billion a year in "internal" thefts, but "labor insists this is a matter for the police to investigate — not the employer."

It said many government agencies, police departments and employers still use the so-called lie detectors even though FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover has said they don't detect lies and has stopped their use in his agency.

"In reply to your inquiries, the FBI has not used the polygraph for several years," the report said Hoover told Carlucci's labor committee.

THE REPORT said the FBI conducted 2,314 lie detector examinations in 1963, before a congressional subcommittee headed by Rep. John E. Moss, D-Calif., investigated the practice.

"It should be pointed out that the polygraph, often referred to as a 'lie detector,' is not in fact such a device," the report said Hoover told the Moss subcommittee.

But Dr. Nelson A. Watson of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, asked by the labor committee where lie detectors are used by police, replied: "Probably in most major cities."

The Maritime Trades Department, representing 41 unions with a total of 7.5 million of the AFL-CIO's 13.6-million members, said the polygraph is an invasion of privacy and urged it be banned by state laws and by collective bargaining agreements until a federal law is enacted to bar its use.

The report said the polygraph, originally developed as a medical research tool to measure breathing, blood pressure and skin moisture, had developed into a multimillion-dollar business using largely untrained operators.

$100,000 Blaze Hits Downey Apartments

Fire destroyed 10 units of a three-story Downey apartment complex under construction Saturday night, causing an estimated $100,000 damage before it could be controlled.

Downey Fire Capt. Robert Gain said the blaze, which struck the partly completed, 53-unit complex at 10700 Downey Avenue about 6 p.m., did heavy damage to an additional five units before it was brought under control at 6:15 p.m.

Nine units and 40 firemen under Gain's command responded to the alarm, while firefighters from the Santa Fe Springs and South Gate departments manned the empty Downey fire stations.

Gain said an investigation of the fire scene is to be conducted today.

Train Hits Stalled Van; 8 Teens Die

MANTECA (UPI) — The speeding train bore down on the old truck, filled with teen-agers, which was stalled on the tracks. Troy Bunner, 17, the driver, kept trying over and over to get it started.

"In a split second it was all over," said Bruce Knoll, 16. Bunner and seven others were killed when the Western Pacific freight train smashed into the van and tore it to pieces Friday night.

Eight others, including Knoll, survived, some by jumping out a split second before the impact.

Knoll said the teen-agers were driving around in the van-type truck after a basketball game, picking up other youths who wanted a ride home.

At the crossing five miles west of Manteca, the truck stalled and Bunner could not get it started.

"I didn't see any flashing lights. I didn't see anything but the train. A couple of us managed to jump out. The rest of them had to stay."

The dead, besides Bunner, were Susan Pombo, 15, Joseph A. Church, 15, Sherrie Maddex, 16, Phyllis E. Handsome, Robin Moore, 16, and Donnie Zimmerman, 17, all from Tracy, and Lisa Whiteman, 13, of Santa Clara. Two others were injured.

The national transportation safety board sent a top investigator, John Gable, from Washington to review the tragedy.

"I jumped out and managed to haul two others out when the train hit," said Scott Houser, 18, of nearby Lathrop. "Eight others didn't make it."

Seven of the dead were from 1,800 pupil Tracy Joint Union High School which had just defeated Atwater High 76-48.

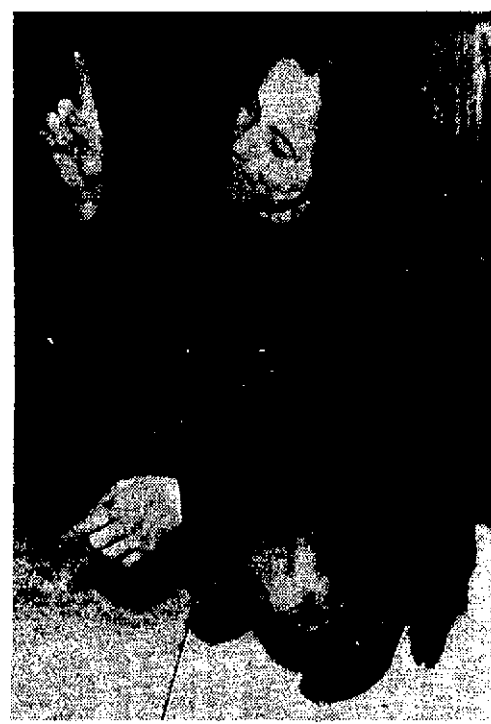

"Why was my life spared? There must be a reason," Houser said amidst the crying and confusion at San Joaquin County General Hospital.

"We are looking especially for what caused the break-up on the Van-type vehicle," said Henry Wakeland of the safety board.

Wakeland said a study was started last year to determine the feasibility of designing the front end of train locomotives "so they prime example of the kind of disintegration that occurs in these types of accidents," Wakeland said.

S.F. PLANS IN WORKS Motel-Like Hospital Facility Seen Cutting Costs by 85%

PALO ALTO (AP) — Hospitals operated like motels, chopping 85 per cent for all but the most serious care, are in the drawing board stage on the San Francisco Peninsula.

Dr. Russell Van Arsdale Lee, health insurance pioneer, said in an interview that charges would be cut from the current $100 per day hospital room rate to about $15 per day. Convalescent hospitals charge about $40 per day.

"SOMETHING HAS to be done about the current hospital cost spiral," he declared.

Lee, and early proponent of group medicine, said he plans to develop his Palo Alto Clinic, which he established in 1932, into a motel style prototype. There will be units for diagnostic study, four-day presurgery patients and 10-day postsurgery patients.

No firm construction schedule has been announced.

In a neighboring area, officials of El Camino Hospital, serving Mountain View, Los Altos, Los Altos Hills and Sunnyvale, say they are studying Lee's plan with a view to adoption and conversion.

"IT'S RIDICULOUS to shower expensive services and high charges on patients in for diagnosis or being prepared for surgery or recovering," said Lee, father of Dr. Philip R. Lee, chancellor of the University of California Medical Center, and Dr. R. Hewlett Lee, a Palo Alto surgeon.

"Especially during recovery," said, "it would not only save money but be an important part of therapy for patients to do things for themselves."

"The high-powered care should be reserved for times they're really sick, which account for only part of total hospitalization."

THE SITUATION is important "not only to patients but everyone because soaring costs are now pushing up health insurance rates to $30 and $40 per month per family even when part of the cost is provided by the employer," he said.

Lee likens his concept of rate-phase hospitals to motels, except there would be no maid service.

Patients would handle their own food trays, make their own beds and do other chores requiring them to be on their feet.

13 in 2 Motorcycle Gangs Arrested in Sweeping Raid

LAFAYETTE, La. (UPI) — Sheriff Carlo Lister Saturday booked on charges of possession of narcotics or concealed weapons 13 persons arrested Friday night in a raid on 100 members of the "Pagans" and "Banditos" motorcycle gangs.

The 11 men and two women were arrested when Sheriff Lister called out his entire force and raided a gathering of "black leather jacket types" congregated at a lounge two miles south of Youngsville, La. Youngsville is a town of 946 population 10 miles south of Lafayette.

While sifting through belongings of the Pagans, authorities found a scrap book. It contained east coast newspaper clippings about thefts of motorcycle gangs, gang fights, tortures, rapes and murders blamed on the Pagans.

Deputies also searched Saturday a van used by the club and said they found four jars of marijuana seed.

'VOTE DENIAL KEY TO UNREST'

SACRAMENTO (AP) — San Francisco State College President S. I. Hayakawa said denial of the vote to 18-year-olds is a major reason for unrest among the young.

Speaking at a fund raising dinner for Assemblyman Leroy Greene, D-Sacramento, Hayakawa said Friday night the denial prevents meaningful participation by the young until they reach their early 20s.

He told Sacramento County Democrats that young people today are more biologically mature than their counterparts of 60 years ago.

Hayakawa added that an increased recognition of social maturity in proportion to biological gains has been denied the young person.

The San Francisco educator also criticized an Assembly bill which proposes an apprenticeship program for teachers in the state. Calling it a "giant step backward," Hayakawa said the bill virtually proposed by Assemblyman abolishes teacher education as it is known in the state colleges.

Carswell Battle Grows: Anti-Rights Bias Hit; Constitutionalism Hailed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Both backers and opponents of Judge G. Harrold Carswell's nomination to the Supreme Court stepped up their campaigns Saturday leading up to resumption of confirmation hearings Monday.

Joseph L. Rauh Jr., counsel for the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights, worked on a case-by-case analysis of Carswell's opinions in the civil rights field during his 11 years on the Federal District and Circuit Court benches.

RAUH ALREADY has accused Carswell of anti-civil rights bias in 15 cases. He undertook the new review after Sen. Roman L. Hruska, R-Neb., issued his own analysis which he said showed Carswell was a "middle of the roader" in the field.

A Carswell supporter, Assistant Attorney General William H. Rehnquist, wrote the Washington Post in a letter published Saturday taking issue with the newspaper's editorials opposing the nomination on civil rights grounds.

Rehnquist, maintaining that Carswell's constitutional ideas should be weighted on the board range of his decisions, wrote:

"The extent to which his judicial decisions in civil rights cases fail to measure up the standards of the Post are traceable to an overall constitutional conservatism, rather than to any animus directed only at civil rights cases or civil rights litigants."

Meantime, Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., a Negro, wrote an open letter to Sen. Robert P. Griffin, R-Mich., urging rejection of the nomination.

The Senate Judiciary Committee, of which Griffin is a member, meets in closed session Monday to consider the nomination, and it was anticipated the panel would vote to recommend Senate confirmation.

AT THE SAME time, the committee also was expected to set a definite date for a vote on a constitutional amendment substituting direct election of presidents for the electoral college system. This and the Carswell appointment were tied together procedurally.

Griffin was a leader in the Senate's blocking of Abe Fortas for chief justice, and in the inquiry that led to Fortas' resignation from the court, creating the present vacancy.

State's Congressmen Rated Low on ACA Voting Record

By LOU CANNON
From Our National Bureau

WASHINGTON — California congressmen of both political parties fared poorly in the eyes of the Americans for Constitutional Action, a conservative organization that annually rates national legislators on their voting records.

While the liberal Americans for Democratic Action two weeks ago generally gave Democrats excellent marks and Republicans poor ones, many Californians from both parties flunked the session on the ACA scorecard.

Democrats, however, did notably worse in ACA eyes.

THIS WAS particularly true in the Senate, where Democrat Alan Cranston was one of 11 members of his party to record a zero ACA rating, the same as last year.

Cranston's Republican colleague, Sen. George Murphy, posted a 73 ACA score, compared to an 81 cumulative rating since he entered the Senate in 1965.

However, only four of California's 37 congressmen received an ACA score of more than 70. All Republicans, they were Reps. Del Clawson of Compton, 94; H. Allen Smith of Glendale, 93; Barry Goldwater Jr. of Burbank, 91 and Charles E. Wiggins of El Monte, 75.

EVEN SUCH a traditional conservative stalwart as Rep. James B. Utt of Santa Ana, who has a cumulative ACA rating of 95 since he came to Congress, scored only 67 in 1969.

Three Democratic congressmen, including U.S. senatorial candidate John V. Tunney of Riverside, were given zeros by ACA. The other two were James Corman of Van Nuys and Charles Wilson of Los Angeles.

Tunney's opponent in the Democratic senatorial primary, Rep. George E. Brown Jr. of Monterey Park, is generally considered more liberal than Tunney. But Brown's ACA score of 25 was the highest posted by any Democratic congressman in the state.

Most notably, from ACA's point of view, was the decline in ratings of every Republican congressman except Clawson and Goldwater.

Charles A. McManus, president of the organization, said he was "disappointed" that the ratings of many Republican congressmen had declined.

Yablonski Suspect Transfer Told

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Paul E. Gilly, 36, said to be the payoff man in the slaying of United Mine Workers official Joseph Yablonski, was held Saturday in the antiquated Stark County Jail in Canton, Ohio, 70 miles south of here, after being transferred from Cuyahoga County Jail here when it was learned his life was in danger.

Learning that Gilly was to be killed to prevent him involving others in the slaying of Yablonski, his wife and daughter New Year's Eve, the FBI ordered the transfer. It also was reported that unidentified men had planned to smuggle guns into the jail here.

U.S. Attorney Robert B. Krupansky, who called a federal grand jury to convene here Tuesday after a week's recess, declined comment on the transfer.

U.S. Marshal Norman E. Baker said Gilly was moved to Canton "to insure his personal safety and protection," but declined to elaborate.

FUN FURS TO FULL LENGTH MINK are for sale at bargain prices in the Classified Ads. Check now!

Handcuffed and chained, Gilly was transferred Friday in the custody of federal marshals. The trip from Cleveland to Canton usually takes only an hour and a half, but the marshals traveled a circuitous route requiring five hours. Krupansky would not indicate who financed the murders, except to say the grand jury was being convened "to look into the matter."

This cliché sentence, so often flung chastely to the world by pretty actresses who changed their minds and were almost immediately seen naked in pictures, came at me from 22-year-old Peter Strauss, who somewhat resembles Mayor Lindsay and has the craggy bonliness of Gregory Peck.

And so there it is — so many men have gone nude that now the boys are swearing they won't — and some of them will change their minds, too.

"There are so many people I would never want to see nude," the young man said. "I would die if I saw Ingrid Bergman nude. A woman of such dignity."

"Michelangelo's David nude is one of the most beautiful sculptures... but could you imagine Sir Laurence Olivier in the nude? Or Orson Welles?"

PETER STRAUSS, another one of those Northwestern actors, had the chance for nakedness with Candice Bergen in the film "Soldier Blue" but Candice put up a battle and they used a double for her, for one minor nude scene.

"And I think the sensational nudity vogue is going to wear itself out. It's one of those things that will pass."

"In our picture we give the appearance of nudity once with bare shoulders emerging from the blankets... but we're not."

Strauss, the son of Warren Strauss, a wine and spirits importer at Croton on Hudson, who attended Hackley School for Boys before Northwestern, said, "I don't want to be ultra-conservative about it but I've never seen a nude scene without stopping to think 'That's a nude scene.'"

"You say 'so that's what Liz Taylor looks like' and then you realize it's not Liz Taylor's rear but some double's — and you know that's not Mia Farrow naked but some double."

"To me the nudity in 'Romeo & Juliet' was not needed. You did not expect it. You know that nudity was not in vogue then."

THEN THERE'S the comedy of the rates paid for nude girls and nude guys who double.

"It depends on how much they show," Strauss said, "and what. The part of the anatomy shown is amount paid, and as the determinant of the areas get more intimate, the price goes up."

A serious young fellow, quite studious, Strauss had to double his work at Northwestern when he got

"discovered" in his graduation year. And so last March, 1969, he went into his first film, "Hull Hero," in Hollywood, two days after getting his diploma.

"It was very unsuccessful because it was about Vietnam and it was a cop-out."

Strauss says the violence in "Soldier Blue" is enormous and it worries him.

"How do you show violence on the screen so that people won't want it? Let's face it — Clint Eastwood kills beautifully. You sit and you say 'Great! He got him! You don't care.'"

He's 5-11½ and he wears his hair semi-long. His father has long hair, too. Not as long as his. "I saw a wonderful billboard sign in Ohio," he said. "Beautiful America. Get a Haircut!"

THE WEEKEND WIND-UP: Hugh Hefner's girl friend, Barbi Benton, gets the cover photo and nine pages inside in the next issue of Playboy... L.A.

WISH I'D SAID THAT: Fred Scheiner won't allow his kids to watch all that violence on TV. He figures they get enough of it in school.

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "Everyone is a self-made man, but only the successful men are apt to admit it."

EARL'S PEARLS: The large number of divorces indicates that America is the land of the free — and the steady rate of marriages shows it's still the home of the brave — Corant.

Tom Wood's book, "The Bright Side of Billy Wilder, Primarily," tells of the time the director listened to an actor sing, "You, Wilder told him, 'have Van Gogh's ear for music.' That's earl, brother."

MARTIN, LEWIS HOLD NO GRUDGES

Martin and Lewis Star as Second Generation Friends

HOLLYWOOD (M) — Martin and Lewis are rehearsing on a single stage — dancing in time and bursting into a song called "Let's Be Friends."

They hold no grudges. After all, the last time they met, Deana Martin was 1 year old and Gary Lewis was 5.

Now, with blessings from their famous fathers they're starring with other famous offspring in a Las Vegas-bound review titled "The Name's the Same."

WHEN THEY open at Caesar's Palace on Feb. 26, the marquee will be aglitter with such names as Maureen Reagan, daughter of California Gov. Ronald Reagan and actress Jane Wyman; Francesca Gabor Hilton, daughter of Zsa Zsa; Meredith MacLae, daughter of Gordon and Shiela; Patti Grayson, daughter of Kathryn; Michel Marcceau, son of Marcel, the French Mime; and Mickey Rooney Jr. and Ted Lewis Jr., the latter the nephew of the original.

EARL WILSON'S BROADWAY

Actor Thinks Nudity Vogue to Fade

NEW YORK — "You couldn't get me naked in a picture!"

A man was speaking.

This cliché sentence, so often flung chastely to the world by pretty actresses who changed their minds and were almost immediately seen naked in pictures, came at me from 22-year-old Peter Strauss, who somewhat resembles Mayor Lindsay and has the craggy boniness of Gregory Peck.

And so there it is — so many men have gone nude that now the boys are swearing they won't — and some of them will change their minds, too.

"There are so many people I would never want to see nude," the young man said. "I would die if I saw Ingrid Bergman nude. A woman of such dignity."

"Michelangelo's David nude is one of the most beautiful sculptures... but could you imagine Sir Laurence Olivier in the nude? Or Orson Welles?"

PETER STRAUSS, another one of those Northwestern actors, had the chance for nakedness with Candice Bergen in the film "Soldier Blue" but Candice put up a battle and they used a double for her, for one minor nude scene.

"And I think the sensational nudity vogue is going to wear itself out. It's one of those things that will pass."

"In our picture we give the appearance of nudity once with bare shoulders emerging from the blankets... but we're not."

Strauss, the son of Warren Strauss, a wine and spirits importer at Croton on Hudson, who attended Hackley School for Boys before Northwestern, said, "I don't want to be ultra-conservative about it but I've never seen a nude scene without stopping to think 'That's a nude scene.'"

"You say 'so that's what Liz Taylor looks like' and then you realize it's not Liz Taylor's rear but some double's — and you know that's not Mia Farrow naked but some double."

"To me the nudity in 'Romeo & Juliet' was not needed. You did not expect it. You know that nudity was not in vogue then."

THEN THERE'S the comedy of the rates paid for nude girls and nude guys who double.

"It depends on how much they show," Strauss said, "and what. The part of the anatomy shown is amount paid, and as the determinant of the areas get more intimate, the price goes up."

A serious young fellow, quite studious, Strauss had to double his work at Northwestern when he got

"discovered" in his graduation year. And so last March, 1969, he went into his first film, "Hail Hero," in Hollywood, two days after getting his diploma.

"It was very unsuccessful because it was about Vietnam and it was a cop-out."

Strauss says the violence in "Soldier Blue" is enormous and it worries him.

"How do you show violence on the screen so that people won't want it? Let's face it — Clint Eastwood kills beautifully. You sit and you say 'Great! He got him! You don't care.'"

He's 5-11½ and he wears his hair semi-long. His father has long hair, too. Not as long as his. "I saw a wonderful billboard sign in Ohio," he said. "Beautiful America. Get a Haircut!"

THE WEEKEND WIND-UP: Hugh Hefner's girl friend, Barbi Benton, gets the cover photo and nine pages inside in the next issue of Playboy... L.A.

REMEMBERED QUOTE: "Everyone is a self-made man, but only the successful men are apt to admit it."

EARL'S PEARLS: The large number of divorces indicates that America is the land of the free — and the steady rate of marriages shows it's still the home of the brave — Corbett.

Superb Playing at CSLB

By DANIEL CARIAGA
Music Critic

The Beethoven year continues:

Henri Temianka and Julian Musafia, those popular performer-professors at Cal State, Long Beach, began their three-concert presentation of the 10 sonatas for violin and piano, Friday night in CSLB's Little Theater. Both for the nature of the project and the distinguished character of the participants, the hall should have been full. Sad to say, it was not.

And those who were there — half a house? — heard some superb playing and some authoritative Beethoven.

THIS FIRST event in the series, which continues next Friday, and concludes February 27, offered four sonatas: the D Major, Opus 12, no. 1; the A minor, Opus 23; the A Major, Opus 12, no. 2; and the C minor, Opus 30, no. 2. One might have argued with the placement of the A minor-major sonatas (for all their differences, they are too much alike to be heard side-by-side), but not with the manner of their execution.

Nor could the rest of the program construction be faulted. With Beethoven series, a good place to begin is usually at number one; here, Number One, though it was the least perfectly realized ensemble performance of the evening, and sounded just a bit dutiful, belonged where it was. C minor, of course, is Beethoven's faded key-signature (in his career, second in importance only to the mystical D-Major), and the Seventh Sonata is serious business, as well as a natural climax to this first program.

Temianka-Musafia gave it its due, in terms of long-lined elegance and telling details, delivering the conflicts of the outer movements in addition to the songfulness of the Adagio. If the Scherzo was irascible rather than half-smiling (as we always thought), the point is well taken.

THE A MAJOR Sonata received the same kind of linear projection, if, again, less than the full measure of playfulness its fast movements seem to ask. Since this present series represents the first extended partnership between these performers, perhaps it is too early to expect deeply relaxed collaboration.

A note about CSLB's eternal parking problem: since these three events are being given on Fridays, no lack of parking spaces exists. However, because of construction in the lot nearest Seventh Street (the elegant and virgin Grotian-Steinweg that Musafia plays had to be carried in by hands!), the most convenient parking may be in the lots north of Little Theater, off East Campus Road.

Appreciation Dinner Set for Bonelli

Community leaders of Artesia, Cerritos and La Mirada will honor Supervisor Frank G. Bonelli at an appreciation dinner at Candlewood Country Club, 14000 Telegraph Road, Whittier, Thursday at 7 p.m.

Master of ceremonies at the salute to the county leader will be Dr. Samuel Sutherland, president of Biola College in La Mirada. Arrangements for the event are being made by the mayors of the three cities. Approximately 250 are expected to attend.

Bonelli, who was first named supervisor in June, 1958, served as Huntington Park councilman for ten years, 52nd District assemblyman for five years and during his tenure as a supervisor served as chairman of the board four terms.

Chamber Progress
Congress Slated

Long Beach Chamber of Commerce's 1970 Congress for Community Progress will be held March 5 at the Elks Lodge, 4101 E. Willow St., on the theme "Challenges of the 70s".

This year's congress will follow a new format designed to help participants see the local community more clearly in the light of regional and national trends and conditions, and to contribute to open discussion on topics of interest, said Henry H. Clock, planning committee chairman.

The format will feature a keynote address by City Manager John Mansell, talks by four urban affairs authorities who will then lead simultaneous "break-out" discussion groups, and a wrap-up by Don Muchmore, senior vice president of California Federal Savings and Loan Association and board chairman of Opinion Research of California.

The discussion leaders and topics for their groups will be: William W. Broom, editor of The Independent, Press-Telegram, "Mobility of Goods and People;" Don Gill, community affairs vice president of the Chamber, "Quality of Life;" Ernest Mayer Jr., city planning director, "City Development;" and Dr. Vern Hinze, associate superintendent of Long Beach Unified School District, "Education."

Clock said registration will begin at 8 a.m., with opening session at 8:30 and adjournment promptly at 8 a.m. With a reduced registration fee of $6 per person and $3 for students this year, the committee hopes to exceed last year's attendance of nearly 400.

Twice Doomed Killer

FRESNO (UPI) — Herman Y. Risenhoover, twice before sentenced to the gas chamber, Friday was given life in prison for a 1962 slaying.

A MAN'S WORLD?
Blonde's the Boss of Bank in Cerritos

By ANNE HOWE
Staff Writer

Skirts are everyday wearing apparel for the manager of the new Cerritos branch of the Bank of America — and it's not just a new fad.

Top boss of the bank is Mrs. Ruth DeWitt, a blue-eyed blonde from Georgia.

"I got into the banking business by accident. I took a temporary job as teller when I first came to California and got interested in what I was doing," Mrs. DeWitt said.

"First thing you know I was taking a couple of night classes to learn more about the banking business and now 18 years later here I am," she said.

Mrs. DeWitt, who lives in Long Beach with her husband and two teenagers, is the second woman in the southeast area of the county to be named a bank manager in the past three years.

"Perhaps even bankers are beginning to realize that women can do something beside bake a cake," she said.

Customers are surprised when they meet the new manager, and some even suspicious, but eventually Mrs. DeWitt's southern charm and banking know-how win them over.

Mrs. DeWitt's two teenagers are very impressed with their mom, especially by all that money that surrounds her.

Billboards Used in Fight Against Drug Abuse

By CHUCK CHEATHAM
Staff Writer

Billboards have been pressed in service in Long Beach's war against narcotics, Chief of Police William J. Mooney said today in calling attention to four strategically located boards in this city.

Chief Mooney said the locations were furnished by the Foster & Kleiser advertising company and the slogans on the billboards were the "brain children" of the narcotic division headed by Lt. James E. Miller.

The boards are at the East Second St. bridge in Belmont Shore, 31st St. and Long Beach Blvd., the Long Beach Freeway and San Diego Freeway interchange and Second St. and Claremont Ave. In addition there is a huge poster in the main lobby of the Public Service Bldg., 400 W. Broadway.

Slogans on the boards include "Pot Heads become Blockheads," "Don't mess with your mind. Keep off the 'Grass,'" "Drugs make Jack a dull boy," and "Drugs for losers' not 'leaders'."

Each billboard also carries the message "Support Your Local Law Enforcement Agency." Chief Mooney said Ross Barrett, president of Foster & Kleiser, has also furnished the police department with miniature billboards carrying the same messages and these will be placed in places of business to further the battle against drugs.

JUNIOR LEAGUERS

Sale is Success

Shoes, ships and sealing wax are among the thousands of items for bargain-hunters at the 18th annual Junior League rummage sale today from noon to 4 p.m. at the Long Beach Arena.

The sale began Saturday, and several items—including a 16-foot Sandpiper sailboat, pool table, barber's chair and string of pearls were auctioned. All items today will be half-price.

The scene at Saturday's sale looked like Macy's bargain basement, with stocks comparable to a large department store. There are sections for jewelry, furniture, toys, housewares, appliances and boutique items.

BARGAIN-HUNTERS can find shoelaces for a penny, dresses for $1 and $2, and a toilet from the Queen Mary, adorned with artificial flowers, for $50.

Much of the merchandise came from the closets and storerooms of Junior Leaguers. Some was made by members.

"Almost all the members set aside a closet just for rummage. It is a 365-day project. We also contact merchants in the area, and this year they donated $15,000 worth of merchandise," said Susan Bell, sale chairman.

All proceeds will go toward the Junior League's $35,500 philanthropic fund.

And McQueen — or was it Newman? — was supposed to have been irked at the phone co. for some reason and published the number in a big ad. in the newspapers so anybody could use it for free phone calls.

That's the story, which isn't true, that has had crafty people making fraudulently charged phone calls for two years or so and just recently stirred up a flurry of calls and inquiry in Long Beach.

THE thing started around Christmas, 1967. The credit card code number was passed across the country, in one way or another, and the phone companies have had thousands of calls which were charged, or attempts were made to charge, to this number.

It's still going on, although the credit card code number has been retired and phone operators over the country have long since been instructed to take no calls charged to it. Once in a while a call still slips through.

Phone company operatives now attempt to track down all calls charged to the number. One area phone official said that misdemeanor charges can be pressed against some one who uses a credit card number not assigned to him. If he knows it's illegal when he does it, a felony complaint may be filed, according to this source.

Anyway, the scoop is that if you hear there's a credit card number that can be used for free long distance calls, you'll know it all started with a crazy bit of fiction and attempts to cash in on it will be illegal if not risky.

Some people, who thought they had gotten away with such calls, have been surprised to find them charged on their regular phone bills. As for that miracle credit card code number — it never belonged to McQueen or Newman (or to Hubert Humphrey as was reported at the time of the Chicago Demo convention.) Somebody simply invented it but made it look bona-fide enough to fool a lot of operators until the word got around.

SUPERIOR Judge Alfred Gitelson, who handed down the controversial desegregation decision re L.A. schools, was appointed to the bench by the then Gov. Goodwin J. Knight in 1957.

He has been in the news frequently since then. In 1951 he and Knight, law partners, formed an investment firm, the K and G Co. In 1957 it became involved in a row between water companies in the Rossmore area, where K and G had acquired a big piece of land for subdivision. It was charged in a Senate hearing that K and G, along with others, was given water service valued at $1,500,000 after a water company was handed a huge franchise. Knight denied he was personally involved, having disposed of his interest in K and G.

Later K and G, with Gitelson still in it, was involved in a controversy over an alleged illegal loan to a cemetery co. In 1962 Gitelson ruled off the ballot an anti-poker bill. In 1967, the Judge proposed an order limiting information police and prosecutors could give to newsmen in criminal cases, a drastic scheme later upset in an appeal court.

The gag rule was sought by the American Civil Liberties Union, which also filed the desegregation suit against L.A. that brought on the current excitement over another Gitelson ruling.

Dave McEachen, chairman of the Miss Welcome to Long Beach Committee, says contestants must be Long Beach residents, single and between 18 and 27.

He says residency means living in the city for six months prior to Feb. 27 — the deadline for applications. Cutoff time for applications is 5 p.m. on that day.

Candidates at Long Beach City or State College who live in a dorm or sorority house are eligible if they've been there for the entire school year.

All contestants will be feted at a tea to be held at the home of Long Beach businessman Conrad Escalante, 852 E. Ocean Blvd., March 1.

The contest semi-finals will be judged at the Pacific Coast Club, Saturday,

Storm Drain Bids Waited

From Our L.A. Bureau

Contractors bids will be opened Friday for construction of storm drain facilities in the Carson area, with an estimated cost of $700,000.

About a mile of conduit will be laid in rights of way near Figueroa, Grant, Denny and Main Streets, Frigate Avenue and Lomita Boulevard.

Work will start in about a month, and will need about eight more months for completion, officials said.

City Sets 'Progress Congress' March 5

The 19th annual Long Beach Congress for Community Progress kicks off March 5 at the Elks Lodge with the theme: Challenges of the 70s.

Top national authorities on each of the subjects are being sought to make presentations, says Henry H. Clock, congress chairman.

He says there will also be open sessions to give Long Beach citizens a chance to air matters of individual interest and concern.

THE CONGRESS is sponsored by the Long Beach Chamber of Commerce and is designed to increase citizen understanding of the problems and opportunities in the Long Beach market area.

Members of the 1970 congress planning committee are: Mrs. Callie Becker, assistant college librarian, California State College at Long Beach; James G. Craig, Jr., vice president, M. S. Walker and Co.; Councilman Paul R. Deats; Don G. Gill; Dr. Vernon Hinz, associate superintendent, Long Beach Unified School District; M. ## L.B. WILL HONOR PIONEER JAPANESE

About 25 pioneer Japanese immigrants — all octogenarians — will be honored for their trailblazing efforts at a colorful ceremony in Long Beach today.

The first generation immigrants — known as Issei — will be given commemorative medallions by the Long Beach Harbor District Chapter of the Japanese American Citizens League.

Councilman Wayne C. Sharp and Ailine Kumagee (Miss Harbor), will present the awards.

The ceremony at the Harbor Community Center, 1766 Seabright Ave. starts at 4:30 p.m. and will feature Shugin (classical Japanese song), classical dancing and Koto, a Japanese harp number.

Charles Yata, president of the local JACL chapter, says special awards will be made to the oldest pioneer present and to the one with the most grandchildren.

He says there are about 60 Issei pioneers in Long Beach but many will not be able to attend because of ill health and other reasons.

JACL members will however make special trips to the homes of those unable to attend so that all the pioneers in the area will receive the medallions.

SHORT OF GOAL Free Clinic Drive Nets Rent Funds

By TOM WILLMAN
Staff Writer

Falling short of a $2,000 goal, but "with enough money to pay the rent," the Long Beach Free Clinic ended a marathon radio fund drive early today.

"We were hoping for $2,000—enough to meet a typical month's expenses—but it doesn't look like we've got it," said Ron Lofstrom, director of the clinic at 1043 Pine Ave.

Volunteer personnel at the free medical facility worked around the clock, from 6 a.m. Saturday to 6 a.m. today, answering the requests of callers to Long Beach FM station KNAC in return for pledged donations.

At the half-way point of "Radio Free Clinic," $320 had been pledged over the phone towards helping the clinic escape from financial troubles that left them with a $9-bank account at the close of January.

"We expect about 90 per cent of the pledges to be paid, though," said the clinic's executive secretary, Linda Munson. "Out of the first $300 pledged, we've already received more than $100."

According to Lofstrom, the clinic's financial worries were renewed last week when the United Way, Inc., notified them that a $500-per-month grant for five months had expired and would not be renewed.

Nixon clears the air over smog control

PRESIDENT NIXON, in his first legislative message to Congress of the new year, has thrown the whole weight of the presidency behind the movement to clean our air and purify our water.

It is a good message, one that points the way to fulfilling his State of the Union promise to make the '70s the decade for improvement of our environment.

There are two aspects of the communication which we think deserve special attention. First, it is clear that President Nixon, who has long been an advocate of state and local control, has decided to make the federal government the architect of the antipollution effort and, ultimately, its enforcement arm as well.

SECONDLY, HE intends that federal standards for automobile exhausts be stronger in 1975 than California's present regulations. This is indeed laudable. There was a detail here, however, which disappointed us, but first let's look at this question of the federal government as chief architect.

It will assume this role most especially in the field of air pollution. Under the present inconclusive law, the clean air act of 1967, some states are more permissive than others and some have no regulations at all. Such a condition places industries in "hard line" states at a competitive disadvantage.

Accordingly, said the President, it is time for nationwide standards. Under the President's proposal, the states would be given one year to provide abatement plans meeting federal standards and to provide for enforcement. The secretary of health, education and welfare would begin inquiries if a state proved negligent, inquiries that could lead to court action.

We think the proposal merits adoption. We are only sorry there is so much lost time — such as the year for abatement plans to be drawn.

WITH RESPECT to auto exhaust controls, the President said he would ask for legislation requiring that representative samples of actual production vehicles be tested throughout the model year — yet he gave no indication who would do the testing or how extensive it would be.

At present in California auto manufacturers submit data and the state studies these and grants or refuses a certificate of compliance. On the federal level, tests are made on prototype vehicles before they go into production.

Neither of these methods has proven satisfactory and it seems to us this question of testing should be taken out of the vague area in which it's been permitted to linger.

The National Air Pollution Administration and concerned members of Congress should devise a tough law providing a pervasive, fool-proof means of testing both new and used cars. This is a vital matter in our country where auto emissions are laying a blanket of gray over us each day.

Why trouble-makers linger in college

EVERY TEN YEARS since the turn of the century, the average age for the onset of menstruation for American girls has decreased by four months. In the 60 years since 1910, the menstrual age has been lowered by two years. A 14-year-old girl today is biologically as mature as the 16-year-old of 1910. Maturity among boys has been accelerating at the same rate. All this can no doubt be accounted for by the high health and nutritional standards this nation has enjoyed over these years.

Biological maturity is coming earlier, but in those 60 years social maturity has been getting later and later. In 1910 a boy was at liberty to quit school and go to work at 14. Grade school was all that was expected of most people. A minority went to high school. A tiny minority of that minority went to college. The rest were part of the world of adult work, in field or farm or factory.

Today social maturity continues to come later despite earlier physical maturity. Almost all young men and women are under pressure to go to college, and if they're lucky they will graduate at 22. Young men who go into the skilled trades as plumbers or carpenters fare little better; they face apprenticeships in many unions of four to seven years.

A MAIN SOURCE of college problems is the fact that hundreds of thousands who have no great desire for high education are in college simply because it is expected of them. Sexually and physically mature since they were 14 or 15, they mark time awaiting an encounter with the life outside of school.

Most college students, especially those who know what they want to make of themselves, are not marking time. They are eagerly pushing on towards degrees in engineering or agriculture or literature or biology. They are not a problem. They are the delight of their teachers — and their parents.

But thousands are marking time and marking time, majoring in English one year, switching to sociology the next, then changing to art or drama! They are young men and women still in search of an identity. Most of them are bored with their purposeless existence at the same time as they are too unsure of themselves to decide on a purpose. Although dissatisfied with college, they cannot make up their minds to leave it. It's from this group that troubles come.

They drop out of classes, although continuing to hang around the fringes of the campus. Driven by their internal emptiness, some of them turn on with drugs. Many take up revolutionary ideas and plaster their walls with portraits of Mao Tse Tung and Che Guevara. From this point it is but a short step to attacking the university, occupying buildings, perpetrating acts of senseless violence, destroying research files and libraries and computers, thereby endowing, they believe, their lives with heroic meaning.

PLEASE UNDERSTAND — I am not talking about all students. I am talking only about the extreme manifestations of a malaise that to some degree troubles a whole generation. One wonders what can be done to relieve this condition — one that is not so much the result of the failure of parents (I refuse to join in the chorus of those who blame everything that's wrong with the younger generation on Dr. Spock) as it is the result of the incredible success of our economic system in making secure the lives of the middle class.

Under conditions of scarcity, the struggle for survival absorbs most of one's energies, so that one doesn't ask lofty philosophical and ethical questions about the meaning of life. These unasked questions come to the fore in a time of plenty. There is no answering these questions in the abstract. As impatient and militant students often tell us, the answers can only be found in action and involvement.

So action and involvement are what they want most of all, in order to experience a sense of maturity. This is why they want to change the world rather than study it first to discover what needs changing and how it can be changed because they will not study it, they have no changes to suggest beyond what are vaguely suggested in such meaningless and sweeping slogans as "fight racism" and "smash the pig power structure." The classic statement of the intellectual vacuity of the New Left was made by Mark Rudd when he said, "First we'll have the revolution, then we'll find out what for."

That's what happens when you have physical maturity without social maturity. It is hard not to sympathize with the young people's craving for the responsibilities of maturity. But it is even harder to go along with their conviction that American foreign policy is something that can be worked out on a guitar.

'Ol' fishing hole

EDITOR:

In reference to your article "Ol' fishing hole" ought to be saved. Thank you, you have restored our faith.

We have enjoyed the "ol' fishing hole" by the L.B. Yacht Club for the last year and a half. Granted there may be many other fishing spots that are more productive but since we have a small child, our use of such areas is limited. The fishing hole fitted our needs perfectly, as it allowed us to park our camper right at hand, bed our youngster down, and enjoy fishing. Many families with small children used the area as well as teenagers, and senior citizens. It really seems a shame to close the area, when the people there, men, women, and children, are occupied in a healthy sport.

We were pretty angry when we heard the area was to be closed and the reasons, but we, as others, figured there was no way to fight the influence surrounding the area. You have given us a moral uplift by standing up for our side.

In the time that we have been fishing there, we have seen many people try to clean up the place, but the trash situation was terrible. For months there was no trash bin at all, and then when they finally put a trash bin there, we know for certain that it was over three weeks before it was emptied, and of course, it was pretty foul by then. Most of the people did try to keep it clean, though.

Tides of discrimination

EDITOR:

While we hear so much talk about the need to end discrimination, it reminds me about my trip around the world in 1963. At that time I found discrimination in all the lands.

In India it was the light-skinned against the darker skinned. In Tel Aviv it was the more cultured European Jew over the Asian Jew, and in Istanbul it was against the beggar. I could go on and on.

While nothing is wrong in wanting to end discrimination, it is dangerously wrong to try to end it by force, blackmail or laws. Discrimination comes in many forms to all of us each day. It involves people's minds and to end it is to enslave man for you must tell him how to think. From the time man is able to think until the day he dies, he will discriminate. It is a way of life and even slavery will not end it. While many humanitarians are good people in trying to end it, they are but tools on the road to total enslavement for us all.

Water and beer

EDITOR:

I was incensed at a recent Tedd Thomey Table Talk column. In fact, I could hardly believe what I read, that he was applauding a restaurant owner for practically trying to force college students to drink beer. He expressed himself as being heartily in favor of restaurant people who showed that kind of "little extra imagination." You should have been applauding the college boys instead, who chose to drink water rather than beer. The "extra imagination" that you applauded was when you noted that "the Hammons were forced to take drastic action. One night Poor Richard notified the kids that water would cost 50 cents a glass."

I think Poor Richard should lose his restaurant license for trying to force young people to drink beer.

Governor rapped on his side of aisle

From Our State Bureau

SACRAMENTO — Politicians pour forth so many words that it's not at all surprising that sometimes those words convey meanings not intended by the users.

Long Beach Sen. George Deukmejian, for example, is having a difficult time making his meaning clear about the record of the incumbent state attorney general, Democrat Tom Lynch.

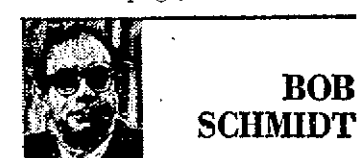

Deukmejian, seeking the Republican nomination for the job Lynch is abandoning, recently complained that California consumers had been given inadequate protection by the attorney general's office.

"The present attorney general," he said, "has found it expedient to retain only six attorneys and three investigators to handle the hundreds of thousands of consumer complaints."

A logical extension of Deukmejian's remarks, however, results in a criticism of Republican Gov. Reagan. Because it is the governor who determines the size of the attorney general's budget, and if Reagan doesn't see to it that the A. G. has enough money to protect consumers properly, that's hardly Tom Lynch's fault.

EARLIER, when Deukmejian started his campaign, he took the tack that crime in California has increased during Lynch's term in office.

But, he was reminded by Associated Press reporter Bill Boyarsky, Gov. Reagan in his 1966 campaign had blamed the rising crime rate on then Gov. Pat Brown, saying Brown had failed to take appropriate action. Was Deukmejian likewise attributing the rising crime rate to Gov. Reagan?

Silence. And an end of pointed references by Deukmejian to the rising crime rate.

The governor also receipted for some unexpected criticism last week from another high Republican politician, state treasurer Ivy Baker Priest.

In her rush to occupy some newspaper space, Mrs. Priest happily chortled that "The Reagan administration's proposed tax reform should save the state an estimated $20 million or more per year in borrowing costs when it is fully implemented."

MRS. PRIEST was talking about the governor's embracing of the withholding concept, after resisting it for three years. Withholding, the governor now says, is needed to balance the state's flow of revenues.

Mrs. Priest agreed. "By stabilizing the flow of revenue into the state treasury," she said, "The new tax program will reduce the need for state borrowing and inter-governmental fund transfers and ultimately achieve annual interest savings amounting to as much as $20 million."

Probably Mrs. Priest did not intend for anyone to conclude that if Gov. Reagan had not allowed his personal philosophy to stand ahead of sound fiscal policy for the past three years, the state might be at least $60 million to the better by the time withholding is finally implemented.

But such a conclusion does seem to be a logical extension of her remarks.

TWO FURTHER attacks on the governor also came, surprisingly, from Republican sources last week. First, Assemblyman Victor Veysey of Brawley and then Sen. James E. Whetmore of La Habra pointed out that the state, in the current year, will be spending $236 million more than it will be taking in.

Assemblyman Mike Cullen, D-Long Beach, gleefully expressed "deep concern" about the direction the governor's fiscal policies were taking the state, and asked the legislative analyst to verify the Republicans' $236 million figure.

With the governor's propensity for claiming, for Republicans, credit for just about every major program enacted in the past four years, but attaching to Democrats the responsibility for government's increased spending, it's refreshing to hear some Republicans seem to be telling it like it is.

dinner here last Thursday — still going on among the packed-house spectators, but with signs of uneasiness on this date.

Someone even remarked on the Lincoln injunction against divided houses. Respondent State Sen. George Deukmejian, fresh from his resignation as Senate majority floor leader because of the coup which ousted Howard Way in favor of Jack Schrade, remarked on that principle:

"Unfortunately we have a divided house among Republicans in the Senate, and the Democrats have elected the Pro Tem (Schrade). He was elected not by a majority of Republicans but only because Democrats voted for him."

Deukmejian said it was "like serving in Saigon, not knowing where the next guerrilla attack was coming from." Then he said he wanted no part of any operation in which the Democrats have put a leader in charge.

THE FACT IS that Deuk's friend, Howard Way, needed eight Democrats for his own election nine months ago. The distinction Deuk made was that at least a majority of the Senate's 21 Republicans supported Way, whereas the Schrade vote was 13 Democrats and 10 Republicans.

The whole point is that the Republicans have a 21-19 majority in the Senate but along with it a schism that makes it not an operating majority. And there it is for everybody to see.

This is just one example. Right

Nixon clears the air over smog control

PRESIDENT NIXON, in his first legislative message to Congress of the new year, has thrown the whole weight of the presidency behind the movement to clean our air and purify our water.

It is a good message, one that points the way to fulfilling his State of the Union promise to make the '70s the decade for improvement of our environment.

There are two aspects of the communication which we think deserve special attention. First, it is clear that President Nixon, who has long been an advocate of state and local control, has decided to make the federal government the architect of the antipollution effort and, ultimately, its enforcement arm as well.

SECONDLY, HE intends that federal standards for automobile exhausts be stronger in 1975 than California's present regulations. This is indeed laudable. There was a detail here, however, which disappointed us, but first let's look at this question of the federal government as chief architect.

It will assume this role most especially in the field of air pollution. Under the present inconclusive law, the clean air act of 1967, some states are more permissive than others and some have no regulations at all. Such a condition places industries in "hard line" states at a competitive disadvantage.

Accordingly, said the President, it is time for nationwide standards. Under the President's proposal, the states would be given one year to provide abatement plans meeting federal standards and to provide for enforcement. The secretary of health, education and welfare would begin inquiries if a state proved negligent, inquiries that could lead to court action.

We think the proposal merits adoption. We are only sorry there is so much lost time — such as the year for abatement plans to be drawn.

WITH RESPECT to auto exhaust controls, the President said he would ask for legislation requiring that representative samples of actual production vehicles be tested throughout the model year — yet he gave no indication who would do the testing or how extensive it would be.

At present in California auto manufacturers submit data and the state studies these and grants or refuses a certificate of compliance. On the federal level, tests are made on prototype vehicles before they go into production.

Neither of these methods has proven satisfactory and it seems to us this question of testing should be taken out of the vague area in which it's been permitted to linger.

The National Air Pollution Administration and concerned members of Congress should devise a tough law providing a pervasive, fool-proof means of testing both new and used cars. This is a vital matter in our county where auto emissions are laying a blanket of gray over us each day.

Why trouble-makers linger in college

EVERY TEN YEARS since the turn of the century, the average age for the onset of menstruation for American girls has decreased by four months. In the 60 years since 1910, the menstrual age has been lowered by two years. A 14-year-old girl today is biologically as mature as the 16-year-old of 1910. Maturity among boys has been accelerating at the same rate. All this can no doubt be accounted for by the high health and nutritional standards this nation has enjoyed over these years.

Biological maturity is coming earlier, but in those 60 years social maturity has been getting later and later. In 1910 a boy was at liberty to quit school and go to work at 14. Grade school was all that was expected of most people. A minority went to high school. A tiny minority of that minority went to college. The rest were part of the world of adult work, in field or farm or factory.

Today social maturity continues to come later despite earlier physical maturity. Almost all young men and

GOP starts itching from an old rash

IN ASSIGNING simple answers to complex situations let's just say the GOP has lost the momentum it rode to its California landslide in 1966 and to its pickup of 47 congressional seats, three U.S. Senate seats and eight governorships nationally that year.

In 1968 the GOP won the Presidency, five more House seats, five Senate seats and five governorships.

Republicans savored euphoric impetus in 1968. The prescription was the GOP's old standby elixir of marshalling public outrage and disempowering Democrats, in which exercise the GOP showed they know the name of the game.

But now somebody's diluted the tonic. And the fingerprints on the jug are Republican. It's the same old ailment for which former state GOP chairman Dr. Gaylord Parkinson in 1965 prescribed an 11th Commandment: "Thou shall not speak ill of another Republican."

ON FORM it is unlikely that the wing Republicans are circularizing against features of President Nixon's program. In California where GOP volunteer groups are almost entirely ultraconservative, their endorsements are tending typically to the farthest right candidate for attorney general, State Sen. John Harner. And Deuk, first to declare for that office, is likely to have a ringside seat to another round in intraparty sniping in that contest.

U.S. SEN. John Tower did a bit of railing himself here Thursday against "Eastern seaboard" critics of the Nixon administration, but just as easily boasted of Gallup poll gains for Nixon "in the Northeast."

He raised some rhetorical questions about the desegregation and busing hassle but declined to stick his neck out with a position.

As stated before, the complaint is not necessarily fatal but the symptoms indicate a house call from Dr. Parkinson might be in order.

We no longer are good guys, win all wars

But America, we seem suddenly to have discovered, is no longer infallible or, as Arthur Schlesinger notes, immune to history. We are no longer the good guys who win all the wars and, at home and abroad, we are caught, Schlesinger says, in the "collapse of our pretensions."

America, we see suddenly to have discovered, is no longer infinite in space or resource or hope. There is no next valley of quiet or virgin forest to treat. Beauty diminishes and tastelessness and flatness abide in neon lights and urban sprawl. Beer cans now litter the beach of our beginnings, at Plymouth Rock, and 6,000 miles away, at the other end, Polynesia turns plastic. The hotel sign in Honolulu says, "Aloha Congoleum dealers."

EACH YEAR seems like another year of the locusts, another year in the national psyche, and there is now a special terror, a flashing feeling of here we go again with the words, "We interrupt this program to bring you a special news bulletin." Another assassination or riot or massacre in Vietnam? Or an accident in those mysterious mountain arsenals where we have enough bombs and germ weapons to kill the race of man?

We live with the trauma of the present and apocalyptic visions of the future. Every day, it seems, serious experts tell us that our society may become a series of armed camps between black and white, urban and suburban. Every day, it seems, serious experts surround us with doomsday predictions of a shattered ecology, of babies dying from pollutants in the soil, of lakes and oceans dying, of a population too vast to feed, of the atmosphere warming up enough to melt glaciers and drown cities.

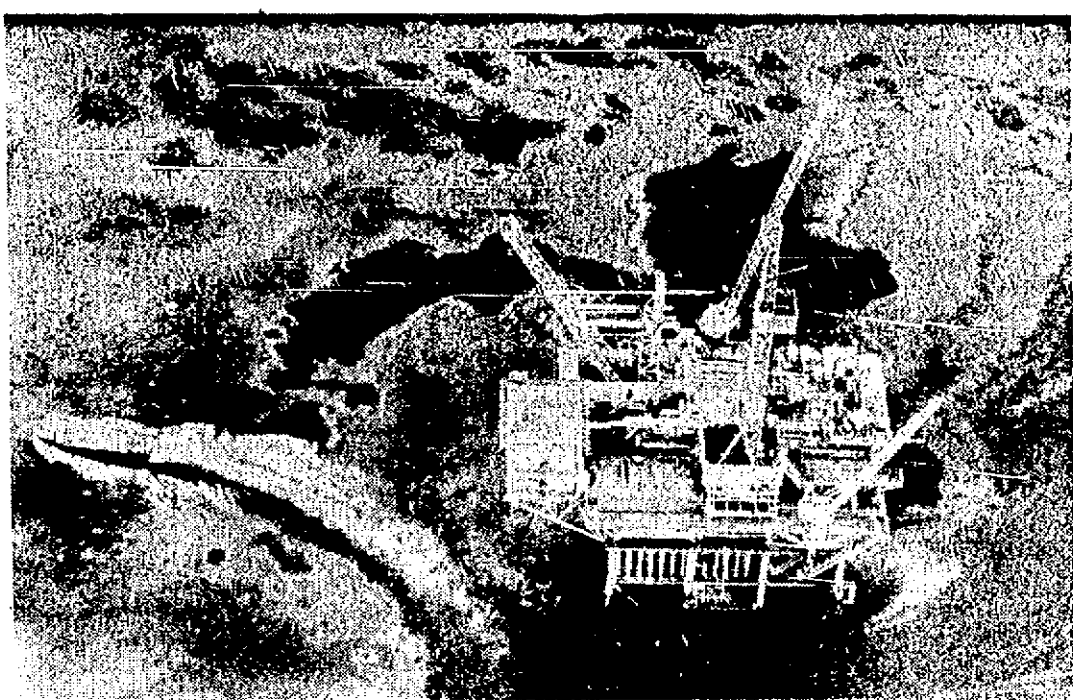

City noises, we are told, can damage our ears, constrict our blood vessels, and increase our blood pressure, and laboratory experiments show that prolonged exposure to excessive sound has made homosexuals out of rats. Will the cavalry ever come?

WE LIVE in an expanding theater of the absurd and the unreal. Between beers, we watch real men dying on television and, same station, same network, we get a poetic message about the dangers of smoking and a poetic message about the joys of smoking.

Same day, same newspaper, we read that vigilantes rule certain streets of New York and, a few columns over, a story about good old American know-how going abroad: U.S. TV satellites will educate the poor villagers of India in crop planting and birth control.

In Santa Barbara, a seabird is unable to take off because of the weight of oil on its wings and a man in a plexiglass helmet steam-cleans the black sludge off the rocks and a bitter resident predicts, "Next thing, they'll be putting plastic crabs on the beach to make it seem natural again." Elsewhere, a headline proclaims, "Aleutian Bomb Is Fired without Setting Off Earthquake." Look, ma, no earthquake.

In Alexandria, Va., a lady frightened by all the cancer talk rushes into a supermarket to exchange soda with cyclamates for cigarettes with nicotine tars.

On Long Island, a finely impartial mail order house urges us to "stand up and be counted" and buy, for one dollar, either a flag decal or a peace symbol. In Kansas City, a union sues to enjoin Trans World Airlines from claiming in its advertising that TWA employees are happy. On the same day, a TWA plane is hijacked all the way to Rome. At any moment, talk of happiness may become actionable.

MUCH OF the quality of life in America today is related to numbers, lopsided numbers. "In the United States," Gertrude Stein once wrote, "there is more space where nobody is than where anybody is. This is what makes America what it is."

In the United States, two-thirds of the people live on one-fiftieth of the land. In the United States, current trends persuade experts that we will be 300 million by the year 2000 and, to accommodate the added 100 million, we will have to crowd them in where we are or build the equivalent of a new city of 250,000 every 40 days for 30 years: 35 more Los Angeleses or 250 more Newarks N.J. or 1,500 more Levittowns Pa. The mind boggles.

Where we already are we are crammed and cranky. We have less room to live or work or die. Man's castle is a number in an unending line of numbers on the door of an apartment in the city or a box in a row of boxes in the suburbs. We flee from the cities to the suburbs and from the suburbs to the exurbs and the rat race of numbers is never far behind.

Every day it becomes harder to remember the smug satisfaction we once took from pictures of those godless Communists lining up for scarce consumer goods in Moscow. Now we God-fearing capitalists are lining up all over America.

We line up for our pleasure and our pain, for ski lifts, trains, planes, license plates, school lunches, tax payments, college registration, golf courses, movies, supermarkets, restaurants, and popcorn.

We line up to buy and we line up to pay, to vote, to get into the Army and out of the Army, into debt and out of debt. We line up, too, in those dandy turnpike restaurants while there are empty tables and after a plastic meal line up for the privilege of paying.

We line up our cars, bumper to bumper, for the privileges of working in cities and the need to escape them. One man in San Francisco carries a carrier pigeon in his car to alert his wife when freeway traffic will make him late for dinner. And for those experiences that used to restore a man's soul, we line up bumper to bumper at a national park or an ocean beach or a mountain highway to view the autumn foliage. One weekend last October, it took three hours to drive 10 miles to see the turning leaves in New Hampshire.

WE SAVE our money to buy boats and car trailers and in the great rush to see nature as it is we see it as it never was; all those other boats give the sea an unnatural chop and all those other cars give the land an unnatural glut. If you live in Denver, you have to go deeper into the mountains every year for solitude, and if you live in Los Angeles you have to go farther for a deserted beach, and if you live in New York, forget it.

We have come a long, long way from those days and nights on the prairies when, in Sherwood Anderson's words, men alone in the fields sensed a "highness" outside themselves . . . a mystery whispered in the grass . . . a deep semireligious feeling. . . It had taken the shrillness out of them. They had learned the trick of quiet. . . Where do we learn it now?

"The effect of liberty to individuals is that they may do what they please," said Edmund Burke. "We ought to see what it will please them to do before we risk congratulations." It has pleased us to do much.

WE HAVE polluted the land and the air and the water, defaced the horizon with commercial clutter and blurred our history and our symbols with dollar signs. We have left Lake Erie beyond redemption and Lake Tahoe beyond recognition.

We have pasteurized our milk and put strontium 90 in its source and enough waste in streams and lakes to kill 15 million fish in one year. We have turned the New England farm of Robert Frost into an auto junk yard and built high-risers that block the view of Mount Hood in Seattle and the bay in San Francisco and the surf in Waikiki and countless other vistas that nourish the soul of man.

We have put enough smog in the air over Los Angeles to warn school children not to play too strenuously or breathe too deeply in the days of the amber cloud and enough toxics in the air over New York to make a day's walking and breathing equal the intake of almost two packs of cigarettes. And between the two coasts we have made eyes smart in mile-high Denver and not-as-high Phoenix and countless smaller places once idyllic.

We have put DDT in the shellfish off Martha's Vineyard in the Atlantic and frenzy in Hawaii in the Pacific and human excrement in Sugar Creek, Charlotte, N.C., as well as the streams of tiny Peterborough, N.H., where Thornton Wilder based his bittersweet tale of "Our Town."

We have mined enough coal and iron to sag and crack two million acres of land and strip-mined enough to bring floods in Kentucky and West Virginia.

WE HAVE MADE parking lots out of houses older than the American Revolution and rumpus room bars out of trees older than the discovery of America. We have taken the view looking south on Park Avenue, New York, where views are as scarce as free rentals, and filled it with concrete and glass, like a mottled monster dam, and this was called "air rights."

We have broken the serene blue line of the Pacific off Santa Barbara with crablike monsters of metal, and this was called "oil rights."

We have paved valleys with giant shopping centers and blanketed meadows with dreary housing developments and scarred mountains with utility poles. We have shaken our ecology with technology, our houses with huge diesel trucks and our teeth with monster jets and we have put enough cars on the "freeways" of California to tie up, in a single accident, 200 vehicles, like uncut sausage.

WE HAVE BUILT a "Walden Breezes-Trailer Sales" across from Henry David Thoreau's Walden Pond and a "Plymouth Rock Cleaners — 3-Hour Service" across from the Puritan landfall and in Hannibal, Mo. behind Samuel Clemens' boyhood home, we have built "Vic Cissano's Pizza King," and on the side adjoining, the "Mark Twain Drive-In" with electronic menus and across town, the "Huck Finn Shopping Center" and the "Huck Finn Cinema."

We have suffered, in Lewis Mumford's words, "disorder, blight, dingy mediocrity, screaming neon-lighted vulgarity . . . We have ceased to respect ourselves . . . we have ceased to cherish our own history and to enlarge our own prospects, by promoting character and variety and beauty wherever we find it, in landscapes or in people."

In the play, "Our Town," editor Webb falls in step one evening with the town constable.

MR. WEBB: "Oh, Bill, if you see my boy smoking cigarettes, just give him a word, will you? He thinks lot of you, Bill."

CONSTABLE WARREN: "I don't think he smokes no cigarettes, Mr. Webb. leastways, not more'n two or three a year."

MR. WEBB: " . . . I hope not. Well, good night, Bill."

CONSTABLE WARREN: "Good night, Mr. Webb."

IN ANOTHER SCENE, reference is made to two ladies who "cooked three meals a day—one of 'em for 20 years, the other for 40 — and no summer vacation. They brought up two children apiece, washed, cleaned the house — and never a nervous breakdown."

In that play, Thornton Wilder mostly had Peterborough of early in this century in mind. Today Peterborough is a town of 4,000, snug in the V of two lovely hills, dominated by church steeples, still postcard-pretty and relatively serene. Only relatively.

Like most of America today, it is more affluent and more nervous than it was. The ladies have washing machines and vacuum cleaners and regular vacations, some as far as Florida and Europe. And the high school seniors, whose annual class trip used to be to Washington by train, now fly to Rome or Paris or Rhodes. Today Peterborough has its share of nervous breakdowns. Today it is highly doubtful any father would expect an errand son to listen to a cop. Use of drugs among the young has begun to creep from outlying cities and colleges into "Our Town."

HANNIBAL, Mo., is also a relatively placid town. At the foot of Cardiff Hill is a statue of two barefooted boys carrying fishing poles, the two best-loved boys in American literature. A plaque identifies the area where Tom Sawyer and Huck Finn

INDEPENDENT PRESS-TELEGRAM-B-3
Long Beach, Calif., Sun., Feb. 15, 1970

"played and roamed, at will." Today they would find it more difficult. Cardiff Hill is bisected by a busy two-lane highway. Loitering by the young is now prohibited by law in Hannibal after 10 p.m. because of a rise in adolescent vandalism. Boys still fish in the polluted Mississippi, now with fiberglass poles and outboards, but the Coast Guard frowns on rafts, insisting on a motor and a sail or an out and a prescribed number of life jackets.

Change, change, change. Will nothing hold still?

Kids sleep together before they are married and marry before they can support themselves and poor old Dad is regarded as oppressively square for asking, "When WILL you find yourself?"

TODAY'S NEW JET is obsolete tomorrow, today's new superhighway is a bottleneck tomorrow, today's new clothes dryer needs the repairman tomorrow, today's new mini is maxi tomorrow, and spiders spin webs over the old injunction to "eat it up, use it up, wear it out."

A war to stop the spread of communism, which was credible in Korea, becomes a credibility gap in Vietnam, liberals exchange pastures with conservatives and yesterday's interventionist talks isolation today.

Teachers close down schools by strike, police and firemen threaten to walk out, soldiers circulate underground newspapers denouncing the Army, priests quit to marry and the Pope has his troubles with his bishops.

L. A. C. SAYS

This will be a big year for politicians

By L. A. COLLINS SR.

THE NEXT FEW MONTHS will be busy months for people seeking to be retained or elected to public office. They will be classed as politicians. There will be many charges of corruption and self-interest rather than the unselfish urge for public service. There will be reference to the corruption by the Mafia in New Jersey and its influence in other areas. The conflict of interest by a few Los Angeles commission members is an example of wrongs by men in high offices. But it should be realized these are but a very small number of the men dedicating themselves to public service.

During these months of campaigning before the June primary and November final election it would be wise for each of us to realize that what we ourselves do will be important. If we take advantage of the information available to us and vote on election day we will be the deciding factor in the kind of government we are to have. In effect each of us is a politician because we are, or should be, dedicated to the principle of making this the example of what can be done under the freedom we enjoy.

THE TERM "politician" will be used millions of times. Some will use it as an epithet. Many will act as though politics are so vile they would not soil their hands by taking part in them. But few people know what the word politician means. They should be more careful about the only safeguard we have against loss of all freedom. It is the politicians of this country who safeguard these freedoms. They are our government. When you say all politics or politicians are bad, you say self government is bad. Care should be taken to differentiate between the few who are bad and the many who are good politicians.

We liked the definition that "Politicians are simply people who take more interest in public affairs than most people." Also quoted is Elihu

Root, the great secretary of war under Theodore Roosevelt, who said, "Politics is the practical exercise of the art of self government. Somebody must attend to self government if it is to continue. The principal reproach against any American should be that he is not a politician."

WE KNOW many politicians personally. Some of them have been selfish, dishonest men. But we doubt that in number they are greater than may be found among doctors, attorneys, business, newspapers or other occupations. Most of the politicians we have known are men in, or seeking, public office. Some of them have been wealthy men, retired from business. Some have been young men seeking publicity. But most of them have something in common. That is the urge to hold public office and be recognized as public officials.

We are extremely fortunate that so many able and sincere men and women offer themselves for such self government. Our city commissions are made up of the best people in the community. We never stop marveling at the time and energy they put into public service for the little, or no, monetary return they receive. Most of them like the work and the recognition. Without this willingness to serve by the people of the community there would be no self government.

When we carelessly sneer at men in public office we should stop and analyze our own circle of friends and business or professional associates. There are crooks among politicians, but have we reason to believe there is a greater percentage of crooks in politics than there is in our own group? If the facts were known, we are convinced that on the whole politicians are far better citizens than are their constituents. That is certainly true as concerns constituents who fail to vote. Voting is our greatest safeguard to self-government. In that respect, how good a citizen are you and your friends?

We no longer are good guys, win all wars

But America, we seem suddenly to have discovered, is no longer infallible or, as Arthur Schlesinger notes, immune to history. We are no longer the good guys who win all the wars and, at home and abroad, we are caught, Schlesinger says, in these "collapse of our pretensions."

America, we see suddenly to have discovered, is no longer infinite in space or resource or hope. There is no next valley of quiet or virgin forest to treat. Beauty diminishes and tastelessness and flatness abide in neon lights and urban sprawl. Beer cans now litter the beach of our beginnings, at Plymouth Rock, and 6,000 miles away, at the other end, Polynesia turns plastic. The hotel sign in Honolulu says, "Aloha Congoleum dealers."

EACH YEAR seems like another year of the locusts, another tear in the national psyche, and there is now a special terror, a flashing feeling of here we go again with the words, "We interrupt this program to bring you a special news bulletin." Another assassination or riot or massacre in Vietnam? Or an accident in those mysterious mountain arsenals where we have enough bombs and germ weapons to kill the race of man?

We live with the trauma of the present and apocalyptic visions of the future. Every day, it seems, serious experts tell us that our society may become a series of armed camps between black and white, urban and suburban. Every day, it seems, serious experts surround us with doomsday predictions of a shattered ecology, of babies dying from pollutants in the soil, of lakes and oceans dying, of a population too vast to feed, of the atmosphere warming up enough to melt glaciers and drown cities.

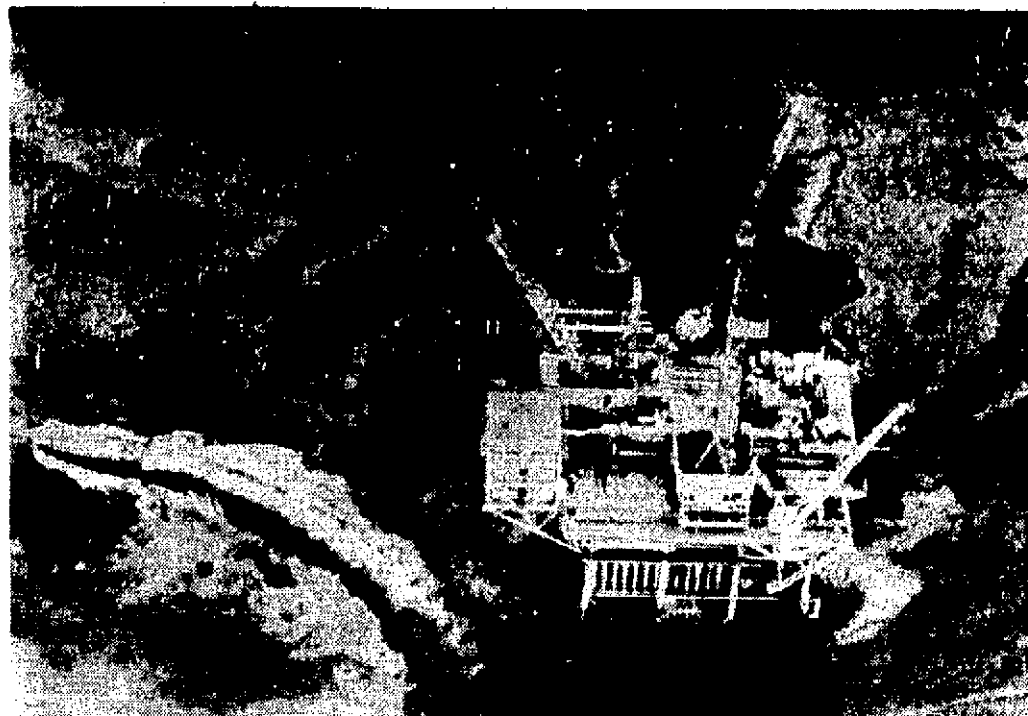

City noises, we are told, can damage our ears, constrict our blood vessels, and increase our blood pressure, and laboratory experiments show that prolonged exposure to excessive sound has made homosexuals out of rats. Will the cavalry never come?

WE LIVE in an expanding theater of the absurd and the unreal. Between beers, we watch real men dying on television and, same station, same network, we get a poetic message about the dangers of smoking and a poetic message about the joys of smoking.

Same day, same newspaper, we read that vigilantes rule certain streets of New York and, a few columns over, a story about good old American know-how going abroad: U.S. TV satellites will educate the poor villagers of India in crop planting and birth control.

In Santa Barbara, a seabird is unable to take off because of the weight of oil on its wings and a man in a plexiglass helmet steam-cleans the black sludge off the rocks and a bitter resident predicts, "Next thing, they'll be putting plastic crabs on the beach to make it seem natural again." Elsewhere, a headline proclaims, "Aleutian Bomb Is Fired without Setting Off Earthquake." Look, ma, no earthquake.

In Alexandria, Va., a lady frightened by all the cancer talk rushes into a supermarket to exchange soda with cyclamates for cigarettes with nicotine tars.

On Long Island, a finely impartial mail order house urges us to "stand up and be counted" and buy, for one dollar, either a flag decal or a peace symbol. In Kansas City, a union sues to enjoin Trans World Airlines from claiming in its advertising that TWA employees are happy. On the same day, a TWA plane is hijacked all the way to Rome. At any moment, talk of happiness may become actionable.

MUCH OF the quality of life in America today is related to numbers, lopsided numbers. "In the United States," Gertrude Stein once wrote, "there is more space where nobody is than where anybody is. This is what makes America what it is."

In the United States, two-thirds of the people live on one-fiftieth of the land. In the United States, current trends persuade experts that we will be 300 million by the year 2000 and, to accommodate the added 100 million, we will have to crowd them in where we are or build the equivalent of a new city of 250,000 every 40 days for 30 years: 35 more Los Angeles or 250 more Newarks N.J. or 1,500 more Levittowns Pa. The mind boggles.

Where we already are we are crammed and cranky. We have less room to live or work or die. Man's castle is a number in an unending line of numbers on the door of an apartment in the city or a box in a row of boxes in the suburbs. We flee from the cities to the suburbs and from the suburbs to the exurbs and the rat race of numbers is never far behind.

Every day it becomes harder to remember the smug satisfaction we once took from pictures of those godless Communists lining up for scarce consumer goods in Moscow. Now we God-fearing capitalists are lining up all over America.

We line up for our pleasure and our pain, for ski lifts, trains, planes, license plates, school lunches, tax payments, college registration, golf courses, movies, supermarkets, restaurants, and popcorn.

We line up to buy and we line up to pay, to vote, to get into the Army and out of the Army, into debt and out of debt. We line up, too, in those dandy turnpike restaurants while there are empty tables and after a plastic meal line up for the privilege of paying.

We line up our cars, bumper to bumper, for the privileges of working in cities and the need to escape them. One man in San Francisco carries a carrier pigeon in his car to alert his wife when freeway traffic will make him late for dinner. And for those experiences that used to restore a man's soul, we line up bumper to bumper at a national park or an ocean beach or a mountain highway to view the autumn foliage. One weekend last October, it took three hours to drive 10 miles to see the turning leaves in New Hampshire.

WE SAVE our money to buy boats and car trailers and in the great rush to see nature as it is we see it as it never was; all those other boats give the sea an unnatural chop and all those other cars give the land an unnatural glint. If you live in Denver, you have to go deeper into the mountains every year for solitude, and if you live in Los Angeles you have to go farther for a deserted beach, and if you live in New York, forget it.

We have come a long, long way from those days and nights on the prairies when, in Sherwood Anderson's words, men alone in the fields sensed a "highness outside themselves . . . a mystery whispered in the grass . . . a deep semireligious feeling. . . . It had taken the shrillness out of them. They had learned the trick of quiet."

"The effect of liberty to individuals is that they may do what they please," said Edmund Burke. "We ought to see what it will please them to do before we risk congratulations." It has pleased us to do much.

WE HAVE polluted the land and the air and the water, defaced the horizon with commercial clutter and blurred our history and our symbols with dollar signs. We have left Lake Erie beyond redemption and Lake Tahoe beyond recognition.

We have pasteurized our milk and put strontium 90 in its source and enough waste in streams and lakes to kill 15 million fish in one year. We have turned the New England farm of Robert Frost into an auto junk yard and built high-risers that block the view of Mount Hood in Seattle and the bay in San Francisco and the surf in Waikiki and countless other vistas that nourish the soul of man.

Police Cars Take Citizens Along on 'Adam 12' Ride

By HAI LOWE
Staff Writer

I sat in the black and white patrol car of the Torrance Police Department and observed as Sgt. Ted Goudy chased a speeder down Crenshaw Boulevard; assisted another unit which was questioning an auto burglar suspect, and acted as a backup for two patrol units which broke up a teenage party in an apartment which was annoying neighbors.

My evening of playing police observer was part of the new Community Ride Along Program of the Torrance Police Department.

The Ride Along Program is designed to allow interested people in the city to ride a shift with a regular police unit to see what it is like in the day of an officer. Not yet designed to accommodate everyone who would like to participate in the program, Ride Along invites civic and business leaders to participate for an evening and then return to their groups and organization and talk about the experience. It is a community relations project to tell it like it is in the life of a cop.

IT WAS A cold windy night when I reported to the police station, where I was met by Goudy, a nine-year veteran of the local police force. I was briefed on what to expect during the evening. I was taken on a tour of the station and its communications and jail facilities. After signing a waiver which would relieve the department of liability in case of injury, I went out on patrol with Goudy.

This evening, Goudy was acting as a field supervisor. His job was to cruise the perimeter of the city, to be available to respond to any spot in the city, to act as a backup and commander on the spot in any sticky situation.

crackled continually, dispatching units to family fights, scenes of barking dogs and simple "see the man" calls which could range from a complaint about an alley cat to a maniac with a gun. During this time, Goudy, listening to the radio, kept his head moving from side to side, peering into lighted stores and down dark alleys with a trained eye looking for possible trouble. At the same time, the sergeant briefed me further on some police techniques.

We checked autos parked alone in large shopping center lots, usually a sign of a stolen vehicle, and ran radio checks on their plates. Goudy explained how one make of auto is the easiest to "hot-wire" and steal, and that this type of car sitting alone is checked very often.

THE SPEEDER we chased had almost hit the sergeant as he had got out of the car to replace a construction barrier. The auto burglar suspect had been stopped by a police unit at the beach and several suspicious items found in his car. The teenagers at the loud party had dispersed without trouble when told to.

The entire evening had been classed as "routine" by the sergeant when we returned to the station five hours later to observe the briefing of patrolmen getting ready to go out on the next shift. "There have been several burglaries in this area, watch for cruising autos."

No shootouts, no high-speed chases, just a regular patrol with trouble situations which could have exploded into headlines being handled quickly and quietly while people in Torrance slept.

This is the way it was and this is the way the participants in the Ride Along program see it and go back to their organizations and groups to tell it like it was.

Los Alamitos to Dedicate Park Designed Just for Little 'Uns

Los Alamitos will dedicate its newest city park today.

Named Labourdette Park for A.J. Labourdette, former city councilman and long-time civic leader, the park is located at 4011 Howard St. It has 24 pieces of playground equipment and is one of a series of "Tot Lots" being planned throughout the city.

The park is on ground leased to the city by the Southern California Water Company. Crews from the Los Alamitos Public Works Department built it with the aid of several local contractors.

This trimmed the estimated cost of more than $40,000 to $22,500, according to City Manager William Kraus.

Ribbon-cutting for the opening of the park, and the unveiling of the bronze and stone plaque at the park entrance, will be conducted by Robin Bishop, the current Miss Los Alamitos.

Refreshments will be served after the dedication ceremonies.

FREE CLINIC MONEY

"We have their last check," said Lofstrom, "and a $200 donation from the Tuberculosis Association on top of our radiothon money, but after that..."

Lofstrom explained that the United Way grant had been directed to payment of rent and utilities and some medical supplies. "There'll be a big gap," he said.

"But it hasn't been all bad," said Mrs. Munson. "A very old gentleman came in Friday, laid a check for $100 on the desk, and left. We barely had time to thank him."

The radiothon, Lofstrom said, was preceded by another marathon fund-drive for the clinic's benefit, in which two of the facility's ex-patients set a record for teeter-tottering.

Mike Thelman, 22, and John Wetzel, 21, teetered and tottered for 40 hours, 45 minutes Wednesday through Friday in the Belmont Savings and Loan parking lot to raise $178 for the clinic, Lofstrom said.

Also donated during the radiothon, said Lofstrom, were three truckloads of plastic, flower-shaped stickers, which will be sold through local shops to benefit the clinic.

Homemaker Service," Mrs. Bell said.

The bargain-hunters come in all sizes and ages. David Beegle, 12, said he bought a handle and cloth to use on his go-cart.

An elderly woman said she came with a friend who is a rummage sale addict.

"I'm glad I came," she said. "I bought several things I don't need and glasses cases because I'm always losing mine. Like other women, I purchased several odds and ends—things I don't need and probably will never use."

Martin Karan of Long Beach rested while his wife checked out the bargains.

"We came with the expectation of finding bargains, and we have. We got a coffee pot, clothing, and a light meter, and my wife's still looking. Heaven only knows what she will bring back," he said.

Many of the bargain-hunters shared the opinion of Eunice Johnson of Inglewood, who said: "Rummage sales are fun. I like the crowds and the bargains, and I intend to look at every department while I'm here."

Police Cars Take Citizens Along on 'Adam 12' Ride

By HAL LOWE
Staff Writer

I sat in the black and white patrol car, of the Torrance Police Department and observed as Sgt. Ted Goudy chased a speeder down Crenshaw Boulevard; assisted another unit which was questioning an auto burglar suspect, and acted as a backup for two patrol units which broke up a teenage party in an apartment which was annoying neighbors.

My evening of playing police observer was part of the new Community Ride Along Program of the Torrance Police Department.

The Ride Along Program is designed to allow interested people in the city to ride a shift with a regular police unit to see what it is like in the day of an officer. Not yet designed to accommodate everyone who would like to participate in the program, Ride Along invites civic and business leaders to participate for an evening and then return to their groups and organization and talk about the experience. It is a community relations project to tell it like it is in the life of a cop.

IT WAS A cold windy night when I reported to the police station, where I was met by Goudy, a nine-year veteran of the local police force. I was briefed on what to expect during the evening. I was taken on a tour of the station and its communications and jail facilities. After signing a waiver which would relieve the department of liability in case of injury, I went out on patrol with Goudy.

This evening, Goudy was acting as a field supervisor. His job was to cruise the perimeter of the city, to be available to respond to any spot in the city, to act as a backup and commander on the spot in any sticky situation.

crackled continually, dispatching units to family fights, scenes of barking dogs and simple "see the man" calls which could range from a complaint about an alley cat to a maniac with a gun. During this time, Goudy, listening to the radio, kept his head moving from side to side, peering into lighted stores and down dark alleys with a trained eye looking for possible trouble. At the same time, the sergeant briefed me further on some police techniques.

We checked autos parked alone in large shopping center lots, usually a sign of a stolen vehicle, and ran radio checks on their plates. Goudy explained how one make of auto is the easiest to "hot-wire" and steal, and that this type of car sitting alone is checked very often.

THE SPEEDER we chased had almost hit the sergeant as he had got out of the car to replace a construction barrier. The auto burglar suspect had been stopped by a police unit at the beach and several suspicious items found in his car. The teenagers at the loud party had dispersed without trouble when told to.

The entire evening had been classed as "routine" by the sergeant when we returned to the station five hours later to observe the briefing of patrolmen getting ready to go out on the next shift. "There have been several burglaries in this area, watch for cruising autos."

No shootouts, no high-speed chases, just a regular patrol with trouble situations which could have exploded into headlines being handled quickly and quietly while people in Torrance slept.

This is the way it was and this is the way the participants in the Ride Along program see it and go back to their organizations and groups to tell it like it was.

Judy Collins Coaxes Crowd to Surrender

By PRESTON REESE
Staff Writer

Judy Collins's recordings are hardly fit for rainy days. Somber, tranquil, she sings with a thought-provoking phrasing that gets downright depressing at times.

Yet seeing her on stage Friday night at the Long Beach Auditorium handling her guitar as if it were an M-1, she coaxed the audience into complete surrender.

And that was only one of the faces she turned to the near sell-out crowd of 3,300 long-hairs, short-hairs, kids and over-30 boppers.

Camp Hilltop, a highly professional but little known country-western group, opened the concert with ballads "in the cowboy tradition," making everybody happy with "Home on the Range", "In My Adobe Hacienda"

Home Burglarized

Burglars who broke into Ruby J. Dinkens home, 6748 Curtis Ave., stole a portable TV, portable heater, radio, wristwatch and cash worth totally $200. Long Beach police said Saturday.

JUDY COLLINS

and "The Battle of New Orleans," to which the audience clapped along.

Hilltops' down home music set the mood for Miss Collins' opener, "Someday Soon" performed with a bluesy speeded-up tempo accompanied by pianist Richard Bell, drummer Susan Evans and bassist Gene Taylor.

After Gordon Lightfoot's "Early Morning Rain" the lights were out in preparation for one of Miss Collins' own compositions. Silence filled the auditorium as she stood bathed in a blue spotlight and began, "My father always promised us that we would live in France..." an eerie melody written three weeks before her father's death.

Wearing a long white dress she looked like Mother Courage, giving a strong treatment to one of the three songs by Leonard Cohen she performed, "Bird on the Wire".

Miss Collins' repertoire no longer includes the folk ballads and protest songs which started her ten years ago. She now prefers the contemporary music of Joan Baez, Leonard Cohen and Bob Dylan.

Midway through the concert she announced that "this and all the concerts I do in the near future will be dedicated to some friends of mine in Chicago," referring to the recent Chicago 7 trial.

Member of the audience flocked around the stage to hear her rendition of "Just a Closer Walk With Thee" with the poignant overtones of Bell's piano. "Chelsea Morning" received a standing ovation at the concert's end as she encored with "Both Sides Now".

IN CONCERT

Late night "stay-at-home" crowd will have chance to see their idol, Johnny Carson, in the flesh when he appears at Anaheim Convention Center on March 28. Host of "Tonight" TV show will perform twice, at 7 and 10 p.m. Tickets are available by mail only from center's box office.

Collection Stolen

A $700 coin collection was stolen from the home of Kenneth M. Larkey, 2800 Fashion Ave., Long Beach Police said Saturday.

Choraleers Set Tribute to America

The 80-voice Anaheim Choraleers will present "a tribute to America" on Feb. 22 at 3:15 p.m. at the Anaheim High School Auditorium, according to Dr. Warren C. Marsh, its director.

He said that the program will deal with the history of America from its discovery through the Civil War.

It will be narrated by John McLaren, noted British actor, who will read Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation. Jester Hairston, 41-year veteran of the music and entertainment world, and grandson of a slave, will be guest conductor for a part of the concert.

Hairston last appeared with the Choraleers in 1967 as guest conductor.

Dr. Marsh, newly-named to direct the Choraleers, was with La Mirada Symphony and the Whittier Civic Light Opera. He holds a Freedom Foundation award for his work in patriotic music.

He disclosed that the Choraleers will soon make a recording with McLaren.

'OUR TOWN' IS ALL OF US

So Let's Reminisce...

It's a bit shopworn, now, and it creaks a little in the joints. It is faintly sentimental in an unsentimental age, and it espouses some largely outmoded values. It also preaches a good deal, especially in the third act. It is, in modern terms, pretty square.

But, comfortable old friend that it is, familiar from hundreds of performances on high school, college, little theater, and professional stages, "Our Town" retains its power to involve us in a consideration of the state of man in the Universe.

The first-rate production of the Thornton Wilder play now showing at the Huntington Hartford Theater features an ensemble of performers who prove conclusively that a play can be thoroughly interesting and moving without pyrotechnics.

LEADING A DISTINGUISHED company known as The Plumstead Playhouse — a sort of embryo National Theater Company of the United States is Henry Fonda, who plays the role of stage manager in the play and directs the production as well.

Elizabeth Hartman, Jim Backus, Mildred Natwick, John Randolph, Irene Tedrow, and John Beal are other stars of some magnitude who have contributed their talents to the strong cast.

As almost everyone knows "Our Town" is a quiet story of life and death and eternity in turn-of-the-century Grover's Corners, New Hampshire. It is the story more particularly of Emily Webb and George Gibbs, who are born and grow up and marry in their own small town, content with their life and its values. It is the story of insignificant people in a far corner of a small New England state.

And yet it is the story of us all, really; for underneath the surface of Grover's Corners we can see the shape of humanity everywhere, everywhere.

The play is performed on a bare stage, with only a minimum of props to suggest the scene: Emily and George standing on stepladders represent the two young people in their respective rooms talking across the space between their houses in the soft spring night; a plank across two chairs becomes the soda fountain in Mr. Morgan's drugstore.

ALL OF THIS IS more than gimmickry (or economy). It is an appropriate symbol for the fact that the play deals not with the surfaces of life but with the underlying truths about man's abiding values. Sets would only obscure the point. Against such a background the comments of the stage manager are natural enough. He adds emphasis to the universality of what is going on before us. Even the preaching in the third act becomes tolerable in that context.

I guess it's clear I liked the play. I usually dislike sentimentality, folksiness, and Universal Truths. They bore and repel me. I shouldn't like "Our Town," but I cannot tell a lie. I did.

"Our Town" won the Pulitzer Prize in 1938. I played a minor part in it in a college production early in the forties. It seemed a great theatrical experience then, and on several subsequent occasions. It seemed even greater at this most recent viewing.

We may well have an Immortal on our hands. — Robert C. Wylder.

Judy Collins Coaxes Crowd to Surrender

By PRESTON REESE Staff Writer

Judy Collins's recordings are hardly fit for rainy days. Somber, tranquil, she sings with a thought-provoking phrasing that gets downright depressing at times.

Yet seeing her on stage Friday night at the Long Beach Auditorium handling her guitar as if it were an M-1, she coaxed the audience into complete surrender.

And that was only one of the faces she turned to the near sell-out crowd of 3,300 long-hairs, short-hairs, kids and over-30 boppers.

Camp Hilltop, a highly professional but little known country-western group, opened the concert with ballads "In the cowboy tradition", making everybody happy with "Home on the Range", "In My Adobe Hacienda"

Home Burglarized

Burglars who broke into Ruby J. Dinkens home, 6746 Curtis Ave., stole a portable TV, portable heater, radio, wristwatch and cash worth totally $200, Long Beach police said Saturday.

'OUR TOWN' IS ALL OF US

So Let's Reminisce...

It's a bit shopworn, now, and it creaks a little in the joints. It is faintly sentimental in an unsentimental age, and it espouses some largely outmoded values. It also preaches a good deal, especially in the third act. It is, in modern terms, pretty square.

But, comfortable old friend that it is, familiar from hundreds of performances on high school, college, little theater, and professional stages, "Our Town" retains its power to involve us in a consideration of the state of man in the Universe.

The first-rate production of the Thornton Wilder play now showing at the Huntington Hartford Theater features an ensemble of performers who prove conclusively that a play can be thoroughly interesting and moving without pyrotechnics.

LEADING A DISTINGUISHED company known as The Plumstead Playhouse — a sort of Embryo National Theater Company of the United States is Henry Fonda, who plays the role of stage manager in the play and directs the production as well.

Elizabeth Hartman, Jim Backus, Mildred Natwick, John Randolph, Irene Tedrow, and John Beal are other stars of some magnitude who have contributed their talents to the strong cast.

As almost everyone knows "Our Town" is a quiet story of life and death and eternity in turn-of-the-century Grover's Corners, New Hampshire. It is the story more particularly of Emily Webb and George Gibbs, who are born and grow up and marry in their own small town, content with their life and its values. It is the story of insignificant people in a far corner of a small New England state.

And yet it is the story of us all, really; for underneath the surface of Grover's Corners we can see the shape of humanity everywhere, everywhen.

The play is performed on a bare stage, with only a minimum of props to suggest the scene: Emily and George standing on stepladders represent the two young people in their respective rooms talking across the space between their houses in the soft spring night; a plank across two chairs becomes the soda fountain in Mr. Morgan's drugstore.

ALL OF THIS IS more than gimmickry (or economy). It is an appropriate symbol for the fact that the play deals not with the surfaces of life but with the underlying truths about man's abiding values. Sets would only obscure the point. Against such a background the comments of the stage manager are natural enough. He adds emphasis to the universality of what is going on before us. Even the preaching in the third act becomes tolerable in that context.

I guess it's clear I liked the play. I usually dislike sentimentality, folksiness, and Universal Truths. They bore and repel me. I shouldn't like "Our Town," but I cannot tell a lie. I did.

"Our Town" won the Pulitzer Prize in 1938. I played a minor part in it in a college production early in the forties. It seemed a great theatrical experience then, and on several subsequent occasions. It seemed even greater at this most recent viewing.

We may well have an Immortal on our hands. — Robert C. Wylder.

Nixon Policy Cited in Production Cut

By GREGG HERRINGTON

WASHINGTON (U) — Industrial production and factory wages dropped last month, supplying two signs that the nation's economy is slowing down under Nixon Administration policies.

Paul W. McCracken, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, said the economy is going through a painful decline as the Administration tries to combat inflation.

The Federal Reserve Board said Friday the industrial production index for the first month of 1970 totaled 169.9 per cent of the 1957-59 base period average, down from 171.1 per cent for December.

It was the sixth consecutive month of decline for the industrial production rate and it marked the first time since the recession of 1960 that the index had dropped through a full half year.

Also, Friday, the Commerce Department announced factory payrolls decreased about $500 million in January compared with an increase of $1 billion in December.

McCracken would not predict how long the economic slowdown would continue nor when the inflationary trend will be curtailed. But he said the administration will not lose control of the economy.

Speaking at the University of Maryland Friday, McCracken said the slowdown in the various sectors of the economy was reasonable to expect, based on Nixon Administration policies started a year ago.

While industrial production and factory payrolls dipped, a third economic indicator showed some growth last month. The Commerce Department reported the seasonally adjusted figure for personal income was $773 billion, up from $770.6 billion in December.

HOWEVER, even though the monthly increase has averaged $3 billion since September, it is down from a $5-billion average for the first eight months of 1969.

Russians Claim Portable Helicopter

MOSCOW (UPI) — The Russians reported Saturday they have developed a "portable" helicopter that can carry one man at speeds up to 100 miles an hour and is "as easy to control as a motorcycle."

The Soviet news agency Tass said the helicopter, designed by three Kiev engineers, fits into a large case and "takes only three minutes to assemble and prepare it for flight. It needs a strip less than 10 feet wide for landings and take-offs," Tass said.

Nixon Declares War on Pollution

The Nation

President Nixon, who earlier had said protection of the environment was a top-priority matter for the 1970s, last week outlined his strategy for a multibillion-dollar war on pollution. In a special message to Congress, he proposed 23 legislative steps and announced 14 executive and administrative orders to launch the attack on pollution of the air, water and land.

PRESIDENT NIXON
For Land, Sea, Air

DEMOCRATIC PARTY LEADERS in Congress responded to President Nixon's State of the Union Message by presenting their version of the country's condition on national television.

Significant was the fact that the 12 senators and 11 representatives on the program steered clear of the Vietnam and racial issues.

WARNING THAT MEDICARE and Medicaid, federal health insurance programs for the elderly and poor, are headed toward bankruptcy, the staff of the Senate Finance Committee recommended fixed fees for participating doctors and elimination of sloppy administrative practices. It also urged Congress to override a monthly fee boost to $5.30 ordered by Robert H. Finch, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare. Current cost is $4.

MORE THAN 600 AMERICANS, most of them young people, headed for Cuba to help harvest the sugar cane crop. They rode chartered buses to Canada where they boarded a Cuban cattleboat for the cruise to Castroland.

LOS ANGELES CITY SCHOOLS were ordered integrated in a ruling following a 70-day trial of a suit filed by the American Civil Liberties Union on behalf of 12 minority students. Los Angeles County Superior Court Judge Alfred E. Gitelson ordered the Board of Education to submit a master plan for integration by June 1, place it in operation by September and accomplish full integration by September 1971. Dr. Robert Kelley, superintendent of schools, said the only way the district can comply with the court order is with a mass busing program, cost of which would mean "the virtual destruction of the school district." He said the ruling will be appealed.

OPPOSITION TO BUSING STUDENTS to achieve racial balance in schools was voiced by President Nixon in a White House memorandum. The message was interpreted as an endorsement of legislation by Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., that would force the federal government to apply the same desegregation yardstick in all parts of the country.

THE "OLD GUARD" MADE comeback in the California Senate with the election of Sen. Jack Schrade, R-San Diego, as president pro tem. Schrade replaced reform-minded Sen. Howard Way, favorite of younger and newer members of the Legislature's upper chamber. He had served just nine months in the post. The vote was 23-12 with 13 Democrats going along with Schrade.

The World

Europe's worst avalanche of the century claimed 39 lives and injured 60. Loosed by howling winds of a French Alps blizzard, tons of snow hurtled down the side of a 10,000-foot mountain and crushed a hostel at Val d'Isere. Most of the victims were young people on a ski holiday.

$12 MILLION WORTH OF U.S. AID supplies for starving victims of the Biafran civil war have piled up in the Nigerian capital and not been distributed, American officials in Lagos reported Wednesday. They said the U.S. is powerless to move the goods because once they are landed at Lagos they become the property of the Nigerian government's relief organization.

ISRAELI JETS BOMBED and strafed a scrap metal plant near Cairo Thursday, killing 68 persons and wounding 100. It was the biggest strike of a week of air attacks across the Suez Canal by both Israeli and Egyptian planes.

ITALY WAS AGAIN WITHOUT a government following the resignation of Premier Mariano Rumor's Christian Democratic Party minority after only six months in control. Rumor was attempting to form a more stable coalition government of Christian Democrats, Socialists, Unitarian Socialists and Republicans.

IMPENDING LEGISLATION to relax Italy's divorce laws was denounced by Pope Paul VI who warned passage could result in renewed church-state strife.

THREE OF THE 23 PERSONS aboard an Egyptian jetliner were injured Monday when the plane crashed during takeoff from Reim Airport in Munich.

The War

American casualties in the Vietnam war for the week ended Feb. 7 included 95 killed, the highest toll in four weeks, the U.S. Command in Saigon announced Thursday. This despite Tet cease-fires declared by both sides. Wounded totaled 637.

PEACE TALKS IN PARIS hit rock-bottom with last week's session lasting but three minutes. In Saigon, Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird conferred with South Vietnam President Nguyen Van Thieu and reported afterward that Thieu had requested more material aid in the war against the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese. Laird also reiterated that President Nixon's gradual withdrawal of American troops from Vietnam is irreversible.

YOUR HOROSCOPE by JEANE DIXON

Forecast for Monday

Your birthday today: Tact and good judgment must be further developed to make the best use of the coming year's many opportunities. Material interests demand attention. If you are not primarily a materialist, this could be a time in which you achieve enough to make other years much less burdensome.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Move for improved working conditions, fringe benefits or a raise if you've earned one. Give special attention to contracts, agreements, leases, and other legal details. Your mail should bring good news.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Collect items that are owing or due to be paid to you. Purchasing activity is quite likely. Ask a favor where you are sure you need it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Strike a happy medium today, being neither very cautious or reckless. Bring your work or business situation into balance.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Start bright and early, make financial changes, rearrange and reschedule your work, lead to take into account new information. A quiet evening with friends and family can bring some inspiring ideas.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It is imperative now to clear up current and incomplete tasks. Close lagging deals. Strengthen or renew a long-standing business connection. New agents, employees are favored. If you are between jobs, this is a good time to seek one.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Concentration on your work comes easier today. Purchase personal accessories, clothing for long and satisfactory wear. Work a little closer with your colleagues, neighbors.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23): Call on connections or backers to support your plans. You can sell anything today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 21): This is a career-building day. If you will just keep at it, your intuition will lead the way. Readjust your plans for shifting circumstances, opportunities for improvement.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Collect on investments; put your holdings to profitable uses. Older relatives can help. Deal with ceremonies, formalities, legal procedures today in relation to your work.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): General cooperation is available. It is up to you to find ways to carry out the responsibility and more of the work. Your colleagues should show more initiative.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Review your situation logically early in the day; change your plans and schedules to make full use of the nearest opportunities. There may be a chance to bring long-held dreams into balance.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You can find interesting possibilities in places you seldom visit. Amongst people who are off your regular path. Settle long-range plans with male or associates.

THANKS YOU... MR. & MRS. CALIFORNIA

Thanks for your trust in REX L HODGES in 1969. We were busy!

Bernie Jones
Vice-Pres. of Rex L. Hodges

Our December 1969 sales volume more than doubled our December 1968 volume—

We've spent our evenings and Saturday mornings training and retraining and we're ready for 1970!

If you are thinking of buying in 1970, BUY!! You should have bought in 1969. ASK SOMEONE WHO DID.

If you are in the market to BUY OR SELL, would you give REX L HODGES a chance?—A chance to prove WE WANT YOUR BUSINESS — NO PRESSURE — BUT JUST CONSIDERATION.

We're ready! Choose the office nearest to where you would like to buy or sell — Each of our salesmen has a special list of LOW INTEREST FHA OR GI HOMES FOR RESALE (TAKE OVER LOANS)

OR

We are prepared to show you homes that are ready to be sold on new FHA or GI Terms.

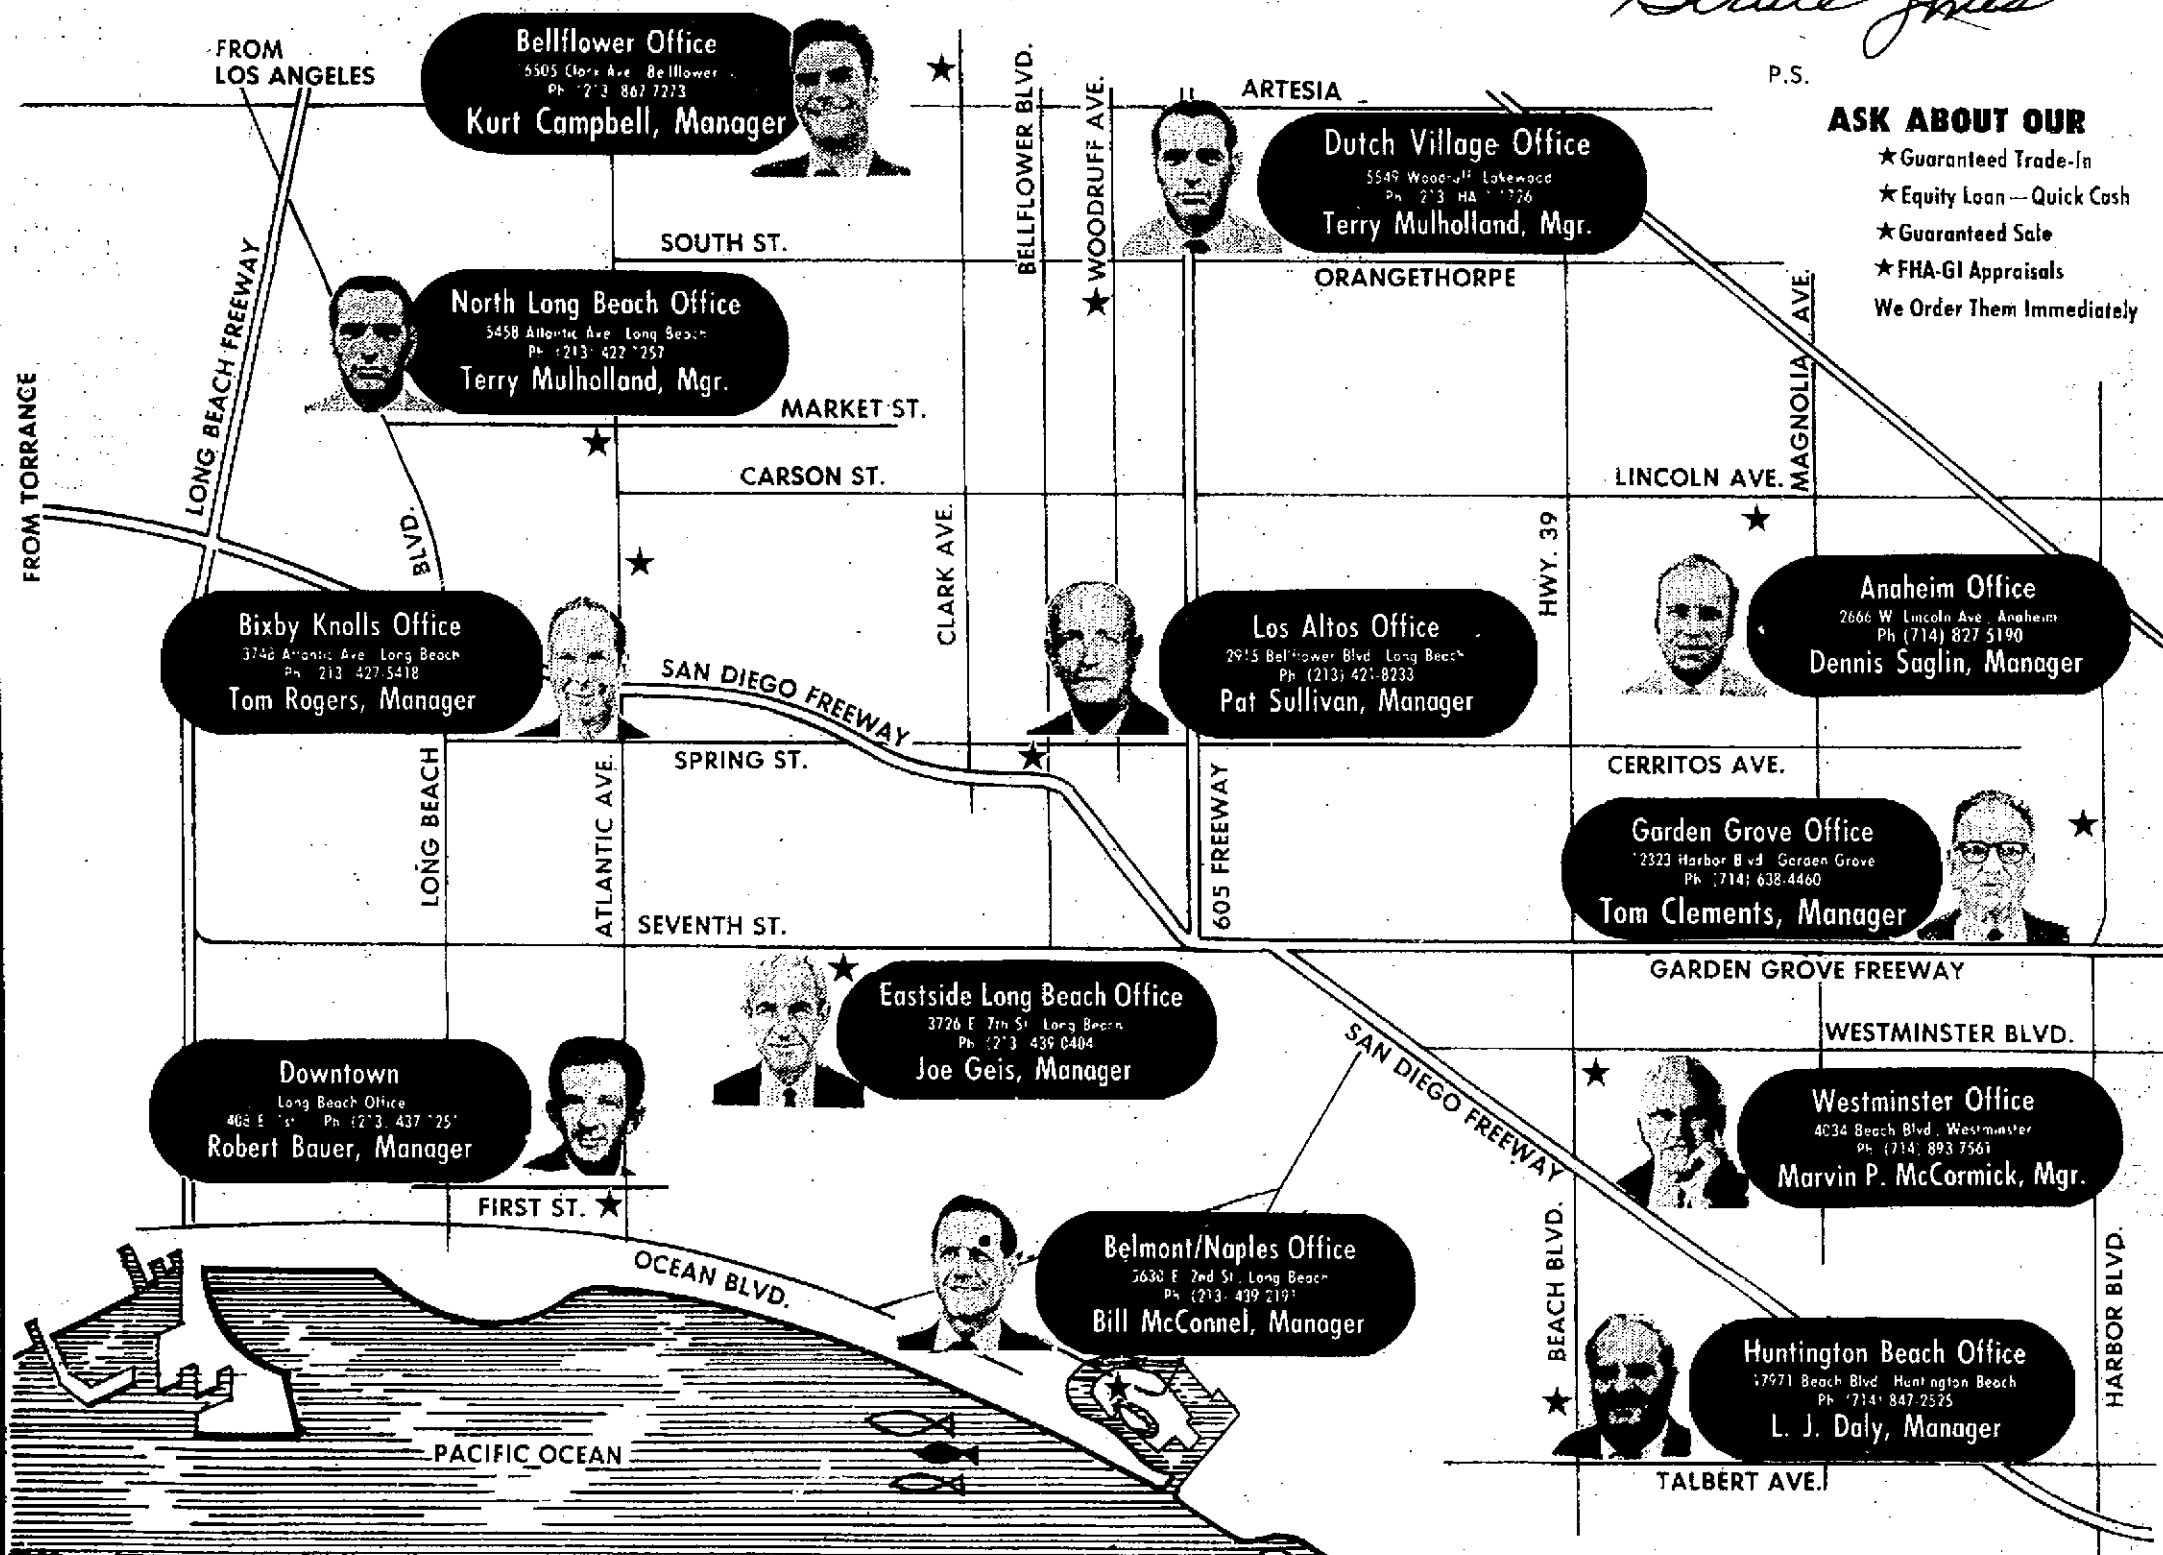

Give us a try—You'll be glad you did!

Napoles Scores 15th Round KO

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH
Staff Writer

Jose (Mantequilla) Napoles successfully defended his world welterweight championship at the Forum Saturday night as he brutally whipped the challenger, Ernie (Indian Red) Lopez, scoring a 15th-round knockout.

Lopez, a 4-1 underdog, was floored three times by the champion from Mexico City. The first knockdown came surprisingly in the first round when Lopez was showing all the initiative. Knockdown No. 2 came in the ninth heat, while the last canvas trip of the brave Ule Indian came in the final stanza.

The Los Angeles fighter struggled to his feet, but referee Larry Rozadilla decided enough punishment was enough and halted the slaughter at 2:38 of the 15th round.

The officials' scoring showed the oneness of the affair. The referee had Napoles ahead 12-2, judge Lee Grossman scored it 12-3 for the champion, and judge Rudy Jordan favored Napoles 11-4. This writer tallied it 13-3 for Jose.

A loud but not munny crowd of 17,091 packed the Forum and contributed to a gate of $228,417.

Lopez was actually in the fight for just four rounds and gave the audience the impression he was on the verge of a startling upset.

Red sprinted from his stool as the bell for the first round gonged and belted the stunned champion continuously for two minutes. Then Napoles figured that action was ridiculous and smashed Red with a vicious left hook. Red's crash to the canvas was no accident. Napoles had steam behind that punch.

Even though he started dripping blood from his nose in the next round, Lopez had control of rounds 2, 3 and 4. But that was all she wrote for the Indian as he insisted upon forcing the pace and thus playing right into the clever Cuban's hand.

Both fighters opened up with such fast paces that few expected the bout to go the distance, which it almost did.

Lopez had a big fourth round as he peppered Napoles on the ropes and incited war whoops from his supporters in the audience.

Napoles turned the tide of battle quickly in the fifth round. When Lopez came rushing from his corner as if he had notions of finishing off Napoles, the Cuban sprang into action and hammered Indian Red with painful left hooks and jabs.

The next round found Lopez bleeding extensively from the nose that had been hurt in the second frame. Napoles ripped into the Indian again in the seventh round and landed so many devastating left hooks that the challenger was groggy. This was a big two-point round for the champion.

Surprisingly Napoles was getting stronger as the fight progressed while Lopez was weakening by the round. Napoles again buckled the Indian in the eighth round, then sent the challenger to the deck again in the following stanza.

Although he pummeled Lopez throughout the fight with his bruising left hook, Napoles surprised Red with a bristling right hand jab which put down the challenger in the ninth.

In the 10th round, Red lived up to his name. His face was a mass of red from further damage to

ECKER, BOOKER GIVE UCLA LIFT Reserves Have Their Day

By LOEL SCHRADER
Staff Writer

When the basketball season started, it was generally believed UCLA was thin on reserves.

After 20 games, all victories, any doubt about the Bruin bench has been erased.

Reserves John Ecker and Kenny Booker were more than adequate replacements Saturday as the Bruins shot down Washington, 101-85, before a regional television audience and 12,117 fans at Pauley Pavilion.

Starter Curtis Rowe, who sustained an ankle sprain in Friday's victory over Washington State, was forced to leave the game after less than three minutes of action.

Ecker, who walked onto the UCLA campus without a scholarship three years ago, responded with 10 points and 14 points as his replacement.

Booker, former Long Beach Poly and City College star, helped make the Bruin fast break function smoothly and hit a career high of 13 points.

The record-keeping mounts for the Bruins, who now have won 24 consecutive games over a two-year period and are 66-1 at Pauley Pavilion since the arena was opened. They have won 112 of their last 114 games.

Washington coach Tex Winter had a few superlatives in describing the Bruins.

"The Bruins have all the ingredients of a great basketball team," said the Washington coach. "On a given night, any team can give them trouble, but I haven't seen anyone with the talent and consistency that UCLA has."

Winter, whose Kansas State team faced the national championship UCLA club of 1963-64 twice, called the Bruins "a better ball club than that one."

"They're a better rebounding club and have better outside shooting," he asserted. "Their guards don't penetrate as well as Walt Hazzard and Gail Goodrich, but over-all the team is better."

Winter wouldn't go as far in comparing the Bruins with the teams led to three national championships by Lew Alcindor.

"They play better as a unit, but I'm not going to say they are a better team," he said.

Winter viewed the first 66 seconds of the second half as the ruin of the Huskies Saturday.

Washington had played a splendid first half, leading the Bruins by five points at one time and having surprising success with a running game.

The Bruins clawed back to go ahead permanently, 33-31, on a twisting layin by center Steve Patterson and held a 42-36 halftime edge.

"We had plans to come out and run some patterns at the start of the second half," said Winter. "But UCLA got two quick baskets and instead of being down by six, we were back by 10. Our plan backfired."

By JIM MCCORMACK

FRESNO — Sam Robinson's turn-around jump, shot from 10 feet with two seconds remaining enabled Cal State Long Beach to edge host Fresno State, 69-67, before 2,400 fans Saturday night.

The triumph hiked the 49ers Pacific Coast Athletic Assn. record to 7-0 and Long Beach holds a three-game edge over the Bulldogs, Cal State L.A. and UC Santa Barbara with three league contests remaining.

The victory, Cal State's eighth by six points or less, pushed its win streak to 15 (second only to UCLA among the nation's university teams) and its season record to 20-3.

The last-second shot by Robinson also climaxed his most successful weekend this year. The 6-foot-7 senior, all-coast as a junior, scored 36 points in the 49ers' triumph over San Jose and Fresno while hitting 17 of 26 floor shots (65 per cent).

"You bet I'm back," Robinson promised after the contest. "And I'm going to stay."

"I've been working about an hour a night after practice to get my shooting touch back and now that it's here, it's not leaving again."

In a sentence, the 49ers were fortunate to win.

The Bulldogs, who had scored 100 or more points in each of their last four games, went after the 49ers with the same delay tactics that enabled them to hand Cal State its only league defeat (70-63) last season.

For the most part, that scheme worked again Saturday night as Fresno moved ahead of the 49ers 10-8 with 15:00 to go in the first half and never let the visitors get even until the game's final six minutes.

Cal State went ahead for the first time at 5:12 to go when Ray Grillon's free throw made the score 60-59.

Fresno regained the lead, 61-60, on Larry Hendricksen's 10-foot baseline

Snow Sporting Scores

Santa Anita Double Worth $1,039.80

Argentine import Snow Sporting, in his second race in the United States, captured the $129,500 Charles H. Strub Stakes at Santa Anita Saturday.

Laffit Pincay Jr. piloted the son of Snow Cap to victory in the mile and one-eighth race in 1:48 1/2 over a fast track as the favored Tell, with Willie Shoemaker riding, finished fourth in the field of 12 after setting the early pace.

Snow Sporting won an overnight race a week ago in his North American inaugural but still carried only a light weight of 114 pounds compared with 123 for Tell, who went off a 1-2 favorite.

The Argentine took the lead in the far turn and held off the challenges of Might and Comtal, a pair of longshots who finished ahead of Tell.

Now owned by Clement J. Hirsch of Laguna Beach, Snow Sporting became the first foreigner to win this $100,000 event for 4-year-olds since it started at Santa Anita as the Futurity and then as the Strub Stakes.

The triumph for the colt who went off at 3-1 odds was worth $84,500.

Originally the Strub was to be run at 1 1/4 miles on Jan. 31. But the distance was reduced because of the month-long strike which cut out the possibility of preliminary races.

Snow Sporting returned $8.60, $6 and $5.20 as he finished 1 1/4 lengths in front on a warm, sunny afternoon.

A crowd of 46,200 watched a day where favorites ran into trouble. It started with a daily double paying $1,039.80 for a $2 ticket when Second Picking ridden by Danny Velasquez returned $152 in the first race and Hurricane Gus, with Kenny Knapp in the irons, won the second at $10.40.

Napoles Scores 15th Round KO

By HANK HOLLINGWORTH Staff Writer

Jose (Mantequilla) Napoles successfully defended his world welterweight championship at the Forum Saturday night as he brutally whipped the challenger, Ernie (Indian Red) Lopez, scoring a 15th-round knockout.

Lopez, a 4-1 underdog, was floored three times by the champion from Mexico City. The first knockdown came surprisingly in the first round when Lopez was showing all the initiative. Knockdown No. 2 came in the ninth heat, while the last canvas trip of the brave Ute Indian came in the final stanza.

The Los Angeles fighter struggled to his feet, but referee Larry Rozadilla decided enough punishment was enough and halted the slaughter at 2:38 of the 15th round.

The officials' scoring showed the oneness of the affair. The referee had Napoles ahead 12-2, judge Lee Grossman scored it 12-3 for the champion, and judge Rudy Jordan favored Napoles 11-4. This writer tallied it 13-3 for Jose.

A loud but not unruly crowd of 17,091 packed the Forum and contributed to a gate of $228,417.

Lopez was actually in the fight for just four rounds and gave the audience the impression he was on the verge of a startling upset.

Red sprinted from his stool as the bell for the first round gonged and belted the stunned champion continuously for two minutes. Then Napoles figured that action was ridiculous and smashed Red with a vicious left hook. Red's crash to the canvas was no accident. Napoles had steam behind that punch.

Even though he started dripping blood from his nose in the next round, Lopez had control of rounds 2, 3 and 4. But that was all she wrote for the Indian as he insisted upon forcing the pace and thus playing right into the clever Cuban's hand.

Both fighters opened up with such fast paces that few expected the bout to go the distance, which it almost did.

Lopez had a big fourth round as he peppered Napoles on the ropes and incited war whoops from his supporters in the audience. Napoles turned the tide of battle quickly in the fifth round. When Lopez came rushing from his corner as if he had notions of finishing off Napoles, the Cuban sprang into action and hammered Indian Red with painful left hooks and jabs.

The next round found Lopez bleeding extensively from the nose that had been hurt in the second frame. Napoles ripped into the Indian again in the seventh round and landed so many devastating left hooks that the challenger was groggy. This was a big two-point round for the champion.

Surprisingly Napoles was getting stronger as the fight progressed while Lopez was weakening by the round. Napoles again buckled the Indian in the eighth round, then sent the challenger to the deck again in the following stanza.

Although he pummeled Lopez throughout the fight with his bruising left hook, Napoles surprised Red with a bristling right hand jab which put down the challenger in the ninth.

In the 10th round, Red lived up to his name. His face was a mass of red from further damage to

ECKER, BOOKER GIVE UCLA LIFT Reserves Have Their Day

By LOEL SCHRADER Staff Writer

When the basketball season started, it was generally believed UCLA was thin on reserves.

After 20 games, all victories, any doubt about the Bruin bench has been erased.

Reserves John Ecker and Kenny Booker were more than adequate replacements Saturday as the Bruins shot down Washington, 101-85, before a regional television audience and 12,117 fans at Pauley Pavilion.

Starter Curtis Rowe, who sustained an ankle sprain in Friday's victory over Washington State, was forced to leave the game after less than three minutes of action.

Ecker, who walked onto the UCLA campus without a scholarship three years ago, responded with 10 points and 14 points as his replacement.

Booker, former Long Beach Poly and City College star, helped make the Bruin fast break function smoothly and hit a career high of 13 points.

The record-keeping mounts for the Bruins, who now have won 24 consecutive games over a two-year period and are 66-1 at Pauley Pavilion since the arena was opened. They have won 112 of their last 114 games.

Washington coach Tex Winter had a few superlatives in describing the Bruins.

"The Bruins have all the ingredients of a great basketball team," said the Washington coach. "On a given night, any team can give them trouble, but I haven't seen anyone with the talent and consistency that UCLA has."

Winter, whose Kansas State team faced the national championship UCLA club of 1963-64 twice, called the Bruins "a better ball club than that one."

"They're a better rebounding club and have better outside shooting," he asserted. "Their guards don't penetrate as well as Walt Hazzard and Gail Goodrich, but over-all the team is better."

Winter wouldn't go as far in comparing the Bruins with the teams led Indeed within 5:26 of the second half, the Huskies were trailing by 16 at 59-43 and UCLA's lead reached 25 before coach John Wooden began substituting for the substitutes.

Wooden called off UCLA's full-court zone press early, and, in a surprising bit of strategy for a man who loves man-to-man defense, employed a straight zone in the final nine minutes.

"Our full-court press wasn't doing the job," he explained. "I don't know what you'd call the zone we went too late in the game. It wasn't a 2-3. It's more like a 1-1-2-1 or a 1-2-1-1."

Wooden said he tried a zone "to get a little game work on it."

"We may use it next week (Oregon and Oregon State)," he said. "It protects the basket a little better."

Wooden was more eager to talk about Ecker and Booker.

"When it was obvious Rowe couldn't do the job, Ecker came on played real fine ball," he said. "Booker also did an excellent job."

to three national championships by Lew Alcindor.

"They play better as a unit, but I'm not going to say they are a better team," he said.

Winter viewed the first 66 seconds of the second half as the ruination of the Huskies Saturday.

Washington had played a splendid first half, leading the Bruins by five points at one time and having surprising success with a running game.

The Bruins clawed back to go ahead permanently, 33-31, on a twisting layin by center Steve Patterson and held a 42-36 halftime edge.

"We had plans to come out and run some patterns at the start of the second half," said Winter. "But UCLA got two quick baskets and instead of being down by six, we were back by 10. Our plan backfired."

Santa Anita Double Worth $1,039.80

Argentine import Snow Sporting, in his second race in the United States, captured the $129,500 Charles H. Strub Stakes at Santa Anita Saturday.

Originally the Strub was to be run at 1 1/4 miles on Jan. 31. But the distance was reduced because of the month-long strike which cut out the possibility of preliminary races.

Snow Sporting returned $8.60, $6 and $5.20 as he finished 1 1/4 lengths in front on a warm, sunny afternoon.

Phooey, Philly! Check Our Lineup

Since the theme of the moment is boxing what with the Naples-Lopez welterweight title brawl Saturday night and the Frazier-Ellis heavyweight affair Monday evening, we thought we'd present a very off-beat column this morning by inspecting the wares of Long Beach sportswriters.

The theme was prompted by an article in a tabloid named Action, which is published in dirty, old Philadelphia. The writer, who designed not to use his byline, took it upon himself to rate Philly's sportswriters.

"Have you ever wondered how to tell a good sportswriter from a poor one?" the man began. "Well, it's easy. You can spot the bad one a mile away. The good man is a little harder to find."

Eight paragraphs later after the fellow either praised or slashed a dozen Philly scribes, he explained: "The bad ones are the ones who use 'diminutive' instead of 'little.' And 'bespectacled' instead of 'wearing glasses.' Or have the team return after a disastrous road trip 'to the friendly confines' of Connie Mack Stadium."

"Or have 'four-ply smashes negotiating the right field barrier' and have Orlando Cepeda playing the 'initial hassock' and can't write Bobby Orr's name without prefacing it with 'great.' Or use 'comprised' when they mean 'composed of.'"

"Then there are the ones who use all the big words they know because they think it makes them sound intelligent. What it resembles is that the writer opened the dictionary, picked out 12 new words and built a story around it."

The chap didn't endear himself to newspaper reporters when he wrote that "... the best newspaper writing in Philly is being done on the sports pages, not up front."

Anyway, we were goaded into this column by this statement: "Luckily for Philly fans, there probably are more good sportswriters here than in any other section of the country."

Hak-kaff, or whatever Major Hoople used to say. We've got a heckuva crew here in Long Beach. Just continue reading.

IN ALPHABETICAL ORDER:

Don Culpepper — Probably the nation's No. 1 field and stream scribe. There's no fish worth his salt that Donnell hasn't encountered. In his "spare" time he also dashes out some paragraphs on the boat racing events, no small potatoes in these parts.

Dave Daniel — Rated top junior college reporter in the area. Lives and dies with City College, but still manufactures a mature story, win or lose, with or without tears.

John Dixon — Top track and field scientist around. Has so many record books he maintains a file cabinet in his living room. Not certain whether to blast the NCAA or AAU next, but explodes dynamite beneath either group when the occasion demands.

Doug Ives — Absolutely no peer as pro basketball writer. Unlike Chickie-Baby Hearn, voice of the Lakers, Doug doesn't resort to such trite statements as taking somebody into the popcorn machine. Has tendency to favor Jerry West, but why not?

Al Larson — Heart and soul of the Rams. Yet an objective writer who doesn't let his personal feelings creep into his daily stories. For instance, the death of a salesman was a minor league incident compared to Al's pains after the Rams bowed to Minnesota in the playoffs. He already had secured his press box ticket to the Super Bowl thing.

DAVE LEWIS — The "old master" with a mental background file second to none. Rarely uses the needle, but many consider that a major asset. A steady, day-in and day-out columnist and particularly an expert in the world of golf.

Jim McCormack — He's living on the right side of the mountain these days covering Cal State Long Beach. But prior to the last season or two, James lived with the 49ers on the wrong side of the mountain. But he survived those "dog days" and came through with the same flying colors he's flashing today.

Chuck Mediek — The eyes and ears of the sports world. No one anywhere can memorize more telephone numbers and know more people than our softball, junior baseball and telephone expert. He's uncanny.

Don Merry — Recipient of the Medal of Honor after covering the Angels last season. Donald is ready to receive another — he's covering the Angels again. A top baseball reporter.

Ken Pivernetz — An expert chronicler of high school sports. Regarded as the best in this hotbed area of prep activities.

GARY RAUSCH — Our all-around man just back from service. He can write a brilliant head on the desk and can handle on-the-spot coverage with equal ability. He's our Mr. Everything.

Rich Roberts — The Southland's Mr. Hockey, the sport's senior scribe hereabouts. He's shedding crocodile tears because of the Kings' pathetic performances this season, but that doesn't interfere with his game-by-game analysis. The isn't an easy task this campaign.

Loel Schrader — Old dad is by all odds the most competent and efficient reporter of college activities on the West Coast. He may injure the feelings of people at UCLA or USC now and then, but he's not paid to be their public relations man.

Gordon Verrell — This man stuck with the Dodgers through thick-and-thin last season and as he's ready to embark for Vero Beach, he sees rays of hope for his boys. Gordie didn't cry in his beer, either, when the Dodgers fell on their O'Malley cushions near season's end in '69.

Al Wolfe — One year ago he didn't know the difference between a Porsche and a Ferrari, but now he's almost as astute in the auto racing game as J. C. Agajanian.

Phooey Philly. I'll take our gang against yours any day.

The Lakers, who could have taken over the loop leadership from idle Atlan-

Bill Busenius and Richard Wader.

Late in the contest, even some of the most faithful Trojan backers were ready to turn the pistols on themselves after USC had blown a 16-point lead.

The contest commenced in rough and rugged fashion, the Trojans seeking revenge for an 89-72 drubbing in the Palouse last weekend. The lead changed hands seven times before Dennis Layton turned the ball over with 14:33 elapsed.

as both teams followed by missing three offensive shots.

Shaler Halimon, who scored four baskets for the Bulls in the last four minutes, took a shot with 15 seconds remaining but the ball hit the rim and bounced high in the air. Roberson reached up and tipped the ball over his head and into the basket to give the Bulls a 114-113 edge.

Tom Boerwinkle was credited with the basket. Baylor led the Lakers with 34 points to give him 232 (33.1 avg.) in the last seven games.

The Lakers, who play at Milwaukee today in the national TV game of the week, have now lost three games in succession to the Bulls — all on the road. Keith Erickson was held out with ankle sprains.

Low Alcindor poured in 41 points as Milwaukee defeated Boston, 121-117, to keep pace with New York. The Knicks needed clutch plays from Cazzie Russell and Dave DeBusschere in the final minute to hold off Philadelphia, 116-114.

Elvin Hayes scored 31 points in the first half as the San Diego Rockets walloped the San Francisco Warriors 141-123.

Layton, the hub in the Trojan attack, said something to Busenius and the silver-haired official whistled a technical foul.

Then the stubby USC guard hurled the basketball at Busenius' feet and the veteran West Coast referee threw Layton out of the game.

Busenius and Wader drew a chorus of boos and debris at that point and the abuse continued the rest of the evening. The stripe-shirted pair needed a police escort to leave the arena 15 minutes after the final buzzer.

"I don't think anyone can determine how much Dennis' loss cost us," moaned coach Bob Boyd afterward.

"I asked him, 'What do you have to do to get a foul call,'" said Layton. Busenius claimed Layton called him a profane name.

Boyd offered no excuses for his team's disastrous turnaround. "We quit playing after we got that lead. We got careless, fouled offensively, turned the ball over repeatedly and just plain gave it away."

USC held a 54-38 advantage with 12:07 remaining. Ten minutes and 10 turns later, the Cougars were out in front for keeps, 64-59.

USC had gone with but a single field goal for 10 minutes and been outscored 26-5. The Trojans had gone to a zone and the Cougars shot their eyes out from the corners.

"When you have a lead but are in foul trouble," Boyd strategized, "you'll go to a zone because it takes longer for the opposition to get off a shot and keeps the clock running."

"Our problem was, they got nothing but unguarded shots."

Those uncontested fielders helped WSU to a 57.8 field goal percentage. Cougar Dan Steward, the smallest player on the court at 6-feet, scored all of his 10 points in the final 7½ minutes on three 20-footers and two layins off the fastbreak.

Dennis Hogg led all scorers with 21 markers. George Watson and Paul Westphal tied for Trojan high-point honors at 15.

Nobody Knows the Troubles Ellis Has Had

"Do my kids know who I am? Oh yeah, they know. They read about it. They know I'm a fighter . . . that I'm the heavyweight champion."—Jimmy Ellis.

The lead tenor of the Riverview Baptist Spiritual Singers will be $150,000 richer in another few hours, but nobody knows the trouble he's seen making it.

He beat Cassius Clay before anybody ever heard of Muhammad Ali but it didn't count. Later he thought he could still beat him but knew he wasn't supposed to.

Then when the notion that unpatriotic black militants shouldn't hold titles became popular, the World Boxing Assn. conducted a 16-man tournament to choose Clay's successor. The tournament immediately became a joke when Joe Frazier, the logical favorite, said he couldn't be bothered. The WBA rummaged around for somebody else to fill out the bracket and settled on Jimmy Ellis, who won the thing.

But did that really make him heavyweight champion of the world?

"Well, I know I am," says Ellis. "I mean, I went through a legitimate tournament. I beat all the top contenders."

All except Frazier, who shrewdly wrapped up the acclaim of only six states but including the one that counts as far as heavyweight titles are concerned — New York.

THAT'S WHERE Ellis will find himself fighting Frazier Monday night, not exactly like the mountain going to Muhammad, because he's retired, but an ironic circumstance that is turning out just the way Joe planned it.

"This is the state that made him a champ," Ellis growls. "This is just like his hometown. But I don't let that worry me or nothin'. I'm not worried about no hometown decision."

Ellis has tried to wear his paper crown well. He hasn't fought in 17 months but it's not all his fault.

"Fights have kinda been fallin' out from under me," he says.

He was matched with Henry Cooper in London last year but the Englishman started bleeding even before the fight. In December he was booked against Gregorio Peralta in Argentina, which failed to stifle a national yawn. The promoters canceled out for lack of interest.

The last time he fought he outpointed Floyd Patterson in Stockholm, his only defense, but got his nose broken for the trouble. He still wasn't breathing right a few months later when he had hoped to meet Frazier, so Frazier fought Jerry Quarry — who had been thrashed by Ellis in the WBA final!

"Just about everybody in the tournament that lost is out there makin' money," Ellis says bitterly.

SEATTLE (U) — Roy Hamey, former general manager of three major league baseball clubs, has been appointed by the American League to oversee operations of the Seattle Pilots, it was announced Saturday.

In a related move, Marvin Milkes was elevated to the post of executive vice president and general manager of the club, Dewey Soriano, president, announced.

Hamey, former general manager of the New York Yankees, Pittsburgh Pirates and Philadelphia Phillies, currently is on leave from his scouting job with the Yankees. He stepped down as Yankees' general manager in 1964.

The American League, at its owners' meeting in Chicago earlier in the week, loaned the Pilots $650,000 to help see them through spring training and into the season. The present owners were retained.

"I am delighted Mr. Hamey is coming here," Milkes said. "The league was intent on putting someone in Seattle to oversee the operation and I asked Mr. Hamey. He will only be in Seattle part time and his appointment is of a temporary nature."

Jim Fregosi, last of the original Angels, has agreed to terms for the 1970 season, general manager Dick Walsh announced Saturday.

Lotz' Water Shot Costs Tucson Lead

TUCSON, Ariz. (U) — John Lotz pumped one in the water on the 18th hole Saturday and let Lee Trevino and Bob Murphy take over the third-round lead in the $100,000 Tucson Open golf tournament.

Lotz, a non-winner in six years on the pro tour who had a remarkable 64 Friday, held a two-stroke lead when he stepped to the 18th tee.

But he put his drive in a lake, came out and later three putted for a triple bogey seven that dropped him a shot back of Murphy and Trevino.

Lotz had a two-over-par 74 on the 7,200-yard Tucson National Golf Club course, a layout that was made much tougher by blustery, gusty winds.

Trevino, the defending champion, and Murphy, each had a par 72 for 206, 10 under for the tournament. Lotz was tied at 207 with veteran Tommy Jacobs, who had a third-round 70.

Bob Lunn, 70, was at 208 with Phil Rodgers, 71, and Charles Coady, 69, another shot back at 209.

"I've never seen a golf course turn around like this one," said Murphy. "It was a regular Jeckyl and Hyde. The wind was responsible."

"FRAZIER ISN'T THE STRONGEST FIGHTER around despite his knockout record," Dundee went on. "Jimmy owns all the tools to beat him and there isn't a fighter in the business today who can adapt himself to another man's style as quickly as Ellis."

"Yes," Dundee admitted, "Jimmy might be able to stop him, but we've trained him for a 15-round fight and a larger ring than the 18-footer to be used in Madison Square Garden Monday night.

"No," he said. "It's plenty big enough. Jimmy isn't going to wage a 'running fight' anyway. That's the one sure way of getting beat by Joe."

A running opponent can't set himself to punch, and that's the way Frazier likes it. He goes by a certain beat and the thing Jimmy must do is to throw him off that beat, cut his momentum and rhythm and make him shorten his stride and reduce some of his punching power.

"He can do this with jabs and by beating Frazier to the punch when he tries to move inside."

Fregosi, who will turn 28 three days prior to the Angel opener in Seattle April 7, was given a slight salary increase for his 10th season with the team.

In the late-lamented 1969 season, Fregosi hiked his batting average 16 points, boosted his homer output from 9 to 12, cut down his strikeouts from 101 to 85 and coaxed rival pitchers for 93 walks, 33 more than the previous season.

During the winter, Fregosi made his first fling at managing a memorable one, guiding Ponce of the Puerto Rican league to the pennant and playoff title.

It was the city's first championship in 27 years and Fregosi was immediately enshrined as a hero.

"I enjoyed it," Fregosi said, "but now I know why managers turn gray. I lost 15 pounds and I didn't even play much."

Fregosi had several Angels with him at Ponce and gave excellent reports on second baseman Sandy Alomar, outfielder Jim Hicks and pitcher Clyde Wright.

Wright, dejected and ineffective last season, bounced back with a 10-4 mark, prompting Fregosi to remark, "I'll be quite surprised if he isn't our fourth starter this year."

"Hicks was really something and Alomar was a delight," the boy manager continued.

Hicks, whom manager Lefty Phillips has promised a solid shot at the currently vacant right field post, batted .293 and was second in the league in homers with 13. Alomar was the club's batting leader with a .311 mark.

Jimmy's check Monday night, the same as Frazier's, was a long time coming. He'll be 30 next week and it wasn't too long ago when he was feeding Mary, Etta and four kids by letting Clay beat him up at $200 a week.

"I knew I could beat him then," says Ellis, who had split a pair of amateur bouts with Ali when the two were growing up in Louisville, Ky. "But I knew there wasn't no point in it so I stayed cool and played my role."

All said he will give his championship belt to Monday night's winner but Ellis says, "I think he ought to keep it, really. It's his belt. He won it. We'll get our own belt."

The 6-1 odds on Frazier say that Jimmy will be getting more than his share of belts but, then, Ali was a 10-1 underdog when he fought Sonny Liston for the title and Ellis was given little chance in all of his WBA tournament matches.

But just in case, he's taking care of his money. "Well, I have to. I've got a family to look out for, and nobody's gonna watch out for 'em but me."

NOW THERE are six kids, including two boys, and Ellis is making payments on a large home in southeast Louisville.

"It's a colonial-type home," he says proudly. "We've been in it nearly two years now — five bedrooms, a full basement, livin' room, dinin' room, playin' room and a big front yard. It's real nice."

There also is a two-car garage but Ellis owns only a '69 Chevy station wagon. He goes light on clothes, too. "I buy what I think I should have and what my family needs," he says.

Without earning a nickel, Ellis figures he was away from home "about eight months last year. That's quite a bit y'know. I'm gonna bring my four oldest kids to New York, just to be around me. They won't go to the fight 'cause they're too young."

His fruitless travels also interrupted the performances of the Riverview Baptist Spiritual Singers.

"We've been singing now for about nine or 10 years," Jimmy says, "me and my wife and my sister and brother-in-law, and we've got six other members who are close friends. I sing tenor and my brother-in-law plays guitar."

"We sing around different churches and auditoriums. All we do is gospel. We did a Jonathon Winters show in '68. That was the only time on national TV, but we've been on local TV quite a bit."

"We've got an album out by Atlantic Record Co. and a 45. I look for it to go pretty good after all this is over. I'll know more about it Monday night."

he's as ready as he could be. He's not only in great shape, but his attitude is right."

The prime reason the odds have been boosted to 6-1 by bookmakers trying to attract Ellis money is that Jimmy has long been known as a "six-round fighter."

They don't think he has the stamina to stand up to Frazier's relentless attack for 15 rounds. He is referred to as a "fattened-up light-heavyweight."

Ellis, who has spent more time in the ring with Cassius Clay than any other man, is a boxer adept at the skill of keeping rivals off-balance . . . and this will be the key to Monday's fight when Frazier "comes out smokin'" as usual at the opening bell."

FRAZIER KEEPS OPPONENTS under tremendous pressure. He fights three minutes of every round; never gives a rival a "breather."

Joe, undefeated in 25 fights, has scored 21 knockouts. He doesn't stop 'em with one punch, "at with 100. Most of his opponents have dropped from sheer exhaustion as much as anything else."

Frazier's spectacular record is built on his two-fisted attack which has been likened to that of former triple-crown champion Henry Armstrong and to that of the late heavyweight king, Rocky Marciano.

Perhaps Frazier's most impressive showing came against George Chuvalo, who once went 15 rounds with Clay.

Joe "destroyed" Chuvalo in the same manner that "I expect to destroy Ellis."

Frazier had Chuvalo helpless and staggering when the bout was mercifully stopped in four rounds.

DAVE LEWIS
Sports Editor

Frazier and Ellis have met two common foes in the past two years—Oscar Bonavena and Jerry Quarry.

Joe met Bonavena twice in their first bout in 1966, he proved beyond any doubt that he could take punishment and come back.

Bonavena had him down twice in the second round, but Frazier came back to hammer out a close decision.

In their second encounter 14 months ago, Frazier defended his version of the crown and won a unanimous 15-round verdict, but couldn't put Oscar away after hitting him with everything but the ring posts in the first 10 rounds. Bonavena actually made a bit of a comeback in the late rounds after Joe punched himself out.

Ellis gained a 12-round decision over Bonavena in the semifinals of the WBA tournament, but it wasn't impressive despite the fact Jimmy floored the big Argentine fighter twice.

AFTER PILING UP A BIG LEAD in the early rounds, Ellis was hard-pressed in the late rounds to hold off Oscar. Bonavena was coming on strong in the 10th round when Jimmy landed the punch that saved the fight.

Bonavena hurt Ellis with a right hand, drove him into a corner and moved in for what looked like the kill, but Jimmy bounced off the ropes with a looping right to floor him; then hung on to win.

Some felt Quarry could have taken Ellis in their WBA title fight had he applied pressure on Jimmy, who won a 13-round decision. Quarry never had a chance against Frazier.

Off those fights, it looks like another victory for Frazier even though Ellis may have the style best suited to beat him.

We'll call it for Joe "inside 12 rounds."

Although Joe Frazier looks like a cinch to knock out Jimmy Ellis inside of 10 rounds, many boxing men believe the odds favoring Frazier in the Monday night's championship showdown are out of line.

Some think Ellis would be a good bet if the odds were as short as 8-5 or 9-5.

It is their contention that Frazier has not yet whipped a boxer the caliber of Ellis, who is a rare combination of a classic boxer as well as an extremely dangerous puncher.

Thus, when one of the finest tacticians in the boxing game — Angelo Dundee — flatly says Ellis is going to win, you at least stop to hear what he has to say.

Dundee is a bit prejudiced. He's Ellis' manager. However, he does make some big points in discussing Jimmy's chances.

"He'll beat Frazier with slickness and by out-thinking him," Angie declares.

In a telephonic interview with Dundee from New York the past week, we asked him if he had held out for a larger ring than the 18-footer to be used in Madison Square Garden Monday night.

"No," he said. "It's plenty big enough. Jimmy isn't going to wage a 'running fight' anyway. That's the one sure way of getting beat by Joe.

Bonavena actually made a bit of a comeback in the late rounds after Joe punched himself out.

Ellis gained a 12-round decision over Bonavena in the semifinals of the WBA tournament, but it wasn't impressive despite the fact Jimmy floored the big Argentine fighter twice.

AFTER PILING UP A BIG LEAD in the early rounds, Ellis was hard-pressed in the late rounds to hold off Oscar. Bonavena was coming on strong in the 10th round when Jimmy landed the punch that saved the fight.

Bonavena hurt Ellis with a right hand, drove him into a corner and moved in for what looked like the kill, but Jimmy bounced off the ropes with a looping right to floor him; then hung on to win.

Some felt Quarry could have taken Ellis in their WBA title fight had he applied pressure on Jimmy, who won a 15-round decision. Quarry never had a chance against Frazier.

Off those fights, it looks like another victory for Frazier even though Ellis may have the style best suited to beat him.

We'll call it for Joe "Inside 12 rounds."

49ERS WIN 'HANS' DOWN

By ALLEN WOLFE

Hans Fassnacht unofficially became captain of the Cal State Long Beach "Foreign Legion" Saturday as he swept to three victories, leading the 49ers to a 62-51 upset victory over UCLA in a non-conference swimming meet at Belmont Plaza Olympic pool.

A small but partisan turnout of 800 fans almost brought the two-year-old structure in Belmont Shore down with a continuous din of shrieks and applause during each event.

Fassnacht, 20-year-old exchange student and Olympic veteran from West Germany, set two school records during his three heats as the 49ers, ranked No. 5 nationally, turned the tables on the No. 4 ranked Bruins.

The meet, billed as a "minor Olympics" in this off-Olympic year, was to have featured a duel between Fassnacht and UCLA's Olympic silver medalist Mike Burton in three events — the 1,000 and 500 freestyles and the 200 butterfly. It didn't happen.

Instead, Fassnacht met his UCLA counterpart only once — the 200 butterfly — and won going away.

Holder of the world's 400 meter freestyle record at 4:04.0, Fassnacht reeled off a lightning fast 1:54.11 to break the school standard of 1:55.0 set by Pat Yelovich in 1968. Fassnacht's teammate, Hans Ljungberg of Sweden, also beat Burton to the timer at 1:57.38.

Fassnacht splashed to easy victories in the 1,000 freestyle and 500 freestyle events. He eclipsed his own school mark of 9:35.00 in the 1,000 with a time of 9:34.53 and won the 500 free at 4:39.24 — a full 10 seconds ahead of former Lakewood High sensation Steve Genter, now swimming for UCLA.

"I was prepared for a tough meet, but it didn't turn out that way," said Fassnacht.

Fassnacht after his swimming Hat Trick. "I'm kind of disappointed that Burton didn't swim in all my events — it would have been interesting."

TRIPLE THREAT MAN

Hans Fassnacht of Cal State Long Beach, a West German transfer student, pulls for home in 1,000 freestyle event Saturday afternoon at Belmont Plaza Olympic pool. Fassnacht clocked 9:34.53 to start 49ers on road to 61-52 victory over No. 4 ranked UCLA. Fassnacht went on to win two other events.

49ERS WIN 'HANS' DOWN

By ALLEN WOLFE

Hans Fasnacht unofficially became captain of the Cal State Long Beach "Foreign Legion" Saturday as he swept to three victories, leading the 49ers to a 62-51 upset victory over UCLA in a non-conference swimming meet at Belmont Plaza Olympic pool.

A small but partisan turnout of 800 fans almost brought the two-year-old structure in Belmont Shore down with a continuous din of shrieks and applause during each event.

Fasnacht, 20-year-old exchange student and Olympic veteran from West Germany, set two school records during his three heats as the 49ers, ranked No. 5 nationally, turned the tables on the No. 4 ranked Bruins.

The meet, billed as a "minor Olympics" in this off-Olympic year, was to have featured a duel between Fasnacht and UCLA's Olympic silver medalist Mike Burton in three events — the 1,000 and 500 freestyles and the 200 butterfly. It didn't happen.

Instead, Fasnacht met his UCLA counterpart only once — the 200 butterfly — and won going away.

Holder of the world's 400 meter freestyle record at 4:04.0, Fasnacht reeled off a lightning fast 1:54.11 to break the school standard of 1:55.0 set by Pat Yelovich in 1968. Fasnacht's teammate, Hans Ljungberg of Sweden, also beat Burton to the timer at 1:57.38.

Fasnacht splashed to easy victories in the 1,000 freestyle and 500 freestyle events. He eclipsed his own school mark of 9:35.00 in the 1,000 with a time of 9:34.53 and won the 500 free at 4:39.24 — a full 10 seconds ahead of former Lakewood High sensation Steve Genter, now swimming for UCLA.

"I was prepared for a tough meet, but it didn't turn out that way," said

Fasnacht after his swimming hat trick. "I'm kind of disappointed that Burton didn't swim in all my events — it would have been interesting."

EVEL KNieVEL... Still Riding High

Nine Operations Hasn't Slowed Motorcycling Daredevil Knievel Knows, Fears No Evel

OAKLAND — Evel Knievel says he has given up on his idea of jumping across the Grand Canyon on a motorcycle.

Not because of his nine major operations, you understand, and certainly not because of the Hell's Angels. The reason he claims, is that U.S. Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., doesn't want him to. Evel makes claim without elaboration — and a grin.

"He's a thorn in my side," Knievel says. "He just doesn't want me jumping across the Grand Canyon."

At the age of 31 and with four years of his uniquely hazardous career behind him, this walking testament to modern medicine with the mellifluous name has become nothing less than a legend to a widespread group of fans who have made Evel Knievel a rich, if scarred, man.

This weekend in Sacramento, where Knievel will give an exhibition, the preliminary shooting of a movie based on his life will begin with George Hamilton as Knievel.

If Hollywood wanted an actor who looked like Knievel to play the part, it made a mistake. The role should have gone to Paul Newman.

Knievel's standard bit is to send his motorcycle off an inclined ramp over a group of cars standing side by side, hoping to land on another ramp at the far end. The record is 17 cars, but he plans to try for 18 soon.

Of course, Knievel doesn't always make it. Nine times he has been injured so seriously that he has needed a major operation.

"I figure that if we learn by our mistakes," he says, "I'm nine times better than anybody else."

Knievel walks with a cane and among the souvenirs of his many stays in hospitals is a steel plate on the outside of his left leg that stretches from his knee to his hip. It has had to be replaced three times.

His most serious accident, he says, occurred two years ago in Las Vegas, Nev., where "I had my hip shoved right through my pelvis and had a brain concussion. I was out for four days. They thought I wasn't going to make it."

His medical expenses over the last four years total some $31,000 and, with famed attorney Melvin Belli representing him, he is contesting bills that amount to about $10,000 more.

Knievel says he never gets less than $10,000 per performance and claims that last year he made $225,000. He is not a man to downgrade what he thinks he's worth.

"I drew 15,000 people three years ago in Las Vegas," he says. "That's more than Frank Sinatra and John F. Kennedy drew there. I drew more people to the Cow Palace than the Republican Convention."

The latter performance also drew a battalion of police and a couple of ambulances to the arena in San Francisco recently when the Hell's Angels — a group of motorcyclists Knievel abhors because "they give motorcycle riders a bad name" — took exception to some of his remarks about them.

Knievel explains what happened this way: "The announcer at the Cow Palace read a quote that said if Evel Knievel jumped the Grand Canyon, it would set the Hell's Angels back 20 years."

"They started making obscene gestures and one guy threw a tire iron at me," adding that he punched the Angel. "He got back up and two of them jumped me. They all left in ambulances."

The dream of Knievel's life had been to jump the Grand Canyon on a jet-powered cycle.

But with the government discouraging that — at Goldwater's request, Knievel thinks — he has a new plan.

"I'm going to build a ramp out over Hell's Canyon in Idaho, which is a mile deep and a mile across, he says.

"A guy named Evel should jump Hell's Canyon anyhow," he said, and he limped away — laughing.

Pacers Catch Stars at Wire

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (UPI) — Bob Netolicky popped in six consecutive points in the closing minutes to help lift Indiana to a 109-103 American Basketball Assn. victory over the Stars Saturday night.

The Pacers, the Eastern Division leader, trailed most of the way and were down early in the fourth period, 90-82.

Indiana then reeled off 11 successive points for a 93-90 lead. Willie Wise of the Stars then scored on a tip-in and a lay-in to give L.A. a 94-93 lead.

Netolicky then hit a jumper, dropped in two free throws and scored on another jumper to give Indiana a 99-94 advantage and the Pacers led the rest of the way.

Mel Daniels led Indiana with 27 points. Roger Brown got 26 and Netolicky wound up with 25.

George Stone led the Stars with 25 and Wise added 23.

The Stars return home today, facing the Kentucky Colonels at 3 p.m. at the Sports Arena.

Canadian Girl Stuns French

VAL GARDENA, Italy (UPI) — Fifteen-year-old Betsy Clifford of Canada celebrated St. Valentine's Day Saturday by becoming the new sweetheart of the ski circuit when she upset the favored French to win the women's giant slalom title at the world Alpine championships.

Major Leaguers Ready

Associated Press

Eight new managers will be on the job this week when the major league baseball clubs open their training camps in Florida and Arizona.

The San Diego Padres will be first off the mark with the first group due to report today to manager Preston Gomez in Yuma. The serious job of improving on the Padres' sorry 52-110 record will begin Feb. 22 when the entire group is due to assemble.

Both the world champion New York Mets and the defending American League champion Baltimore Orioles will have first squads in camp Tuesday. The Mets, hoping to follow up their success of 1969 with another National League pennant, again will be at St. Petersburg, Fla. The Orioles, acting to take out some of their October frustration on the other American League teams, will be at Miami.

The odds makers quote the Orioles as 2-1 favorites to win the pennant and even money to take the Eastern Division. Oakland and Minnesota are bracketed as even money choices in the league's Western Division but 3-1 for the flag.

Despite the Mets' success they are listed 4-1 on the morning line. St. Louis, San Francisco and Atlanta are favored at 7-2.

The camp openings stretch over the next nine days with the Angels and Cleveland Indians the last to report Feb. 23.

The first exhibition games are listed for March 1-4 when San Diego visits Mexico City. The New York Yankees play Washington at Pompano Beach, Fla. March 5 and by the weekend of March 7-8 everybody will be playing.

In addition to the Padres, two other clubs will be making a trip to Mexico. Pittsburgh will be south of the border March 12-15 and Baltimore March 16-18. In addition, the San Francisco Giants will make an unprecedented Japanese tour in the middle of the training season. The Giants will play in Japan from March 22 to March 29.

Five of the new managers are in the American League, four of them in the Western Division. Bill Rigney has taken over from Billy Martin who led the Minnesota Twins to the Western championship. Charley Metro succeeds Joe Gordon at Kansas City, Dave Bristol, fired by Cincinnati follows Joe Schultz at troubled Seattle, and John McNamara, who replaced Hank Bauer at Oakland with two weeks to go in 1969, will continue. The only change in the East is Eddie Kasko at Boston for Dick Williams.

Sparky Anderson has taken over for Bristol at Cincinnati, Frank Lucchesi and even money to take the Eastern Division. Oakland and Minnesota are bracketed as even money choices in the league's Western Division but 3-1 for the flag.

SEATTLE — Marvin Milkes, executive vice president and general manager of the Seattle Pilots, announced Saturday the club's opening home game Tuesday, April 7, against the Angels has been changed to a day game.

The opener originally had been scheduled as a night contest, but Milkes said fear of inclement weather and the belief a Tuesday afternoon opener would draw bigger crowd prompted the decision.

EVEL KNieVEL... Still Riding High

Nine Operations Hasn't Slowed Motorcycling Daredevil Knievel Knows, Fears No Evel

OAKLAND (AP) — Evel Knievel says he has given up on his idea of jumping across the Grand Canyon on a motorcycle.

Not because of his nine major operations, you understand, and certainly not because of the Hell's Angels. The reason he claims, is that U.S. Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., doesn't want him. Evel makes claim without elaboration — and a grin.

"He's a thorn in my side," Knievel says. "He just doesn't want me jumping across the Grand Canyon."

At the age of 31 and with four years of his uniquely hazardous career behind him, this walking testament to modern medicine with the mellifluous name has become nothing less than a legend to a widespread group of fans who have made Evel Knievel a rich, if scarred, man.

This weekend in Sacramento, where Knievel will give an exhibition, the preliminary shooting of a movie based on his life will begin with George Hamilton as Knievel.

If Hollywood wanted an actor who looked like Knievel to play the part, it made a mistake. The role should have gone to Paul Newman.

Knievel's standard bit is to send his motorcycle off an inclined ramp over a group of cars standing side by side, hoping to land on another ramp at the far end. The record is 17 cars, but he plans to try for 18 soon.

Of course, Knievel doesn't always make it. Nine times he has been injured so seriously that he has needed a major operation.

"I figure that if we learn by our mistakes," he says, "I'm nine times better than anybody else."

Knievel walks with a cane and among the souvenirs of his many stays in hospitals is a steel plate on the outside of his left leg that stretches from his knee to his hip. It has had to be replaced three times.

His most serious accident, he says, occurred two years ago in Las Vegas, Nev., where "I had my hip shoved right through my pelvis and had a brain concussion. I was out for four days. They thought I wasn't going to make it."

His medical expenses over the last four years total some $31,000 and, with famed attorney Melvin Belli representing him, he is contesting bills that amount to about $10,000 more.

Knievel says he never gets less than $10,000 per performance and claims that last year he made $225,000. He is not a man to downgrade what he thinks he's worth.

"I drew 15,000 people three years ago in Las Vegas," he says. "That's more than Frank Sinatra and John F. Kennedy drew there. I drew more people to the Cow Palace than the Republican Convention."

The latter performance also drew a battalion of police and a couple of ambulances to the arena in San Francisco recently when the Hell's Angels — a group of motorcyclists Knievel abhors because "they give motorcycle riders a bad name" — took exception to some of his remarks about them.

Knievel explains what happened this way: "The announcer at the Cow Palace read a quote that said if Evel Knievel jumped the Grand Canyon, it would set the Hell's Angels back 20 years."

"They started making obscene gestures and one guy threw a tire iron at me," adding that he punched the Angel. "He got back up and two of them jumped me. They all left in ambulances."

The dream of Knievel's life had been to jump the Grand Canyon on a jet-powered cycle.

But with the government discouraging that — at Goldwater's request, Knievel thinks — he has a new plan.

"I'm going to build a ramp out over Hell's Canyon in Idaho, which is a mile deep and a mile across, he says.

"A guy named Evel should jump Hell's Canyon anyhow," he said, and he limped away — laughing.

Pacers Catch Stars at Wire

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. (U.P.) — Bob Netolicky popped in six consecutive points in the closing minutes to help lift Indiana to a 109-103 American Basketball Assn. victory over the Stars Saturday night.

The Pacers, the Eastern Division leader, trailed most of the way and were down early in the fourth period, 90-82.

Indiana then reeled off 11 successive points for a 93-90 lead. Willie Wise of the Stars then scored on a tip-in and a lay-in to give L.A. a 94-93 lead.

Netolicky then hit a jumper, dropped in two free throws and scored on another jumper to give Indiana a 99-94 advantage and the Pacers led the rest of the way.

Mel Daniels led Indiana with 27 points. Roger Brown got 26 and Netolicky wound up with 25.

George Stone led the Stars with 25 and Wise added 23.

The Stars return home today, facing the Kentucky Colonels at 3 p.m. at the Sports Arena.

Rockets, Jets Vie for Title

Long Beach Flavor To Winter Loop Final
By CHUCK MEDICK

The championship of the Southern California Baseball Assn. Winter League will be the winner's prize when the Douglas Jets and Long Beach Rockets collide today in a 1:30 game at Blair Field.

Both teams enter the final game with impressive league records. The Jets, managed by Jim Bell, have a 14-1 mark while the Rockets, skippered by Jack Graham, have won 11, dropping but one.

Also, each team is loaded with Long Beach talent. Darryl Thomas of the Jets will oppose Bart Johnson of the Rockets on the mound. Such well known Long Beachers as the Brady twins, Tim and Terry, who starred at Poly High, and Steve Lara who also was one of Poly's best performers for the Jets.

Jeff Burroughs and Ed Crosby, Long Beach City College former great, are on the Rocket roster.

Leading the Jets in hitting is second baseman Joe Bell who is currently belting the ball at .457 backed up by the ever-dangerous Dennis Veltz of Chapman College who has banged out 14 homers in league play.

Both managers, though good friends off the field, would feel their season was complete if they could win this one. Not only the coveted trophy is at stake, but the rivalry between the hometown athletes adds fuel to the fire.

Dodgers Vs. SC at Open House

It's "open house" at Dodger Stadium today.

OFPA Tackles Elusive Problem

The Ocean Fish Protective Assn., representing scores of fishing clubs in Southern California, did some serious thinking last Wednesday night at its Los Angeles meeting and made some rather serious decisions.

Although the recent action of the California Fish and Game Commission in granting commercial the right to take additional thousands of tons of anchovies to be ground into chicken feed and fertilizer was uppermost in the minds of all directors present, no action was taken.

There was, however, some cloakroom discussion among directors about the failure of the commercials to find many anchovies and some bright chap with a computerized mind for figures said that if it took 19 anchovies to make one pound, the Fish and Game Commission had given commercials the right to seize 11 billion anchovies for industrial purposes. Give or take several hundred thousand, the figure still remains enormous.

It becomes more enormous when one talks with bait haulers in this area who haven't been able to stir up one anchovy in Long Beach Harbor for weeks. The men who haul bait for the pleasure fishing boats have been forced to go far to sea — from six to 10 miles out and sometimes upcoast to find any schools of the tiny forage fish.

Yet, the subject did not come before the board of directors for any action. Most of those present realized that any action would be meaningless at this time.

ONE IMPORTANT decision was made. The directors agreed to meet representatives of the commercial interests, face to face, at the Hacienda in San Pedro at 10 a.m. Feb. 21. This is not scheduled to be one of the name calling sessions. In fact, the

OFPA directors hope that it will serve a valuable purpose — getting the sportsfishermen and the commercials to a conference table and trying to real plan for stabilizing the Sea's salinity content. Results of the study were released jointly by Norman B. Livermore Jr., Department of Resources Secre-agree that support is needed for all marine fisheries in this state.

The directors also approved the proposal to create the Channel Islands National Park. They agreed to circulate petitions asking the federal government to take such action in view of the continued pressure of oil interests in the Santa Barbara Channel. It was revealed that one company hopes to build a refinery on one of the Channel Islands. Petitions may be obtained by writing Jack Gaskill, OFPA, 1417 Georgia St., Los Angeles 90015.

In other actions, the OFPA directors: Voted to back the measure which Sen. George Murphy has introduced in the U.S. Senate calling for federal funding of a feasibility study to save the Salton Sea from becoming a disaster area because of high salinity content.

Voted to back AB 325 which would give complete protection to all endangered wildlife in California.

Voted to oppose Assemblyman Vincent Thomas' AB 535 which would amend the Fish and Game Code and require every person buying a fishing license to pay a privilege tax.

GETTING DOWN to the meat of the Salton Sea situation, the status there now very definitely depends on federal participation in a feasibility study. In other words, where do we get the money? That is just about what the Salton Sea project involves.

The joint state-federal report already has been made on the most economtary for California and U.S. Secretary of the Interior Walter J. Hickel.

The report defined the rising salinity, stability and nutrient-related problems of the Sea and discussed possible solutions. The most economical plan appears to be to dike off a 50-square-mile impoundment from the main body of the Sea for the evaporation of water.

Readers of this column may remember a previous column carried two or three months ago. It dealt with the cost factor, the usage of the Sea, its potential IF SAVED and the disaster to certain interests if not.

The dike of which the federal and state engineers speak already has been estimated in the millions — $125 million was the latest figure — and such a sum is not in sight unless the federal and state governments agree on the type of funding that must be done.

DIRECTOR William Penn Mott Jr., of the California Department of Parks and Recreation has some tips for state park campsites. Mott finds that August is the worst month to plan a camping trip, with 94 per cent occupancy for Class A campsites, 70 for Class B, 65 for Class C and 83 for trailer campsites. Taking out the desert campsites, which are not heavily used in that month, all other state parks have almost 100 per cent occupancy.

July ran second, June third and September a close fourth in the campsite calculations, so, says Mott, try to plan your vacation for some month other than August.

Draghi Finds a Silver Lining

By DAVE DANIEL

An optimist is one who looks on the bright side of things, no matter how a situation shapes up.

Coach John Draghi of the defending state champion Long Beach City College gymnastics team is an optimist, even though he faces these hurdles:

— He has only six returning lettermen from last year's No. 1 team, a loss of 15 valuable sophomores.

— His No. 1 performer in four events and the top all-around man, Dale Page, is sidelined for a month with a broken hand.

— Two Metropolitan Conference powerhouses, Pasadena and Pierce, are predicting their best seasons ever in the most rugged gymnastics conference in the nation on the JC level.

— His team is a marked one because of an undefeated season (15-0) last year.

"We've got good potential," Draghi said, "we're going to get better. We're strong in every event except the side horse, where we were the strongest last year."

Draghi, 36, is beginning his third season at the LBCC helm. In his first two years, he finished second in the state and then surprised everyone by knocking off Pasadena three times en route to the state championship. Pasadena had a string of more than 150 dual meet wins before the Vikings stunned them.

"The only difference this year from last season," Draghi explains, "is that last year we were better off in the early part of the year. We'll hit our peak later this season. We have more potential than last year."

HORSE NOTES: Coach Jerry Todd of Pasadena says this is the best team he's ever had. Among the Lancer performers are the CIF side horse champion, the state free exercise champion, a Massachusetts state champion and a member of the Mexican National team in the Olympics and the Pan American games who now lives in Pasadena. "They had never lost a conference meet," Draghi says proudly, "and we beat them. We snapped a string of 150 dual meets. This year, we'll have them at home in a night meet on April 17. There were a lot of dual meets for the high schools, so we scheduled it for night so everyone could watch it." Some of the state championship performers, from 1967 are now showing their wares with top outfits including Jim Jennings of USC; Gary Albright, Dan Uyeda and Rich Swartz of UCLA; Bob Bailey and Darryl Miller at Brigham Young; and John Bakovich and Mike Peck at Cal State Fullerton.

Hard work, perseverance and desire: commodities that make dreams come true.

Betty McAlister Porter, a little girl from a cotton patch in Fayetteville, Tenn., fell in love with her country at 9 years of age, and vowed to become a part of its history.

"I saw a book with pictures of all the monuments in Washington and decided then I would some day work in the White House," said the stately, cameo-complexioned, blond wife of Marine Col. Mervin Porter of El Toro.

She and her twin sister, Martha, shared scholarships at Andrew Jackson College and in 1947 took their first plane ride to glamorous Washington, D.C.

"We took parallel jobs in different sections of the Navy Department and progressed at the same rate until she married — a Navy commander, also named Porter," she said in soft southern tones.

Speaking of women's role in government, Mrs. Porter commented, "there are wonderful opportunities in government if a woman is willing to work hard and change jobs often."

Giving credence to this statement, she moved steadily higher in the Navy Department, at the same time modeling for CBS-TV and working as a freelance writer.

THOUGH GEOGRAPHICALLY only a few blocks away, the White House still seemed to be on the other side of the world.

"But, I was always lucky about being in the right place at the right time. In this instance I went to Palm Beach with my good friend Marianne Means — the syndicated columnist — and she took me to a party where I met several members of the Kennedy family."

Caught up in the enthusiasm of the New Frontier, she told Congressman Len Wolf, "I want to be part of this Kennedy effort!"

Hearing of her desire, George McGovern approached her and said, "The President loves a good writer, and with your farm girl background, perhaps he can use your talents in the Food for Peace Program."

Mrs. Porter was interviewed along with 30 other applicants, and tense days followed before she received a call that the White House car was picking her up.

"As I raised my right hand to take the oath of office, nothing came out of my mouth. I never became blase about the White House," she declared.

Her title was assistant director of information for the President's Food for Peace Program.

"They'll probably put 'assistant director' on my tombstone," Mrs. Porter laughs good-naturedly. "In all my jobs, I was never director. People have asked if this is due to prejudice against women. I truly don't know. I

PATPOURRI

'Hair' fans do their thing

By PAT McDONNELL

THE OVER-30 SET in El Dorado Park Estates became a bit uptight Friday when it viewed what appeared to be rejects from the cast of "Hair" gather in increasing numbers at Lama Avenue address of Jim and Hildi Foasberg.

Worries that perhaps the Foasbergs had gone mad and were hosting a rock festival were groundless — it was just Hildi's way of inviting friends in for a happening to mark Jim's 27th birthday.

The fellows got into the spirit of things by donning fake beards, vintage military garb, head bands and earrings. The gals didn't do bad either — what with silver-rimmed spectacles, high-button shoes and grotesque gowns that would make Tiny Tim quiver all over.

John and Peggy Maxwell and Cynthia and Romy Patriarca performed dances in garage decorated in psychedelic designs. Others admiring black light posters and sampling imported cheeses and wines were Bob and Marlene Emenger, Tom and Sandy Shadden and Barbara and George Graham.

THREE GOOD REASONS for cocktails in Rivo Alto Canal home of Bernie and Dr. Lee Perry were to mark wedding anniversaries of Ray and Lanelle Fosholdt, Bill and Caroline Hardcastle and host couple who was observing 40th date since saying "I do."

Hearts and flowers prevailed in decor as Marion and Lora Akin, Les and Mary Alice Dahl and Dick and Vera Brookins extended congratulations to triplicate sets of celebrants. Jonah and Helen Jones, Hal and Marge Halvorsen, Bob and Marge Pierce and the Jim Flemings were on hand when party moved to Long Beach Yacht Club for dinner and dancing.

No doubt about it, favorite topic was Bernie and Lee's upcoming trip to Phoenix for reunion with five other couples now living in Sun City who started out as newlyweds with the Perrys in Wayne, Neb.

VALENTINES — big and little, humorous and sentimental, Victorian and naughty—were evidenced throughout interior of Adra and Chuck Kobers' dreamhouse on The Colonnade when they entertained 90-plus friends at cocktails and buffet Saturday. Hostess was stunning in red satin gypsy style blouse and flowing harem pants. Combo provided dance rhythms for Margaret and Roy Conn, Chris and Neal Dundas and Claire and Lynn Hosom.

Junior Leaguers and their husbands dropped by after wrapping up duties of their rummage sale. Others on hand were Betty and Bixby, Pauline and Fred Jacobson and Mary and Ted Matson.

SO MARVELOUS was their send-off to Australia, Lew and Edith Hindley almost hated to leave after friends surprised them with bon voyage bash at Irene and Ken Bramans. Kudos for carrying off the surprise went to Jack and June Harris who had arranged to chauffeur the Bramans to dinner in Los Angeles.

The Harrises apologized profusely as they told Edith and Lew they first had to stop at the Bramans who then insisted Hendleys come in for a farewell drink. Unsuspecting pair was greeted by cheers, whistles and applause from Bernie and Stan Thomson, Jerry and Peg Johnson, Jean and George MacDonald . . . to name a few.

Mexican dinner was served late in evening while Edith and Lew told plans to visit Boy Scout leaders in Sydney and Melbourne whom they entertained two years ago in their home.

ROMANCE WAS in the air at reception honoring the newlywed William F. Zoerns (nee Penny Fischer) after their exchange of vows Saturday in Whitman Chapel, Lakewood.

Party was in 2100 E. Second St. home of bride's parents, Chester and Gladys Hale. Bride was a picture in pink as she chattered with Lila and Dr. Charles Cherry and Lilli and Hans Bruckler of Huntington Beach.

Bridegroom, who holds a degree from USC, is a Beverly Hills accountant. Upon returning from ski trip at Mammoth Mountain, newlyweds will be at home in Huntington Beach.

More than 40 guests were on hand to meet Liliano who traveled from Chile last month to exchange vows with Eduardo in St. Hedwig's Church, Rossmore. The bridegroom has been majoring in electrical engineering at CSLB for three years under sponsorship of the committee and will receive his degree in June. Among those greeting the pair were Helen Smith, Mary Clark, Gene Page, Gail Tweed, Irma McCall and the Clair Johnsons.

USC dinner for parents

Mrs. Joseph K. Kellogg of Long Beach, president of Inter-sorority Mothers' Club at USC, will be hostess at traditional parents' dinner Thursday in Town and Gown on campus. A social hour at 6 p.m. in the foyer of Town and Gown will precede the 7 p.m. dinner. Dr. John Hubbard, provost and vice president of USC, will be guest speaker.

Other Long Beach members assisting Mrs. Kellogg are Mmes. William Nesbitt, Jerome Neff and Edwin D. Davis.

Ah so! AAUW ushers in Year of dog

Custom of applying honey to lips of Chinese god to assure he will utter only sweet remarks whenever he speaks of them is carried out by Frances Ridgley (left), Elaine and Ed Babbush during AAUW fest celebrating advent of Chinese New Year. Scholarship section arranged event launched with cocktails in the Babbush home. Among those on hand for dinner and dancing at Mr. C's were Jerry Magarian, Len and Mary Atwood, Tom and Julie Mills, Win and Suzanne Maltby.

...and over-30 crowd has a ball too

HARD WORKING NIGHTINGALES indulged themselves in a change of pace from volunteer work for Children's Memorial Hospital when they honored provisionals at a just-for-fun party at Ron and Nancy Franks'. Signs of the Zodiac lent a timely motif to decor, while a strolling guitarist-folksinger performed mood music as he circulated among Tom and Pat Enlow, Dan and Nancy Hall, Jack and Barbara Jensen and Marilyn and Frank Montabana.

Nightingales furthered carefree theme of fest by donning like attire. Taking the lead in whimsical dress was Vera Dunnigan in harem costume (alas, fair Vera lacked courage to appear sans bra as ensemble was intended).

Dr. Dick Daniels was acclaimed by all as the "most with it" when he made grand entrance attired in flashy bell bottoms, leather sandals, fantastic new long hair style and beads, beads, beads. Provisionals gathering round for closer examination of the new Dr. Dick were Jan Moss, Marilyn Palarea and Bev Cruchley.

A cut glass compote filled with — you guessed it — red and white rosebuds centered dining table where Ted and Oramae Webb, Bob and Lola Gilman and John and Marilyn Fortier assisted.

Traveling from Anaheim were Matt and Janice Kim, Jack and Marion DeWild and Betty and Al Wambold.

JUDGING BY the gifts she received Saturday, Laura Lockett ought to have one of the best equipped kitchens in town when she sets up housekeeping after her March 21 exchange of vows with Don Pappagalo.

Bride-elect was feted Valentine's Day at a shower in Havana Avenue home of Joyce Sarver. Mothers of the affianced pair, Jean Lockett and Mim Pappagalo, chatted with Dorothy Slayton, Mable Parks and Norma Marter. Others partaking of tantalizing red punch were Andrea Bodnar, DeAnna Roberdes and Janet Brown while games preoccupied Claudette Cole, Sandy Butts, Joyce Dawson and Beverly Card.

ROLLING OUT the red carpet at their Lakewood Country Club Estates home were Kermit and Ethel Moore as they entertained Sigma Sigma alumnae and guests at annual hearts party.

Elaborate decorations carrying out the Valentine theme included a rose-covered cage containing two white love birds which was suspended over the pool. Topiary trees of red and white roses dotted the patio where Fran and Clay Brown, Margaret and Dr. Arthur Lepore and the Don Brittins chatted with Mimi and Mel Christanson.

It couldn't happen ---:

Tuesday a woman called the Animal Shelter to report a Labrador retriever was drowning in her pool.

Now everyone knows Labs are water dogs . . . everyone, that is, but Sam, a 2½-year-old female retriever who ignores birds and shows greater disdain for the outdoors.

Early in life, Sam was put to pasture at 3920 Country Club Drive home of Gloria Burrows. An unusual Lab in more ways than one, Sam has a rare chocolate colored coat and must be prodded to step from her home — even the family cat psyches her out.

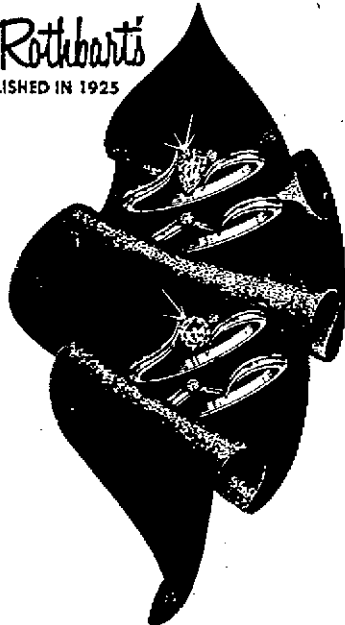

It's a mystery as to why timid Sam ventured into the big wide world Tuesday and what inspired her to take an early morning dip in a strange backyard on Terry Lynn Place.

But Sam nearly drowned as a result. Startled resident chanced to look outside and beheld what appeared to be a yellow-eyed brown bear thrashing and splashing in the pool. Just before Sam went down for the third time, her paws touched steps at the shallow end of the pool and she dragged herself from it.

Hysterical dog gurgled and barked at animal shelter officers . . . then sagged exhausted onto the deck to receive artificial respiration.

Now that she's been retrieved by her owner, Sam is silent about her outing, but she scrambles beneath a bed at the sound of bath water being drawn.

BEING a Democrat, Mrs. Porter thought she'd never see Air Force One again after leaving Washington. However, after Richard Nixon's election, Col. and Mrs. F. N. Pippin and Col. and Mrs. Porter were among those given champagne tour.

White House dream realized

wonder if I had been more aggressive, more sure of myself, things might have been different.

"Yet, if I had, the men might have resented me," she reflected.

Working in the White House as the only other woman with a title besides the President's personal physician, Dr. Janet C. Travell, Betty began to see the personal side of its inhabitants.

"I remember seeing President Kennedy walking on the White House lawn during the Cuban crisis — hands in pockets, shoulders slumped. He always had beautiful posture, so it showed how troubled he was.

"THEN CAROLINE ran over to him and he reached down and scooped her up and raised her over his head. When they walked away his posture was completely erect. It was a touching moment," she said.

Her recollections of Jackie are sparse. "She had very little to do with the staff. I'll just say I never found her warm."

Not willing to elaborate, Mrs. Porter added, "I feel you should keep a loyalty to your former employers. I object to secretaries who write exposes just because they are privy to personal information."

A year after joining the New Frontier she was named assistant director of special projects for the President and wrote speeches for Teodoro Moscoso, head of the Alliance for Progress. "I found him more of a poet than an administrator," she said frankly.

Once again, fate entered her life at a dinner party.

"Lyndon Johnson who was then vice president asked if I would like to go to work for him. He called the next morning and set up an interview for me with George Reedy, his press secretary, and I was made assistant director again — this time of information for the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity.

"Of all the men I worked with, I had the greatest respect for George Reedy as a man and as an intellectual," she said.

Since the committee was composed of cabinet members, Betty was able to observe the alleged hostility between LBJ and Bobby Kennedy.

"I really found LBJ to be quite fatherly in his posture and approach. He'd say, 'Son,' and I could see Bobby draw up his shoulders.

"Bobby was sometimes a little unkind, really quite hostile to LBJ. But, I think the whole thing has been blown out of proportion. It was, after all, just a generation gap."

Later she worked as writer liaison to the nation's labor press with Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz.

"I CONSIDERED him the greatest writer I had met and was delighted with the opportunity to learn from him. It didn't work out that way, though. He was so good he did all the writing himself."

After the Kennedy assassination, Mrs. Porter again found herself in the Johnson camp.

"He respected loyal people. They say he can tell his friends the moment he enters a room, and I believe it," she said.

"Only once did he get angry with me. We were at a luncheon and he did not like to be photographed while he ate. He asked me to keep the photographers from taking pictures as soon as lunch was served.

"Because I was a woman, the photographers paid no attention and just kept shooting away. President Johnson leaned over and with what I can only describe as a hiss, said, 'get a man!' I was crestfallen," she recalled.

"Mostly he was fatherly toward me. Once at a party someone asked if I knew the President and I said, 'I work for him.' LBJ corrected me by saying, 'you work with me!' I think this summarizes the man."

Lady Bird she considers well named. "She is very much a lady, and very much a wife, too. I remember many White House parties when LBJ would get off on one of his endless stories and she'd tug at his sleeve just like any other wife."

Mrs. Porter's final White House appointment was as speech writer for Betty Furness who had been appointed special assistant to the President on Consumer Affairs.

"I was with her on one of her first trips to the supermarket. She was like a child at Christmas — cooing and aahing.

"SHE BOUGHT A pre-cooked chicken. The next day she wrote a letter to the store manager on White House stationery saying the chicken was not good. A very apologetic grocer sent her a quick dollar and a half," she laughed.

"Miss Furness was a fast learner. Many of the men expected a dumb blond, but she proved to them she was very savvy."

As with so many of her jobs, Mrs. Porter's present one (she laughingly refers to it as 'assistant director to Merv') began with a meeting at a party.

"Three years ago, a friend wanted me to meet this bachelor and I went along with little interest. But once I met him we never stopped seeing each other and were married a year later. It truly was love at first sight, and it's the best job I've ever had!"

As the wife of a man who is commanding officer to 2,500 men, Betty's energies now are directed to helping other wives through Navy Relief at El Toro Marine Base where she is in charge of public relations.

"And I've finally been director of something. I was director in charge of our 'I Love a Marine' Ball on Friday night!"

community. Soliciting these donations will be part of my responsibility too," she added.

BUT WHATEVER the responsibility, Mrs. Miner believes that sex has little to do with it. Rather she says, it's the ability to get a job done.

"I didn't campaign for this position," she stated. "In fact, I declined the nomination several times. But the members of the selection committee seemed to feel I could do the job and so I accepted."

The practice management lecturer who doubles as administrator for her husband's dental practice became involved with CRI several years ago when she represented Pilot International on CRI's board of directors.

"After my term as Pilot representative expired, I ran for the board of directors and was re-elected," she said. Since then, she has served as special events chairman and second vice-president.

As the first woman president of CRI, a voluntary post, Mrs. Miner succeeds Russell K. Peterson, manager of employment and training for McDonnell-Douglas Aerospace Division.

Other 1970 officers are Robert Schurr, Hughes Aircraft, first vice president; Charles E. Haynes, realtor, second vice president; Mrs. Myri Cypher Binns, insurance agent, secretary and William Cree Jr., attorney, treasurer. The five-member steering committee will be installed Tuesday night at the Velvet Turtle restaurant.

The job of the board of directors, Mrs. Miner explained, is to implement the goals of CRI — to make it possible for as many handicapped persons as possible to receive training and later, to fit into industry as productive employees.

COMMUNITY Rehabilitation Industries' story is an old but successful one. Since 1956 more than 750 handicapped individuals have been placed in gainful employment. And many, many more have been trained.

Trainees are paid while they learn — as little as 40 cents an hour at first and later, as their productivity increases, much more.

VIEW FROM THE TOP shows central area of CRI's facilities including assembly tables where sub-contracted electrical work is done.

Work is in the form of sub-contracted jobs from manufacturing giants — McDonnell-Douglas, Grayson Controls, Thermco Products, Hughes Aircraft, Rheem Manufacturing Co., Norris Industries, Monttemp, Wells Fargo, Trident Electronics and McKesson-Robbins, to name a few.

"We submit bids for a job on a competitive basis," a spokesman for CRI explained. "And when we receive a job, we uphold the same standards (quantity, quality, deadline, etc.) as any other sub-contracting firm."

"We don't ask for compassion," the spokesman added, "just contracts."

The same is true when a CRI-trained worker goes out into industry for employment. "We don't ask an employer to hire one of our people because he's handicapped — but because he can do the job."

The spokesman emphasized that at CRI, people are the most important product.

"We expect — and hope — that we will lose our best people to industry. That's what we're here for."

AT WIT'S END

Oh well, back to the Brownies

By ERMA BOMBECK

You remember what's his-name? He's the kid at our house who has been trying to tell a joke for the last three years and can never get a word in edgewise. In an effort to give him some identity, some place in the family, we assigned him the prayer the other night before dinner.

He bowed his head and began, "Bless us, Oh Lord, and these thy gifts which we are about to receive from the Brownies..." "NOT BROWNIES!" interrupted his brother, "You mean bounties."

"Bounties is something you get for bringing in an outlaw," said another child.

"No, you're thinking of the ones who bring in prisoners in Canada. They're Mounties."

"No," said their father, "Monty was a nickname for General Montgomery during the big war."

"Monty!" exclaimed a voice. "I thought they were Sisters and wrote Wuthering Heights and Jane Eyre."

"That's Bronte."

"No. He's the groovy guy who rides a motorcycle on TV."

"That's Bronson, you jerk."

"I thought Swanson made chicken?" I said.

"No, that's Colonel Sanders, the man with the little white beard and the white suit."

"You are all obviously thinking of Mark Twain."

"WRONG," said their Father. "It was Mark Clark and he was not a colonel, he was a general during the big war."

"Is he related to Dick Clark?" asked a son.

"Who's Dick Clark?"

"Maybe he's related to Petula Clark."

"What's a Petula?"

"Isn't it like a cupid?"

"That's a tooth like a molar."

"A mole is a little animal that ruins your grass."

"No it isn't. It's a little dot on your face that you're born with."

"That is a wart and is something icky that boys hate but always wind up with."

There was a silence for almost ten seconds. Then a small voice said, "That's what I said in the first place. Bless these gifts which we are about to receive from the Brownies... Amen."

AT WIT'S END Oh well, back to the Brownies

By ERMA BOMBECK

You remember what's his-name? He's the kid at our house who has been trying to tell a joke for the last three years and can never get a word in edgewise. In an effort to give him some identity, some place in the family, we assigned him the prayer the other night before dinner.

He bowed his head and began, "Bless us. Oh Lord, and these thy gifts which we are about to receive from the Brownies..."

"NOT BROWNIES!" interrupted his brother, "You mean bounties."

"Bounties is something you get for bringing in an outlaw," said another child.

"No, you're thinking of the ones who bring in prisoners in Canada. They're Mounties."

"No," said their father, "Monty was a nickname for General Montgomery during the big war."

"Monty!" exclaimed a voice. "I thought they were Sisters and wrote Wuthering Heights and Jane Eyre."

"That's Bronte."

"No. He's the groovy guy who rides a motorcycle on TV."

"That's Bronson, you jerk."

"I thought Swanson made chicken?" I said.

"No, that's Colonel Sanders, the man with the little white beard and the white suit."

"You are all obviously thinking of Mark Twain."

"WRONG," said their father. "It was Mark Clark and he was not a colonel, he was a general during the big war."

"Is he related to Dick Clark?" asked a son.

"Who's Dick Clark?"

"Maybe he's related to Petula Clark."

"What's a Petula?"

"Isn't it like a cuspidor?"

"That's a tooth like a molar."

"A mole is a little animal that ruins your grass."

"No it isn't. It's a little dot on your face that you're born with."

"That is a wart and is something icky that boys hate but always wind up with."

There was a silence for almost ten seconds. Then a small voice said, "That's what I said in the first place. Bless these gifts which we are about to receive from the Brownies... Amen."

Mom stews about kids' reading

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I have read your column for many years, and must admit that both my husband and I have found it quite informative, as well as amusing at times.

Our problem is that we have children growing up who can read, and your column is the first thing they go for in the newspaper.

Abby, I don't mean to be a crank, but I do wish you would answer some of those letters personally instead of putting them in the paper. I refer to letters from 70-year-old women who are still interested in sex, letters about men who go for men, and also situations involving girls who are pregnant and unmarried. (I'm sure you know what I mean.)

I am aware that your correspondents do not always sign their names and addresses, but surely you must receive plenty of other letters that are not quite so objectionable to fill your space. Will you please give it some thought? ONE MOTHER'S OPINION

DEAR ABBY: Perhaps the best way to answer your letter is by printing another mother's opinion:

DEAR ABBY: You may not know it, but your column has helped us to raise our children. We're not the kind of parents who could take our children into a room, close the door, and tell them "the facts of life." Over the years just about everything we've wanted to discuss with our children has come up in your column. V.D., unwed mothers, child molesting, homosexuality, and believe it or not, I was wondering how to tell our 4-year-old that my parents were getting divorced when an answer in your column said it so much better than I ever could have. So, thanks a heap, Abby. Love ya. — "J & A" IN SAL-EM, ORE.

Proper or not, I am going to buy her another one. I can more than afford it now. What do you suggest? I will abide by your decision. — SITTING PRETTY IN TUCSON

DEAR SITTING: Lucky you. "A virtuous woman — her price is above rubies." (Proverbs 12:4). But for all her sentimentality, she shouldn't deny you the pleasure of adorning her. Suggest that she take her original wedding band to a reputable, creative jeweler and ask him to design a lovely new elaborate ring, using the "cheap, dinky" band as the central theme. If she still says no, buy her a lovely diamond ring to wear alongside it.

Focus on loom and wood at LBMA

By ELISE EMERY
Arts Editor

There is a comfortable relationship between exhibits which open today at Long Beach Museum of Art, 2300 E. Ocean Blvd.

Both "Compositions From the Loom" and "Sam Maloof: Designer/Craftsman" are contemporary expressions of art in craftsmanship.

"Loom" shows the work of Mexican artists Marta Palau and Pierre Preux, as well as Polish tapestries by Sadley, Laszkiewicz and Napierkowska.

Miss Palau and Preux have this in common: Although each exhibits as a Mexican artist, neither is a native of Mexico.

Born in Catalonia, Spain, in 1934, Miss Palau moved to Mexico in 1940. She studied art first in Mexico City, then with Paul Lingren at San Diego State College and later worked briefly with Alfaro Siqueiros on his Cuernavaca mural. Her tapestries have been exhibited in Latin America, San Diego and La Jolla, and in Tokyo, Delhi and Jakarta.

Pierre Preux was born in Paris in 1932, arrived in Mexico as a refugee in 1942, later attended medical school for three years before turning to art. Since his first one-man show in 1954, he has exhibited regularly in France and Mexico. Founder and director of a tapestry division of National College of Arts and Crafts, he was featured as one of Mexico's leading artists during Mexico's Cultural Olympic years.

Sam Maloof, born in California in 1916, was a graphic artist until, at the age of 35, he returned to his first love — wood. For more than 20 years he has worked in his home in Alta Loma which has become a showcase for his designs.

Among Maloof's commissions are furniture for the Leo Baeck Temple, Los Angeles; Covenant Presbyterian Church, Inglewood; Victor Gruen; Lowry's Foods, Inc. Los Angeles; and many fine furniture houses. He also has exhibited in many museum shows.

Friends of the Museum will host an opening reception today from 2 to 4 p.m. to which the public is invited without charge.

NEWEST EXHIBIT at Los Angeles County Museum of Art, 5905 Wilshire Blvd., consists of five new paintings, 12 and 13 feet high, by Sam Francis.

Francis, who lives and works in Santa Monica Canyon, is regarded abroad as one of the best-known contemporary painters. A brilliant colorist, he is represented by major works in such museums as the Moderna Musee of Stockholm, the Ohara Museum in Okayama, the 1959 mural for the Chase Manhattan Bank, the Sogetsu School in Tokyo and the mural for the Kunsthalle of Basel. These five paintings, unlike the swirls and splatters of Francis' earlier work, are done in color strips around an open center field.

The show will continue through March 22.

Attendance at "The Middle Ages," medieval art from the Metropolitan Museum, will rival the record-setting Van Gogh and Kienholz exhibits by the time it closes March 29, a museum spokesman predicts.

"Sometimes there are waiting lines, but they're not uncomfortable lines — they move right along. There's no waiting for hours to get in."

The fabulous collection of art opened at the Los Angeles museum Jan. 18 as part of the Metropolitan's celebration of its Centennial. Museum hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesdays through Thursdays, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Fridays, 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays, closed Mondays.

FRIDAY from 7 to 9 p.m., Dr. Robert Ramsey of CSLB art department will share experiences of his recent sabbatical leave by means of a slide-illustrated lecture in Soroptimist House on campus.

Slides will show the Island of Rhodes and the surrounding Mediterranean areas of Athens, Istanbul, Izmir, Ephesus, Baalbek, Cairo, Luxor, Crete and Cyprus.

The public is invited.

Ohlendorf to conduct 25th Honor Orchestra

Tuesday at 8 p.m., 271 of the finest high school musicians in the Southland will be on stage at The Music Center Pavilion.

They are the select members of the All Southern California High School

'Incredible' Iceland

"Outpost of Scandinavian Culture-Iceland," all-color film-lecture in Long Beach City College's Annual International Series, will be presented at four high school auditoriums starting Tuesday. Beginning at 8 p.m., the program is scheduled Tuesday at Wilson, Wednesday at Jordan, Thursday at Poly, and Friday at Lakewood High School Auditoriums.

Iceland is an incredible island, full of unexpected contrasts. Bordered by the Arctic Ocean, but warmed by the Gulf Stream, it offers magnificent glaciers and waterfalls not far away from active volcanoes. Hot spring and thermal wells provide central heating in Reykjavik, northernmost capital city in the world. The rugged Icelanders are self-sufficient and proud of their position as a colorful outpost of Scandinavian culture.

Narrator Robert Davis, producer of travel-documentary lecture films, has won many awards for his outstanding films.

Season tickets are $2.50 for the entire series of seven film-lectures. Single admissions are $1 for adults and 50 cents for children and students under 18. Season tickets may be obtained by contacting the Forums Office, Business and Technology Campus, 1305 Pacific Coast Highway.

Honor Orchestra and Choir, chosen from hundreds of students who auditioned in November for this concert. Since January they have come from as far north as Santa Maria and as far south as San Clemente to rehearse for four hours each Saturday at Millikan High School.

On the podium conducting the 131 members of the orchestra will be Fred Ohlendorf, consultant of fine arts for Long Beach Unified School District.

This is a signal honor for Ohlendorf, for the concert marks the 25th year of the Honor Orchestra which he founded in 1945. Leopold Stokowski was guest conductor for that first performance in Bovard Auditorium at USC and it was Ohlendorf who prepared and rehearsed the young musicians for the maestro.

"That concert is full of memories for me," smiled Ohlendorf, as youthfully enthusiastic as he was a quarter of a century ago when he persuaded the Southern California School Band and Orchestra Association to sponsor the Honor Orchestra.

"STOKOWSKI was just back from his honeymoon with Gloria Vanderbilt and I made several trips to his home to discuss the concert with him. I still use the score of Brahms' 'Symphony No. 1' which he marked for that program. Tuesday, we will play the final movement of the symphony, just as that first orchestra did."

Other numbers will be "Donna Diana Overture" by von Reznicek, "Espana Rhapsody" by Chabrier and, with the Honor Choir, conducted by Paul Salamunovich, "Nanie" by Brahms. The choir also will sing "Tu es Petrus" by Palestrina, "Flacido et il Mar" by Mozart, and

"Zadok the Priest" by Handel.

Completing the program will be "Concertino da Camera" by Ibert, played by alto saxophonist John Giordano, and 10 numbers from Orff's "Carmina Burana." The soloist and singers are professional young artists, over 21 years of age, who will be flown here by American Airlines which is underwriting the cost of the concert as part of their "American Youth Performs" project.

THE HONOR CHOIR has been rehearsed by its conductor, Salamunovich, director of choral music at Loyola University and Mount Saint Mary's College. He serves on the Sacred Music Commission of the Archdiocese of Los Angeles and the board of directors of the Church Music Association of America, was for 13 years assistant director of the Roger Wagner Chorale and has directed festivals, summer camps, and choral workshops in 19 states and Canada.

"Our Honor Orchestra today is stronger than it was in earlier years," said Ohlendorf. "The players are more disciplined. They are so interested in good standards—they know how a fine orchestra sounds. It's wonderful to know how grateful these young people are for the opportunity to play."

"In Long Beach we are especially fortunate to have five high schools and five orchestras—most high schools in Los Angeles have no orchestra."

"If more young people could have outlets in the arts we would have fewer juvenile delinquents."

"There's an old saying that's as true today as it was when I was a child: 'Give a boy a horn to blow and he won't blow safes.'"

Traditional artists really are radicals

By VIRGINIA LADDEY

The County Museum of Science and Industry in Exposition Park, Los Angeles, is rendering a real public service in giving the Traditional Artists Guild an exhibit which will run through March 15.

This group, organized in 1968 in Paramount by Nona Taylor, is really a radical one because it is rebelling against the "establishment" in present-day art. But, their offerings will please many viewers, particularly those who object so strenuously to the work shown in museums and those selected by current juries. These persons should make a point of attending this exhibit and signing the guest register.

The exhibit is presented in three groups: beginners, intermediate and professional. While there is no documentation of artists' names, media, etc., to most works are appended descriptions of what the work is. These seem a little superfluous as the works are very specific. There are also posted the aims of the guild such as: "to promote and preserve fine traditional art," "to encourage and develop an interest in Beauty, Americanism and Literary Arts."

FOR EXAMPLE, next to an oil scene of sailboats on the ocean by P. Connell is a note:

"One of scores of sailboats returning to the marina after a days (sic) enjoyment. Deep sea fishing may be enjoyed throughout the year in most of California. Charter boats and marina facilities are available.

"Long Beach, fifth largest city in California, an important business and industrial center, and a fine harbor city." (sic)

There is a pervasive note of nostalgia: many California missions, old ranches, desert scenes, Laguna surf, Yosemite, Monterey, old railroad stations, etc. — all done before the inroads of tin cans, waste paper, smog, oil slicks, etc. became part of the environment. They are also purged of environmental elements like smelling privies, tobacco juice stains, homeless hoboes, animal droppings and quarantine signs which were intrinsic parts of the "good old days."

SOME OF THE WORKS are fine illustrations like scenes of old Angel's Flight, the old fire station near Olvera Street, and Bunker Hill. One scene of a gathering of Indians in the desert is photographically surreal. The technique and intensification of purple against desert yellow are masterful. It is marred only by an amazingly shiny glaze.

One work, "Mouth of the Klamath," by Richard V. Johnson could hold its own in any juried show for its wet wash, sophisticated control of color, and compositional qualities are superb.

Viewing hours at the museum, 701 State Drive, are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

Fred Waring Show

Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians will bring their 1970 production to Long Beach Municipal Auditorium March 3. The new show includes Waring's concept of music of the future in addition to the familiar classics, Broadway numbers, popular music and novelty tunes which are his specialty.

As head wrangler of Arizona ranch, this girl's a pro

By FRED TAYLOR KRAFT
Travel Editor

TUCSON, Ariz. — Upon reaching college age, you'd think Cynthia — let's call her Cindy because everyone else does — Miller would have selected some exclusive girls' school, perhaps Bryn Mawr, to continue her education.

The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Miller, textile factory owners and socially prominent in Reading, Pa., she had the background. That is to say, she got what she wanted, even her first pony when she was only 6 years old.

That pony became her life. When she wasn't in school she was in the family stables, grooming fastidiously and saddling up for a canter on nearby bridle paths. Her mother used to laughingly say that Cindy kept the stables cleaner than her own room.

She knew what a fetlock was before she had owned the pony a week. When the little animal acted droopy she was worried, and sought ways to do something about it.

NO WONDER, then, that she passed up Bryn Mawr and chose, instead, the University of Arizona at Tucson, to study for a career as a veterinarian. Besides, she would be in the middle of wide open spaces, where she could ride and rope — an art at which she became adept at an early age — to her heart's content.

It wasn't long after her enrollment at U. of A. that she joined the school's quadrille team at a nearby ranch. She also met a good-looking cowboy named Howard Frizzell.

That changed everything once more.

They were married three months later.

All of this took place eight years ago. Today Cindy Frizzell, still happily married and the mother of a bright 6-year-old kid named Jeff, is head wrangler of a string of 27 fine saddle horses at White Stallion Ranch, a 1,000-acre spread with another 3,500 acres under lease, 16 miles northwest of Tucson.

White Stallion is essentially a guest ranch — they don't call them "dude" ranches down here any more — and the hoi polloi who come here for a week or a month to get the smog out of their lungs and give jittery nerves a rest soon learn to respect Cindy for the pro she is as a head wrangler.

GUESTS meet the slim and tall, brown-haired Cindy first while at breakfast. She breezes into the rectangular dining room dressed like a rodeo performer, but much prettier than most, with the aplomb of a champion. She knows how to say "Howdy, folks" Arizona style, after which she introduces herself and, with notebook in hand, states her mission.

"The weather is beautiful outside. How many of you would like to go trail riding this morning?"

Some new arrivals are so surprised to see the head wrangler's a girl that they have choked on their ham and eggs but after regaining their composure most agree that they'd love to tag along.

An hour later they walk their mounts out of the corral and enter the nearby saguaro, sage and mesquite forest, led by Cindy aboard a handsome dark bay gelding who answers to the name of Pino. During the ride she moves up and down the line of riders, chatting with guests and answering all questions put to her about horses and the flora and fauna of southern Arizona.

AS HEAD wrangler at White Stallion, one of two guest spreads in the area that owns its own string, Cindy has been at work since sunup. She has not only fed and groomed the horses, but saddled and bridled them for guests. She also bosses the tack room and keeps riding paraphernalia in repair; in fact, all work connected with the remuda and corral is hers except the smithy chores.

"And she can ride and rope with any man," boasts Allen True who, with his wife Cynthia (that makes two Cynthias on the ranch) is owner and resident manager.

Cindy Frizzell is also a member of the Girls Rodeo Association, has spent summers on the rodeo circuit and teaches riding and roping. During Tucson Rodeo Week — La Fiesta de los Vaqueros — which starts the last week in February, she will compete in the barrel-running event.

White Stallion has accommodations for as many as 34 guests in cottages facing a neatly-kept desert garden. Some arrive on one of several daily Trans World Airline flights, as I did, frequently from as far away as the eastern seaboard, others by automobile. The commodious main lodge boasts such amenities as a television room, billiards room, a "saloon" where guests gather at 6 p.m. daily for the "Happy Hour," and a large library. Outside is a sheltered table tennis court and a large heated pool.

A PRIZE Shorthorn steer kneels to Cindy's command, one of several tricks she has taught him since he was a calf.

But if you're looking for Cindy, check the corral. Like as not she'll be grooming the spirited Pino.

Redwoods grow faster

The Founder's Tree, a coast redwood in Humboldt State Park, California, reached a height of 364 feet but only 12 feet in diameter. Regrowth redwoods can attain a height of 240 feet in less than a century.

As coast redwood loggers moved slowly through the forests with hand tools and oxen, seeds from the huge redwoods they harvested were strewn behind them. By the time they reached the end of a stand of redwood, these seeds, and sprouts from the stumps of downed trees, had grown into tall young trees. Today, 100 years later, those trees form some of the densest, tallest stands of trees in the world.

Delta is ready when you are!

What about vacationing on a farm in Denmark?

"This is the first time I've really had a holiday with the kids along — we hardly saw them except at mealtimes," said a visiting housewife after she and her family had spent their annual holidays on a farm in Denmark.

It all began when the head of one of the local tourist associations in Jutland arranged for a few families to spend their summer vacation on a Danish farm. That was in 1966. The following year 1,000 guests from abroad had the same pleasant experience, and a conservative estimate for 1968 shows that 17 local tourist associations can now offer vacation accommodations on about 300 farms all over the country, with an estimated capacity of 1,300 beds. And the project is developing fast.

Along with this growth have gone efforts to establish uniform prices, hygienic standards, etc. That the farm must boast a bathroom would seem to be obvious in this modern world — and it is much more interesting to learn that another firm condition is that the farm must be a going concern, actually engaged in agricultural activities in one form or another. No dude ranches are allowed in this scheme. No half-timbered walls unless they are genuine. Real live pigs, poultry, and people are the rule.

Another and equally important standard requirement is that at least one member of the farm household must have a working knowledge of the language of his guests. This not only for obvious practical reasons, but also because the basic idea is as much that of the "bringing together" of people as merely another way of providing accommodation for more tourists.

Also in keeping with this basic idea is the rule that no farm must take in more than eight guests at any one period. It is felt that the desired personal contact between hosts and guests cannot develop satisfactorily if more guests are taken in than a number representing one or two normal families. Rules and regulations apart, however, the keynote is informality in a relaxed and friendly atmosphere.

The project will be interesting to watch for several reasons. First of all, it demonstrates the constructive results of ready cooperation between alert and active local tourist associations, and the centralized official tourist offices, having at their disposal adequate staff, a whole network of branches in foreign countries, and government contacts, as well as facilities for communication and distribution of information.

Secondly, the project shows the practical possibilities of establishing cultural interchange and personal communication between visitor and host country; so often clamored for by those who, even today, look askance at international mass tourism, without — at least as far as has been noticed — ever bothering to advance constructive alternative suggestions as to how people could spend their increasing leisure in better and, presumably, more "cultured" and rewarding ways than by traveling abroad in group arrangements, made cheaper by the dozen.

True enough, we still see tourist groups being herded for full speed from one attraction to the other but — and this is the third and most vital point of the fast-growing vacation-on-a-farm scheme: we also see a new trend, away from hectic sightseeing and toward a more relaxed attitude.

The eleven-countries-in-twenty-one-days type of tourism may not yet be a thing of the past, but the twenty-one-days-in-one-country type of tourism is definitely a thing of the future.

There is a growing realization of this among those who have made tourism their business.

The classical attractions are no longer sufficient to catch and hold the interest of holiday-makers. Seeing them may have been the lifelong dream of the tourist of yesteryear, but today they are just one choice among many. Without trying to classify "the tourist of today" into a non-existent stereo-type, it may still be safe to say that, to a large extent, relaxation is now the goal, rather than museums and cathedrals — and some feel!

It is a very clear demonstration of the fact that, far from being tired of traveling, people are more ready than ever to spend their holidays abroad, provided they can find reasonable comfort at a reasonable price, combined with opportunities for recreation — such people will love a vacation on a Danish farm.

Lufthansa first foreign line to receive Boeing 747s

Lufthansa German Airlines, which a year ago moved its operations from San Francisco to Los Angeles where it has since been building up its facilities, will be the first foreign carrier to receive delivery of the Boeing 747s.

Three of the giant aircraft have been purchased with delivery scheduled for mid-February, mid-March and mid-May. Two additional aircraft have been ordered for later delivery.

Service of the 747s will be inaugurated April 1 between New York and Frankfurt, and two months later between Chicago and Frankfurt. Plans for utilizing the aircraft on the Los Angeles-Frankfurt route have not yet been finalized.

Facilities of the airline include new offices and enlarged cargo space at the Los Angeles International Airport. A new ticket office was opened earlier this month by Hans Suesenguth, Frankfurt, a member of the board of executives, on the street level at 633 W. Sixth St., Los Angeles. On the 21st floor of the same building, a new regional sales office also was inaugurated with Gerhard Kuhlmann, regional sales manager, in charge.

What about vacationing on a farm in Denmark?

"This is the first time I've really had a holiday with the kids along — we hardly saw them except at mealtimes," said a visiting housewife after she and her family had spent their annual holidays on a farm in Denmark.

It all began when the head of one of the local tourist associations in Jutland arranged for a few families to spend their summer vacation on a Danish farm. That was in 1966. The following year 1,000 guests from abroad had the same pleasant experience, and a conservative estimate for 1968 shows that 17 local tourist associations can now offer vacation accommodations on about 300 farms all over the country, with an estimated capacity of 1,300 beds. And the project is developing fast.

Along with this growth have gone efforts to establish uniform prices, hygienic standards, etc. That the farm must boast a bathroom would seem to be obvious in this modern world — and it is much more interesting to learn that another firm condition is that the farm must be a going concern, actually engaged in agricultural activities in one form or another. No dude ranches are allowed in this scheme. No half-timbered walls unless they are genuine. Real live pigs, poultry, and people are the rule.

Another and equally important standard requirement is that at least one member of the farm household must have a working knowledge of the language of his guests. This not only for obvious practical reasons, but also because the basic idea is as much that of the "bringing together" of people as merely another way of providing accommodation for more tourists.

Also in keeping with this basic idea is the rule that no farm must take in more than eight guests at any one period. It is felt that the desired personal contact between hosts and guests cannot develop satisfactorily if more guests are taken in than a number representing one or two normal families. Rules and regulations apart, however, the keynote is informality in a relaxed and friendly atmosphere.

The project will be interesting to watch for several reasons. First of all, it demonstrates the constructive results of ready cooperation between alert and active local tourist associations, and the centralized official tourist offices, having at their disposal adequate staff, a whole network of branches in foreign countries, and government contacts, as well as facilities for communication and distribution of information.

Secondly, the project shows the practical possibilities of establishing cultural interchange and personal communication between visitor and host country; so often clamored for by those who, even today, look askance at international mass tourism, without — at least as far as has been noticed — ever bothering to advance constructive alternative suggestions as to how people could spend their increasing leisure in better and, presumably, more "cultured" and rewarding ways than by traveling abroad in group arrangements, made cheaper by the dozen.

True enough, we still see tourist groups being herded for full speed from one attraction to the other but — and this is the third and most vital point of the fast-growing vacation-on-a-farm-scheme: we also see a new trend, away from hectic sightseeing and toward a more relaxed attitude.

The eleven-countries-in-twenty-one-days type of tourism may not yet be a thing of the past, but the twenty-one-days-in-one-country type of tourism is definitely a thing of the future.

There is a growing realization of this among those who have made tourism their business.

The classical attractions are no longer sufficient to catch and hold the interest of holiday-makers. Seeing them may have been the lifelong dream of the tourist of yesterday, but today they are just one choice among many. Without trying to classify "the tourist of today" into a non-existent stereo-type, it may still be safe to say that, to a large extent, relaxation is now the goal, rather than museums and cathedrals — and sore feet!

It is a very clear demonstration of the fact that, far from being tired of traveling, people are more ready than ever to spend their holidays abroad, provided they can find reasonable comfort at a reasonable price, combined with opportunities for recreation — such people will love a vacation on a Danish farm.

Lufthansa first foreign line to receive Boeing 747s

Lufthansa German Airlines, which a year ago moved its operations from San Francisco to Los Angeles where it has since been building up its facilities, will be the first foreign carrier to receive delivery of the Boeing 747s.

Three of the giant aircraft have been purchased with delivery scheduled for mid-February, mid-March and mid-May. Two additional aircraft have been ordered for later delivery.

Service of the 747s will be inaugurated April 1 between New York and Frankfurt, and two months later between Chicago and Frankfurt. Plans for utilizing the aircraft on the Los Angeles-Frankfurt route have not yet been finalized.

Facilities of the airline include new offices and enlarged cargo space at the Los Angeles International Airport. A new ticket office was opened earlier this month by Hans Suesenguth, Frankfurt, a member of the board of executives, on the street level at 633 W. Sixth St., Los Angeles. On the 21st floor of the same building, a new regional sales office also was inaugurated with Gerhard Kuhlmann, regional sales manager, in charge.

AROUND THE WORLD WITH DELAPANE

South Pacific islands losing that warm and easy feeling

By STAN DELAPLANE

Warm and rainy weather in Tahiti. Some signs the tourists are becoming disenchanted with the lovely islands. And vice versa. You can't throw a dozen jets a week into the islands and keep that warm, easy feeling in the local people.

France plans to explode six more nuclear bombs. Tahiti is full of military. New hotels, but prices are about like Honolulu. Tonga is having a crime increase and not enough jobs for young people coming to the capital from the outer islands. That's a straight arrow kingdom where stores can't sell anything on Sunday. Thus setting up backyard bootleg bread bakers. No sports on Sunday. Not even swimming. And no taxis.

Dissent in Fiji. Will the loads of tourists take over the islands? Already they've got tours to take you into the back country.

To see the unspoiled natives and spoil them.

By 1974 the airlines plan to unleash the supersonic French Concorde — the ear-shattering sonic boom — on these islands. "People will get used to it," says an airy airline man. Farewell to Paradise.

"Can we travel overseas with our well-behaved toy poodle? I can't bear to leave her home"

The airlines will fly them, but not all countries will take them. England is firm on a six months quarantine. Even Liz and Richard Burton couldn't bust that one.

France is the country that welcomes dogs. You need a certificate that she's had rabies shots. The Michelin guide shows hotels that take dogs. The French are mad about dogs, and they are seen in the best restaurants. I saw a poodle seated in a chair, napkin tied at its neck, watching the waiter prepare a small steak for him at the table. A first-class gourmet dog. No doubt a member of the Confrerie des Chevaliers du Tastevin.

At an elegant French lunch the other day I got a folder from The Chateaux-Hotels of France. This is a very luxurious chain — hotels in chateaux with expensive period furnishings. A car and driver goes with the package. Not cheap but can be done at $35 a day by pinching a bit.

A most handsome folder with prices. Since the lunch was in San Francisco, you'd better write there for it: French Tourist Office, 323 Geary, San Francisco. Nearly all take dogs. The folder tells you those that do and those that don't.

French dogs also sit at sidewalk cafes. Casing the passing poodles just as the owner eyes the passing miniskirt parade.

Pan American has a free folder on how to fly with dogs. (We expect to fly this year with a new Chesapeake retriever puppy. Reports on this later.) I ran into a woman in Hawaii who boarded with a toy poodle hidden in a hat box. She said: "After you get by the gate and into the air, they can't THROW you off."

"The books say not to eat raw food from the Mexican markets but we hate to miss the local food."

The books also say OK if you peel it yourself. I carry a knife with all the odd blades — knife blade, corkscrew, screwdriver. You'll be surprised how much you use the repair blades in Mexico.

Now in the market buy these: Zapotes, a kind of fruit — how can you describe taste? Try it. Try chirimoyas. Try jicamas. Peel it. Slice it. Fix it the way you see it on the street corner. A dash of salt, lime and hot sauce. A big brown vegetable with the texture of a turnip.

Another goody in the Mexican markets is the hot chocolate. (Get to the market early when it's open and bustling.) They beat the chocolate to a froth with sugar and cinnamon. That's the way they were doing it when Cortez arrived. But get there at dawn. By 10 in the morning, the action slows down. The Mexicans take a morning nap. The tourists get up and say, "My what a lazy country. Everybody sleeps."

HAWAII'S FLORA, different than anywhere else in the United States, includes the "snake tree" (above), growing at the Polynesian Cultural Center in Laie, on the island of Oahu. This unusual coconut tree is 82 years old, stretches more than 41 feet laterally, and still bears coconuts.

ANSWER: According to the new law passed in August 1968, all passports were automatically made valid for five years from the date of issue shown on Page 2. Therefore, passports issued in May 1965 are valid until May 1970 without any renewal action. If your family is planning to travel after this date, they must apply for new passports. Therefore, passports issued in May 1965 are valid until May 1970 without any renewal action. If your family is planning to travel after this date, they must apply for new passports. When applying for new passports, it will be necessary for them to present their old passports, two new passport photos, between 2 1/2 and 3 inches square and a $12 fee for each application to a passport agent of an authorized clerk of court.

QUESTION: Where does one obtain a European passport and find out about vaccinations, shots, etc. Also age limits for photos and other preparations? Mrs. M.L.

ANSWER: Passports for American citizens contemplating foreign travel are issued by the U.S. Passport Agency in Los Angeles. A person living in other than Los Angeles County may apply at the office of a federal or state court having jurisdiction to naturalizing aliens.

Karpin on bridge

by Fred L. Karpin

While he was the Chinese ambassador to the United States from 1946-1956, Wellington Koo derived much enjoyment from the game of bridge. In the deal presented today, which arose in a rubber-bridge game about 20 years ago, Mr. Koo, in the West seat, "swindled" our South declarer in the latter's play of a slam contract.

Neither side vulnerable. North deals.

Having heard the opponents bid aggressively to a slam in hearts, and looking at his own hand, Mr. Koo realized that his part-declarer would go down at trick two when East returned a diamond for West to ruff.

So rightly or wrongly, declarer spurned the finesse in diamonds. He won the trick with the board's ace, and led the 10 of hearts, taking the finesse against East's hoped-for king. Eventually Mr. Koo also made his king of diamonds, for the setting trick.

ner didn't figure to have even one jack in his hand. Therefore to lead either a spade or a club was tantamount to conceding declarer's slam.

After some deliberation as to where the setting trick might come from, Mr. Koo decided his best hope was to talk declarer out of taking the diamond finesse. Thus, at trick one, he opened the six of diamonds!

WHEN THE dummy was put down, our South Declarer didn't care for what he saw. If West's six were a singleton (which it could easily have been), then by taking the finesse and losing to East's king,

How class winners were decided

The cars were divided into nine classes and competed only against other cars in their class.

The car that was best in any one test was awarded a score of 100%. The other cars were scored according to how they compared to the winner.

Example: If car A was tops in fuel economy with 10 miles per gallon it would receive a score of 100%. Car B totaled 8.4 miles per gallon and received an 84% score. Car C with 7.34 miles per gallon scored 73.4%. The overall class winner was the car whose average percentage for all three events was the highest.

How class winners were decided

The cars were divided into nine classes and competed only against other cars in their class.

The car that was best in any one test was awarded a score of 100%. The other cars were scored according to how they compared to the winner.

Example: If car A was tops in fuel economy with 10 miles per gallon it would receive a score of 100%. Car B totaled 8.4 miles per gallon and received an 84% score. Car C with 7.34 miles per gallon scored 73.4%. The overall class winner was the car whose average percentage for all three events was the highest.

The American car... on trial!

Nine classes of new cars were put on trial at the 1970 Union 76 Performance Trials. 60 new models in all. They were purchased at random in dealer showrooms across the country. This insured that cars tested in the Performance Trials would be the same cars you'd be most likely to buy. No modifications were permitted on test cars, and all tests were scored with elaborately-accurate scientific equipment.

This year, for the 13th time, the Trials were sanctioned and supervised by NASCAR (National Association for Stock Car Racing). NASCAR sanctions almost every major stock car event in the country, so their officials and scorers were perfectly suited to the expert examination required by the Trials' criteria. They made sure that each car got a maximum of 1500 miles break-in and practice driving and no more than 10 man-hours of tune-up work.

The Union 76 Performance Trials are run as a service to the new car buyer. They provide an unbiased, comprehensive, factual comparison of which cars perform the best in the ways that mean the most to you.

You will see the Union Performance Trials winners seal on the cars displayed by many manufacturers across the country. This tells you that the car has won one or more of the Trials' tests for its class. Look for it, when you're looking for that new car.

THE FIRST TRIAL:

Fuel Economy

The fuel consumption of each car was determined by driving a prescribed distance under typical traffic conditions.

Each car completed the Daytona International Speedway road course exactly 5 times. During each lap, a car had to maintain an average speed of 40 mph except for a "speed zone" in which it had to be traveling 65 mph. A car also had to come to a complete stop once on each lap. This routine closely simulated the effects of normal driving on gas consumption.

For this test, the cars' regular fuel system was closed off. It was then fitted with a special canister of premium or regular 76 gasoline, depending on the engine's specifications. Highly-sensitive scales weighed every canister to the closest 1/10th of a gram before and after the run. The difference in weight was translated into the miles-per-gallon consumption rate of each car entered in the trials.

The final results tell you which cars can be expected to deliver the best miles-per-gallon performance and save you the most fuel dollars.

THE SECOND TRIAL:

Acceleration

The Trials also measured the time each new car took to accelerate from 25 mph to 70 mph—a normal occurrence when entering expressways or passing on highways. To do this accurately, every car was fitted with special portable electronic timing equipment.

A test car started a run by cruising at just under 25 mph. It was then given a signal to accelerate as fast as possible to 70 mph. An electronic clock started when the car hit exactly 25 mph, and stopped at exactly 70 mph. Speeds weren't taken from dashboard speedometers but were determined by a fifth wheel attached to the rear of each car.

A car made two runs on the same course, one in each direction, to minimize the effects of any wind. The official time was the average of both runs.

The results will help you select a car that can give you more confidence behind the wheel.

THE THIRD TRIAL:

Braking

This test measured a car's ability to come to a complete stop from 65 mph in a single traffic lane. Before the test, each car warmed up its brakes to simulate the effects of normal driving.

Depending on the car's class, it was required to make a specified number of warm-up stops from 70 mph. These were gradual stops to a specified rate of deceleration to produce the effects of normal stop-and-go driving.

For the actual test, each driver speeded up to at least 65 mph. When he entered the test course, he applied his brakes. An electronic marker attached to a rear-facing fifth wheel marked the exact spot on the pavement where the car hit 65 mph. Officials then measured the distance between the mark and the exact spot where the car came to a dead stop. This duplicates a high-way emergency stop situation.

Many of the by-ones which border the 12-foot lane were hooked down, or the test car infringed on any other rules. penalties were assessed.

The final results will help you find the car that has the performance you want in the class you prefer.

Return of the Smothers Bros.

By VERNON SCOTT
United Press International

Among the most uptight people on the planet last year was Tommy Smothers, the more hyperthyroid of the Brothers Smothers.

This year, at least in the first few weeks, Tommy is a changed man.

After battling with CBS, the FCC and other opponents — usually superior in weight — Tommy has regrouped, calmed down and matured more than somewhat.

He and brother Dick will star in an NBC special at 10 p.m. Monday, Ch. 4 titled "The Return of the Smothers Brothers."

THE DONNYBROOKS and brouhahas with the establishment are forgotten for the time being.

"We're going to have fun," said Tommy from his new Beverly Hills headquarters, mod to a fault. "There'll be something about the Bill of Rights with Ben Franklin, George Washington, Thomas Jefferson and other."

"We hope to be funny and entertaining," Dick said.

The boys were axed by CBS last April 4 in a dispute over the content of their (until then) weekly musical-comedy-variety hour.

Since then the Smothers were considered a bit warm to the touch by other producers.

"We wanted to do something relevant in comedy," said Tommy, "and we still do."

Dick agreed. "We'd like to think that what we're doing is worthwhile and not just innocuous."

THE BROTHERS are on the threshold of building an entertainment empire. With Smothers Inc. they are establishing a music publishing firm, a talent agency, a television arm for producing pilots and other activities.

Annie, the Woman In the Life of a Man

ANNE BANCROFT . . . Stars in Revue Special

Anne Bancroft, whose acting performances have been divided between Broadway and Hollywood, stars in her own special, "Annie, The Woman In The Life Of A Man," at 9 p.m., Wednesday, Ch. 2.

Miss Bancroft, whose achievements have ranged from her memorable Annie Sullivan in "The Miracle Worker" on Broadway to her acclaimed Mrs. Robinson in the film "The Graduate," will act, clown, sing and dance on her special, revealing facets of her considerable talent aside from straight dramatic acting.

Appearing with her in a series of varied sketches and numbers will be Lee J. Cobb, Robert Merrill of the Metropolitan Opera, Arthur Murray, David Suskind, Jack Cassidy, Dick Shawn, John McGiver and Dick Smothers.

In her entertainment special Miss Bancroft will combine her wide ranging talents and versatility by playing "everywoman."

From Valerie, a bride comically tortured with doubts en route to the altar, to Lillian, a soldier's mother reading a moving letter from the battlefield, she portrays a whole spectrum of women, with their strengths and frailties.

Uncle Sam Magoo

... At the unveiling of the first U.S. Flag

"Sometimes I don't know if I'm Backus or Magoo," said veteran actor Jim Backus, referring to the myopic Mr. Magoo cartoon character for whom he provides a voice.

Backus talked about his alter ego during a brief tull in production of the nearsighted Mr. Magoo's second television special, "Uncle Sam Magoo," to air at 6:30 p.m. Sunday, Ch. 4.

"I got tired of seeing and hearing America b u m r a p p e d everywhere! I travel around the world. It's a cliché, that our system isn't perfect, but it's still the best I've seen. So I decided to do a show based on the history of our country. What better format than to have Mr. Magoo turn into

'Uncle Sam Magoo,' be present at every great historical event since the three discoveries of America — yes there were indeed three! — and with fast cuts and montages, trace all the exciting things to Neil Armstrong's first steps on the moon last August."

"I'VE BECOME pretty well identified with the little fellow — nyah, nyah, nyah," Backus continued Magoo-ishly.

To Backus, one of the chief charms about Magoo is that he emerges as a real, three-dimensional personality. He even has a biography.

"Magoo's voice was developed in my radio days when you had to have a double, a voice you could use if you played two roles on the same show," Backus explained.

Backus added the characteristic Magoo laugh when he re-created the voice for friends at parties. The Magoo personality — the complacency, the bombast, the misplaced self-confidence — was developed in railroad club cars as Backus toured the country with stage shows.

"I got Magoo from actual people I met," he explained. "There are overtones of my father, but even more strongly there is the prototype of the traveling American businessmen I met on the road."

BACKUS considers Mr. Magoo a real person, a full person, and he understands him completely.

"Originally I called him the man in the club car. His name was Harvey Kelsey and he was president of Kelsey's Nuts & Bolts. He was the American Colonel Blimp, the sort who showed you his credentials right away."

At birth, Magoo was not nearsighted. When he was reborn as a UPA cartoon, the producers renamed him Mr. Magoo and gave him his familiar squint.

"I don't recall why they did that," Backus admitted, squinting. "Normal aging process, I guess."

The myopic Mr. Magoo was launched on his film career in 1948. An immediate hit, he subsequently starred in some 70 theatrical releases, including a full-length feature film, more than 100 syndicated television shorts and his own television series, NBC-TV's "The Famous Adventures of Mr. Magoo." The first Magoo special, "Mr. Magoo's Christmas Carol," was introduced on NBC-TV in December, 1962, and was repeated each Christmas season for the following five years.

"Magoo played Ebenezer Scrooge in 'Christmas Carol' and now he's playing Uncle Sam," Backus pointed out. "That's pretty good casting for a cartoon character."

MR. MAGOO gained his surname from Point Mugu, a spit of land on the Southern California coast north of Malibu. Later he was given a little-known first name — "Quincey" — which seemed suited to his personality.

"We all agree he's from the East, and he's definitely a product of the Ivy League," Backus said. "According to 'Old Grad Magoo,' which we did in 1959, he graduated from Rutgers."

Reasonably successful in business, now retired, the fictitious Mr.

PAN AND FAN MAIL

I WONDER if the daytime serial, "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing," Ch. 2, 1 p.m., is getting ready to go off the air? Lately I have seen three of the regular cast . . . on other programs and commercials; also two have been written out . . .

If this program goes off the air, I think it will be a real loss to those of us who enjoy an excellent cast, good story line, good script and, above all, interesting people to know!

What can we do?

D.C.P.,

(Tell CBS about it).

I MUST commend Robert Vaughn and Elke Sommer for their portrayals . . . in the movie, "The Venetian Affair," aired Jan. 30, Ch. 2.

In the TV Log, the movie was described as a "maddling spy film," which I feel was an unjust criticism. The description should have read, "maddling script; superb acting." Miss Sommer and Vaughn made this movie believable. Also, they made the scenes look easy, when in actuality, they weren't.

You could almost feel the pain and torture Vaughn went through seeing his beloved ex-wife on a film, smelling her well-known perfume which seemed to have brought memories, and the agony of having her shot, dying and then dead in his arms.

Good movies leave things to the imagination. In the short love scene between Elke and Vaughn, you saw them kiss passionately, then the scene was cut off. It left you wondering.

It is too bad that the public cannot see more of Robert Vaughn . . . It's too bad that the "Man From U.N.C.L.E." went off the air . . .

"I don't recall why they did that," Backus admitted, squinting. "Normal aging process, I guess."

The myopic Mr. Magoo was launched on his film career in 1948. An immediate hit, he subsequently starred in some 70 theatrical releases, including a full-length feature film, more than 100 syndicated television shorts and his own television series, NBC-TV's "The Famous Adventures of Mr. Magoo." The first Magoo special, "Mr. Magoo's Christmas Carol," was introduced on NBC-TV in December, 1962, and was repeated each Christmas season for the following five years.

"Magoo played Ebenezer Scrooge in 'Christmas Carol' and now he's playing Uncle Sam," Backus pointed out. "That's pretty good casting for a cartoon character."

MR. MAGOO gained his surname from Point Mugu, a spit of land on the Southern California coast north of Malibu. Later he was given a little-known first name — "Quincey" — which seemed suited to his personality.

"We all agree he's from the East, and he's definitely a product of the Ivy League," Backus said. "According to 'Old Grad Magoo,' which we did in 1959, he graduated from Rutgers."

Reasonably successful in business, now retired, the fictitious Mr.

PAN AND FAN MAIL

I WONDER if the daytime serial, "Love Is a Many Splendored Thing," Ch. 2, 1 p.m., is getting ready to go off the air? Lately I have seen three of the regular cast . . . on other programs and commercials; also two have been written out . . .

If this program goes off the air, I think it will be a real loss to those of us who enjoy an excellent cast, good story line, good script and, above all, interesting people to know!

What can we do?

D.C.P.,
Long Beach

(Tell CBS about it).

I MUST commend Robert Vaughn and Elke Sommer for their portrayals . . . in the movie, "The Venetian Affair," aired Jan. 30, Ch. 2.

In the TV Log, the movie was described as a "maddling spy film," which I feel was an unjust criticism. The description should have read, "maddling script; superb acting." Miss Sommer and Vaughn made this movie believable. Also, they made the scenes look easy, when in actuality, they weren't.

You could almost feel the pain and torture Vaughn went through seeing his beloved ex-wife on a film, smelling her well-known perfume which seemed to have brought memories, and the agony of having her shot, dying and then dead in his arms.

Good movies leave things to the imagination. In the short love scene between Elke and Vaughn, you saw them kiss passionately, then the scene was cut off. It left you wondering.

It is too bad that the public cannot see more of Robert Vaughn . . . It's too bad that the "Man From U.N.C.L.E." went off the air . . .

Magoo has enough income to live comfortably for life. His tastes are modest, his demands few.

"Magoo is often thought of as an irascible, hot-tempered old man," Backus continued. "But, underneath, he's really very good-natured. He's a helper, a do-gooder. Being a forceful personality, he always takes charge. Right or wrong — and frequently he's wrong — he takes charge."

BACKUS said that Mr. Magoo is even more popular in England than he is in the United States. The English think of him as an American edition of their own John Bull. Backus reported he was flattered to see, on an English theater marquee, a Magoo short given top billing over an "also playing" — "Dr. Zhivago."

"The English like Magoo because they have a terrific sense of humor. They love to kid themselves a bit. Maybe that's the reason they survive," he said.

"Americans are the same way, or maybe I should say we used to be. Sometimes I feel we've lost this ability to laugh at ourselves. We're getting uptight."

Backus reflected soberly:

"If we ever stop laughing, we're lost."

'Experiment in TV' Series Opens

The opening production of "NBC Experiment in Television," for its fourth season, at 5 p.m. Sunday, Ch. 4, will be "Dream on Monkey Mountain," an original play by Trinidad writer Derek Walcott. This drama was presented at the Eugene O'Neill Memorial Center Theater last summer to highly favorable reviews.

NBC sent a production unit last fall to Trinidad to film the play especially for television. It was originally done in the theater in Trinidad under Walcott's direction, and performed by a company he himself trained, made up of avocational actors who had other jobs by day. It was this cast that the O'Neill Center brought up to the United States. NBC filmed it in Trinidad in a new production, with Hugh A. Robertson as director, and Bruce Bassett as producer.

Walcott summarizes his play as follows: "The play, a dream, takes place in the mind of an old Negro woodcutter brought near the pitch of madness by the pressures of loneliness and doubt. Also, this dream is a quest, a progress enacted by the old charcoal-burner, Makak, and his crippled squire, Moustique. On this quest reality mixes with hallucination, through suffering and through an anguished pride in his people, another fable is enacted, the Monkey-man (Makak) becomes a legendary lion. He makes a mental journey to Africa, but there, as the lion-king, he suffers disenchantment when he realizes that history is another kind of revenge. He emerges from his dream, humbled but real, and withdraws to his mountain retreat, purified by his experience, praying that the world will have a new beginning."

What Happened to Debbie? Bad Rating Due to Unfair Start, She Says

United Press International
Is there no place on television for a happily married heroine?

Evidently not.

Unless the star is a widow, witch, or genie, she is doomed.

Debbie Reynolds knows this to be fact. Her situation comedy show reportedly was cancelled due to anaemic ratings.

A FEW DAYS before the guillotine lopped off Debbie's pretty little head, she sat in her dressing room at MGM explaining why her show was far back in the pack.

"It's because we don't have a fair and even start," she said.

"We come on the air right in the middle of 'Mod Squad.' It's a very good show, and people aren't going to switch from the middle of that program to ours.

"In fact, I have to hit my kids on the head to have them tune in their mother's show. Now they watch out of loyalty, but it's embarrassing having children with lumps all over their heads."

DEBBIE was in a light mood. She accepted the series with the understanding it would have a solid two-year run, ratings notwithstanding.

Now, doubtless, she will be paid for not appearing next year.

Debbie's failure to jog the seismograph needle at Caltech is in no way due to lack of effort or care.

"We've worked hard," she said. "I spent about 70 hours a week on the show, rehearsing, reading scripts, shooting the show and attending business meetings.

"A new time slot would have helped."

THE ACTRESS nibbled at her lunch, preoccupied. At this time Lucille Ball, Marlo Thomas, Elizabeth Montgomery, Barbara Eden, Doris Day, Diahann Carroll, Sally Fields, Hope Lange and Juliet Mills are starring in their own shows and, presumably, will return next season.

"I accepted a television series because they aren't making movies for actresses anymore," Debbie said.

"If an actress wants to work steadily, television is the answer."

Feminine leads are restricted to situation comedy, even second leads are lightweight: "Petticoat Junction," "Green Acres,"

"The Beverly Hillbillies," "The Governor and J.J.," "The Brady Bunch," "My Three Sons," "Get Smart" and "Here Come The Brides."

Television, as a rule, doesn't take females seriously. The heavy drama is left to actors.

Someday, females will correct this slight. When they do, not even "Bonanza" and "Gunsmoke" will survive the accumulated wrath.

CBS, Gleason Trading Glares

CBS AND Jackie Gleason are now in one of their occasional periods of glaring at each other. It is contract renewal time and there is some evidence that the Great One is not in as good a bargaining position as usual.

Gleason's Nielsen ratings have not been particularly impressive this season, particularly on nights he has presented variety hours instead of the "Honeymooners." His program, too, is among the most expensive to produce—and the Florida-based star turns out only 20 shows a year.

THIS WEEK, both CBS' "Merv Griffin Show" and NBC's "Tonight Show" will originate in Hollywood. Griffin, who has been talking to movie stars on the coast for the past month, moves on to Las Vegas Feb. 23 for six shows before returning to

WOMEN OFTEN SUFFER BLADDER & KIDNEY IRRITATION

Resulting In Secondary Backache, Nerve Tension and Loss Of Sleep

After 21 times as many women as men suffer from feeling old, tired, worn out and depressed by losing sleep and worrying about getting up nights, due to common irritation of the Kidney, Bladder and Urinary Tract. This condition, often due to a germ called the colon bacillus, and non-specific germs, may cause frequent, urgent, strong, cloudy and painful urination and may often result in secondary backache, headache, nervous tension and disturbed sleep. To combat the foregoing germ irritation, bladder pain, aches and nervous tension; CYS-TEK, a scientifically formulated medicine quickly releases a gentle, mildly-antiseptic bacteriostat in acid urine. CYS-TEK also contains 2 quick-acting analgesic pain relievers. ## CRITICS' CORNER

RETURN OF THE SEA ELEPHANT, aired Feb. 8, Ch. 7.

Jacques Cousteau and his undersea adventurers reported on their studies of the big sea elephants — "The Cyranos of the Sea" — in another fascinating chapter of the ABC series. The sea mammals, which often weigh three tons, were observed on a short section of beach on Guadalupe Island off Baja California. There the animals flock around Christmas time to give birth to their young and to mate — in such numbers that many of the newborn are smothered or crushed.

There was some stunning undersea photography showing the creatures, so clumsy waddling on land but so graceful in the water.

It was a study in irony. The mammals were hunted almost to extinction before 1911 when the Mexican government protected them. There followed what the program called "a population explosion" of sea elephants — which is now threatened by man's pollution of the waters off the California coast. — Cynthia Lowry, AP

A STORM IN SUMMER, aired Feb. 8, Ch. 4.

There is every chance that "A Storm in Summer," the enormously moving and hauntingly memorable play that graced Friday night's "Hallmark Hall of Fame" over NBC-TV, may prove Rod Serling's most enduring and very possibly his most important work to date.

With skill equal to his compassion and his profound yearning for reconciliation in the face of ever-more threatening polarization, Serling forces us to confront the purging truth that no man is a stranger to bias and hypocrisy—aggressor and victim alike. He does it chiefly through two finely drawn antagonists — Peter Ustinov as the elderly Jew with a tongue of flint and a heart of gold, and 10-year-old N'Gal Dixon as the distrusting young black whose suspicious of the white man understandably spitting up like porcupine quills. With withering perception — tempered by a stubborn insistence that even haters have a core of decency — Serling defolates the sham and shame of the cultivated peripheral bigots who inhabit country clubs and walk insulated on suburban streets... — William Tusher, Hollywood Reporter.

WILD RIVER, aired Tuesday, Ch. 2.

"Wild River," (CBS) combined an assortment of themes, all pleasant and interesting.

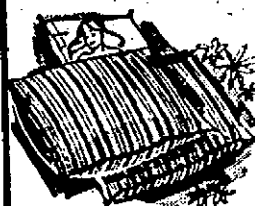

Basically the program was a filmed account of a trip down the Salmon River in Idaho by twin ecologists named Craighead and their children.

That portion of the hour was exciting, handsome and typical of the series — the Craigheads shot the rapids, scaled cliffs, banded the golden eagle. Then from time to time there were small excursions into other areas, all for the purpose of showing pollution of our waters — and also, perhaps, because there was not enough Salmon River film.

There were stunning shots of the majestic Hudson River and of the serene, blue Potomac. Then closeups of these rivers showed detergent foam floating like dirty meringues, raw sewage and industrial wastes pouring into the streams, dead fish.

Then, too, there were short excursions into American history. The film of the Hudson moved into a short history of West Point at the time of the American Revolution. The sight of a deserted miner's cabin stimulated a reminiscence of the days of the Western gold rush, both illustrated by pictures.

CRITICS' CORNER

RETURN OF THE SEA ELEPHANT, aired Feb. 8, Ch. 7.

Jacques Cousteau and his undersea adventurers reported on their studies of the big sea elephants — "The Cyranos of the Sea" — in another fascinating chapter of the ABC series.

The sea mammals, which often weigh three tons, were observed on a short section of beach on Guadalupe Island off Baja California. There the animals flock around Christmas time to give birth to their young and to mate — in such numbers that many of the newborn are smothered or crushed.

There was some stunning undersea photography showing the creatures, so clumsy waddling on land but so graceful in the water.

It was a study in irony. The mammals were hunted almost to extinction before 1911 when the Mexican government protected them. There followed what the program called "a population explosion" of sea elephants — which is now threatened by man's pollution of the waters off the California coast. — Cynthia Lowry, AP

A STORM IN SUMMER, aired Feb. 8, Ch. 4.

There is every chance that "A Storm In Summer," the enormously moving and hauntingly memorable play that graced Friday night's "Hallmark Hall of Fame" over NBC-TV, may prove Rod Serling's most enduring and very possibly his most important work to date.

With skill equal to his compassion and his profound yearning for reconciliation in the face of ever-more threatening polarization, Serling forces us to confront the purging truth that no man is a stranger to bias and hypocrisy — aggressor and victim alike. He does it chiefly through two finely drawn antagonists — Peter Ustinov as the elderly Jew with a tongue of flint and a heart of gold, and 10-year-old N'Gal Dixon as the distrusting young black whose suspicions of the white man understandably spring up like porcupine quills. With withering perception — tempered by a stubborn insistence that even haters have a core of decency — Serling defolates the sham and shame of the cultivated peripheral bigots who inhabit country clubs and walk insulated on suburban streets... — William Tusher, Hollywood Reporter.

WILD RIVER, aired Tuesday, Ch. 2.

"Wild River," (CBS) combined an assortment of themes, all pleasant and interesting.

Basically the program was a filmed account of a trip down the Salmon River in Idaho by twin ecologists named Craighead and their children.

That portion of the hour was exciting, handsome and typical of the series — the Craigheads shot the rapids, scaled cliffs, banded the golden eagle. Then from time to time there were small excursions into other areas, all for the purpose of showing pollution of our waters — and also, perhaps, because there was not enough Salmon River film.

There were stunning shots of the majestic Hudson River and of the serene, blue Potomac. Then closeups of these rivers showed detergent foam floating like dirty marionettes, raw sewage and industrial wastes pouring into the streams, dead fish.

Then, too, there were short excursions into American history. The film of the Hudson moved into a short history of West Point at the time of the American Revolution. The sight of a deserted miner's cabin stimulated a reminiscence of the days of the Western gold rush, both illustrated by pictures.

Man Hunters

Man is so old he doesn't even know how old he is.

His age has always been a mystery. How far back in time do we go?

In the past 50 years scientists have made great strides in finding the answers.

"It's a kind of detective story," says Nicholas Noxon, who is producer-writer-director of "The Man Hunters," an hour-long documentary surveying the search for man's origins. The special will be aired at 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, Ch. 4.

"THE TRAIL is, you could say, some millions of years cold," Noxon notes, "the bodies have been dead a long time."

How do you pick up such a cold trail?

Noxon has spent a year in research and in film production. He went to the sites of "finds" that date back over three million years.

He filmed sequences with the "man hunters" themselves, the actual "detectives" conducting the search for evidence of early man. These are the paleoanthropologists, geologists, geochemists, paleontologists, and other scientists who tediously dig and/or analyze the "clues." They study the bones, teeth, tools, fossil plant pollen, rocks and other telltale material related to our pre-historical ancestors.

MOST OF the knowledge about prehistoric man has been gained in the past 50 years, according to Noxon.

Many of the discoveries in the past half century have accomplished an interesting fact. The more that the scientists find in their various "digs," the farther back they push man's apparent age.

Among the early revelations was the finding of the bones in 1856 of what came to be known as the Neanderthal man.

He's still being studied and Noxon visits a cave in

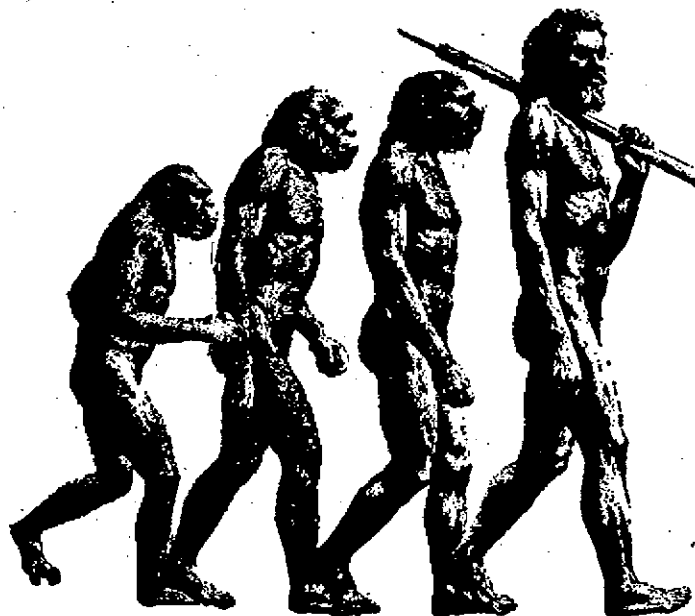

E. G. MARSHALL who narrates "The Man Hunters," stands in front of scientifically accurate suit which represents Australopithecus, man's earliest known ancestor.

Nice, France, where the floor is being combed for additional knowledge of this man.

But Neanderthal man is "only" 40,000 to 100,000 years old.

There were other early "men" unearthed — the so-called Java Man, Peking Man, Heidelberg Man, and similar "individuals." These finds moved man's age back to the half-million mark. They were called Homo erectus.

FOUR STAGES OF early man are highlighted in "The Man Hunters." The four apelike ancestors (from left) are: Australopithecus Africanus, Australopithecus Robustus, Homo Erectus and Cro-Magnon Man.

THEN, IN 1924, a South African, Dr. Raymond Dart, found the first of what was later to prove to be extensive remains of a type he named Australopithecus, or African man-ape. Dart, still vigorously pursuing his investigations, shows and explains his find on the program.

Dart's man was a sort of pre-man, not an ape, and very, very old. This man-ape's age is generally accepted as being one to two million years old.

Dr. Louis Leakey, who is also on the program, found another man-ape, a vegetarian who died out but who had been a contemporary of the meat-eating Australopithecus.

Then, three years ago, new discoveries were made in a wild area of southern Ethiopia, the Omo Valley. An expedition under Dr. F. Clark Howell, head of the Department of Anthropology at the University of Chicago, uncovered even older remains than the Australopithecus. The Omo bones and teeth from man-apes have been scientifically and accurately dated back 3,500,000 years.

ARTHUR TREACHER
Not Kidding

The Grievous Affronter

United Press International

The art of the elegant put-down, the grievous affront, is dead in the United States except for the ripostes of Arthur Treacher, second banana to Merv Griffin on his nightly show.

Viewers are amused by Treacher's abuse of guests, assuming he is kidding.

Englishman Treacher definitely is not joking.

"Everything I say on the air is heartfelt," said Treacher, looking down a not inconsiderable length of beakish nose.

"There is no style left in the polite insult as practiced by Eric Blore and other oldtimers," he lamented. "He could quell you with a look, or by asking his employer politely if he were going to wear brown shoes with a dinner jacket."

"Of course he wouldn't have asked that of C. Aubrey Smith for fear of suffering a caning on the spot."

ON A RECENT Griffin show Merv played host to a prominent female performer advocating the abolition of restraining undergarments, including brassieres. Her claque in the audience applauded wildly.

Treacher dashed their bravado by asking, "Why is it you and your kind are all so drab?"

The one-time butler of a hundred Hollywood movies was pleased recalling this minor triumph.

"AMERICANS haven't the talent to insult a person with dignity," he said. "They may call you a foul name, but it's not the same thing at all. There is no wit in it."

Clearly, an incensed Englishman can be ruthlessly incisive and specific with an insult, coming straight to the point.

For instance, when Treacher was hospitalized recently he returned to the show with an admonition from doctors to cease imbibing for a time. Griffin foolishly asked Arthur how it felt working the show without his customary nip of alcohol.

"It's all right," Treacher answered testily, "but I never realized what a bloody awful show it is."

TREACHER, unlike other night-talk shows, is hardly an unguent to ruffled guests who thrust and parry with the Top Banana. If the guest star is wounded Arthur is delighted to provide the coup de grace.

'We Won't Offend Anyone'

We're not going to offend anyone — which is a novelty for us," says Tom.

"All the controversial lines will be delivered by Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson and Mark Twain."

"Listen to this from Jefferson: 'I hold that a little rebellion now and then is a good thing.'"

"Or Franklin: 'Where complaining is a crime, hope becomes despair.'"

"Or Jefferson: 'Where the press is free and everyman is free, all is safe.'"

Smotherers said the show will try to bring out "the basic concepts on which our country was founded."

Return of the Smothers Brothers

"Hopefully, in a year or two we won't have to perform to keep the company going," Dick said.

ASKED WHAT had wrought the changes in Tommy's usually defensive, sometimes hostile attitudes, Tommy was interrupted by Dick who said, "Tell about our guest stars."

It was a protective, deflective suggestion by Dick to shield his brother from what might have been a rough moment for Tommy.

But Tommy, from outward appearances, is calm, thoughtful and still endowed with an oblique and sensitive sense of humor. To further direct the conversation away from Tommy's personality, Dick said, "We're going to get involved in night clubs, discotheques, gamblers and the underworld."

Tommy laughed at his brother's wild promise.

"We tried it straight and it didn't work," Tommy concluded, grinning. "Now we'll see what happens."

Somewhere, somehow Tommy Smothers underwent a metamorphosis since his beef with CBS. It looks good on him.

SPECIAL

MAN - HUNTERS (4), 7:30 p.m. — E. G. Marshall is narrator for a look at the continuing efforts by archaeologists and anthropologists to learn about the origins of man. Filmed at archaeological sites in Europe and Africa, hour also utilizes animation and impressionistic film sequences to dramatize what life may have been like when prehistoric man roamed the earth. Scientists discuss their finds, pushing man's beginnings back 3 million years, but with gaps in the story.

JOURNEY OF RFK (7), 8:30 p.m. — John Huston is narrator for David L. Wolper's film study of the life of Robert F. Kennedy — both public and private — as seen by his friends and enemies. Written by Arthur Schlesinger Jr., show broadly sketches the full range and sweep of the Kennedy years, from boyhood to his California campaign, and features insights by Robert McNamara, Charles Evers, Art Buchwald, Frank Mankeiwicz and Rose Kennedy.

the authors of nine books, the producers and directors of 11 television specials and the producers and directors of six films.

"Sesame Street," originated by the Children's Television Workshop of National Education Television, is shown on about 200 public and commercial stations in every state and its audience is estimated at two million families.

Television specials cited were "Appalachian Autumn," Columbia Broadcasting System; "Artur Rubinstein," National Broadcasting System; "As I See It," NBC; "Berlioz Takes a Trip," CBS; "Cosmopolis," American Broadcasting System; "Desert Whales," ABC; "The Japanese," CBS; "Meet George Washington," NBC; "The Mystery of Animal Behavior," CBS; "Sahara: LA Caravane de Sel," NBC; and "Three Young Americans in Search of Survival," ABC.

PRODUCERS OF "Sesame Street" hope to announce financing for another season of the children's program within two or three weeks.

The original funding, $2 million, paid for one year of research and the current season of 130 programs. This came from federal grants of $4 million, another $2.75 million from the Carnegie and Ford foundations and smaller amounts from other foundations.

Producers of the series want $7 million for another year, partly to hire special personnel to work in inner-city slum neighborhoods — day-care centers, schools and with parent groups — to stimulate use of the series.

Revival of Radio Drama? Forget It, Say Radio Executives

By LINDA DEUTSCH
Associated Press

Writers who shaped radio's "Golden Age" of drama are pleading for its revival. But four bosses of the medium today say, forget it.

"All we ask for is a little token drama once in awhile," said writer Norman Corwin in a panel discussion last week with radio network presidents at a meeting of the Hollywood Radio and Television Society.

"Because something was successful in a bygone era, doesn't mean it will be successful today," was the rebuttal of Walter Schwartz, president of American Broadcasting Co. radio.

ARCH OBOLER, who wrote the classic "Lights Out" series, joined Corwin in bemoaning radio's present news-and-music image. "The networks are immune to comments on their cultural copouts," said Corwin, author of such radio dramas as "The Plot to Overthrow Christmas," and the drama series "CBS Radio Workshop."

Clark George, president of Columbia Broadcasting Co. radio, said, "We couldn't support drama-oriented network programs even if we liked them." He cited the high cost of actor and writer salaries.

MONEY, the network presidents agreed, is the key to radio programming.

"You talk about a golden age of radio in terms of dollars," said Victor Diehm, president of Mutual Broadcasting System radio.

"The only golden year we know is the 50th year of radio. We're just trying to keep our heads above water."

THE PUBLIC wants radio to spout fact, not fiction, said Arthur Watson, president of National Broadcasting Co. radio, and the public influences advertisers who buy radio time.

"Radio is a business," said Watson, "and we must be responsive to what our customers want."

Radio's profile on its 50th birthday this year, said the presidents, is a news-oriented medium specializing in commentary, sports and information.

WHAT OF radio's future?

"What we are doing today we won't be doing tomorrow," said Schwartz. "Radio is changing that fast." He predicts more music than ever. Said Diehm: "We're giving them news today, but tomorrow we might be doing a song and dance."

But drama, they said, would have to be done on the local level, if at all, with small radio stations producing their own

Revival of Radio Drama? Forget It, Say Radio Executives

By LINDA DEUTSCH Associated Press

Writers who shaped radio's "Golden Age" of drama are pleading for its revival. But four bosses of the medium today say, forget it.

"All we ask for is a little token drama once in awhile," said writer Norman Corwin in a panel discussion last week with radio network presidents at a meeting of the Hollywood Radio and Television Society.

"Because something was successful in a bygone era, doesn't mean it will be successful today," was the rebuttal of Walter Schwartz, president of American Broadcasting Co. radio.

ARCH OBOLER, who wrote the classic "Lights Out" series, joined Corwin in bemoaning radio's present news-and-music image.

"The networks are immune to comments on their cultural copouts," said Corwin, author of such radio dramas as "The Plot to Overthrow Christmas," and the drama series "CBS Radio Workshop."

Clark George, president of Columbia Broadcasting Co. radio said, "We couldn't support drama-oriented network programs even if we liked them." He cited the high cost of actor and writer salaries.

MONEY, the network presidents agreed, is the key to radio programming.

"You talk about a golden age of radio in terms of dollars," said Victor Diehm, president of Mutual Broadcasting System radio.

"The only golden year we know is the 50th year of radio. We're just trying to keep our heads above water."

THE PUBLIC wants radio to spout fact, not fiction, said Arthur Watson, president of National Broadcasting Co. radio, and the public influences advertisers who buy radio time.

"Radio is a business," said Watson, "and we must be responsive to what our customers want."

Radio's profile on its 50th birthday this year, said the presidents, is a news-oriented medium specializing in commentary, sports and information.

WHAT OF radio's future?

"What we are doing today we won't be doing tomorrow," said Schwartz. "Radio is changing that fast." He predicts more music than ever. Said Diehm: "We're giving them news today, but tomorrow we might be doing a song and dance."

But drama, they said, would have to be done on the local level, if at all, with small radio stations producing their own

The Miracle of a Diamond

There are many miracles ... beginning with the very existence of the crystals we call diamonds. Then ... the fabulous miracle of cutting and polishing that so exquisitely releases and reflects the gem's true color, fire and brilliance, turning a dull-looking pebble into a flash of pure beauty. Finally, the miracle of enduring love and the symbolic expression of that love ... a perfect diamond ring. All these miracles can be yours ... today.

WELLS REPORT

Your world and welcome to it

Some weeks ago in this space I undertook to advise young men on the etiquette of dating women militants. At the time I wrote it, I thought it was actually quite a progressive column — a form of sex education, so to speak. I have since been disabused of this notion by a stream of correspondence, all from women.

If there are any women reading these lines, I wish they would stop right here. I have been informed that "all women's duty is to boycott you." So quit right here and go find Dear Abby. I don't want to get in any more trouble than I'm already in.

The consensus seems to be that I am the propagandist for a worldwide plot that has existed throughout the centuries to hold women in slavery. It is suggested that compared to my article on women militants, such insurrectionary masterpieces as "Mein Kampf," "The Tanaka Memorial," "The Communist Manifesto," and "Thoughts of Chairman Mao" are merely appeals to contributions to the American Red Cross.

I concede that for a large part of history, men have kept women in the status of second-class citizens. They have also kept other men as slaves. They have treated women as property; they have also treated other men that way. They have denied women entrance to the professions; they have also denied lesser-born men that entrance.

Men have also brainwashed girl children into accepting their predetermined status. Brainwashing, however, is a two-way street.

In modern America, for instance, the boy-child is in the almost exclusive custody of his mother until he is of school age.

From the time he starts kindergarten until he graduates from high school, his education is entrusted almost exclusively to women teachers. Feminine values, ideals and tastes are thrust on him; if he does not accept them, he is "bad." It is no wonder he cannot wait to escape into recess and after-school sports, and that he does not intellectually mature until he gets to college.

After a few brief years of self-discovery, he marries and rises to a job where he has a secretary. Thereafter, he is brainwashed by his wife and secretary.

God help him if they program together. For instance, I am eating lunch in my office while I write this column. My secretary just walked in, inspected my lunch, frowned and exclaimed, "Does your wife know you're having two sandwiches for lunch — one of them with white bread?"

No, she didn't. But she will.

The most effective and typical form of feminine brainwashing is demonstrated by a letter that I received from a Miss Cathy Simonan. It was four legal sheets of closely scribbled denunciations written, she informed me, at 3 a.m.

The totalitarians have adapted the technique of mercilessly grilling a sleepy man in the small dark hours of the morning, but it was invented by women. Miss Simonan's letter did not have its proper effect because I did not read it until 10 a.m., but intuitively she knew what she was trying to do. She'll make some man a fine wife.

I hate to reveal this, but the Nixons have separate bedrooms. No man who has ever desperately tried to get some sleep in the hours past midnight while his wife was querying him about what color to paint the living room and where to go on vacation next summer, could ever have coined the phrase "silent majority."

There must be some secret sisterhood that bars a wife from soliciting her husband's opinion except between the hours of midnight and 6 a.m. It's not because they don't talk at other times. If a woman has a sore throat she blames it on not talking rather than the other way around. Every woman tries to avoid a sore throat.

I am not a male chauvinist. I am willing, even eager, to have women take over and run the world. The only thing I ask is that they do it during regular business hours.

LOVE AND FEAR IN A HIPPIE COMMUNE

LOVE AND FEAR IN A HIPPIE COMMUNE

I had met him once before, just after he came in from Connecticut. His hair touched his shoulders now. He said he had found a "family" here and wanted me to see how they lived and meet the people. "The press has been so bad," he said. "We expect citizens to come down on us so hard one night we won't rise up the next morning."

His name is Henry, and he says he is 19 years old. "None of us even knew who Sharon Tate was until the press made 'hippies' her killers." He wasn't nervous, but he kept running his right hand through his hair.

They came for me in a pickup truck one evening when I had my shoes off. I had expected them to call or something. "Ready?" Henry said. T.P., the driver, was with him. He kept snapping his fingers and looking around through the trees and over fences.

About 10 miles later, Henry continued his explanation. He was living in what straights would call a commune and what he called a "family." Nothing sentimental about it. The commune Henry had named "The House" after one he had lived in outside of Waterbury. The family members were "freaks," "hairs." They had jumped or flown out of the usual ways of living in late-60s America and were trying to do fundamental things differently. "Dropouts" is an incorrect term. These people had skyed out, and they hadn't dropped yet. This is what worried Henry. There is only so much soaring and wheeling before gravity or guns bring you down.

Los Angeles police, after arresting suspects in the Sharon Tate murder case, spoke colorfully to the press about the "hippie cult" and the "wolfpack gang" officers had flushed from the bogs of the American subconscious. Newspapers and television came out with editorials saying, in effect, "this is what the life of a hippie leads to — murder."

"We went into the city to get our heads together," Henry said, nodding at T.P. who was driving and barely humming. "We saw the papers with this hippie killer crap, and I said 'Morher, we'd better get back because it's all going to come down on our heads and, if we stand in one place, we're going to get buried.'"

Henry calls nonhippies "citizens." In fact, they all do. "People" are something different. Citizens are folks who do things Fred MacMurray used to do in the movies to make us laugh and Willy Loman did in "Death of a Salesman" to make us go dead inside. Citizens work hard at jobs they hate, yearn heatedly for mythical women to replace their wives, buy margarine and save Raleigh coupons. Citizens live in the city and outnumber the people 1,000 to one. Most of all, they like guns. They like to have them around their homes.

"We talked about the Tate case at The House and decided to move," he said. "We'd moved before. The House isn't a house anyway, it's just a tent camp. We're as open as a baby. We waited for four or five nights for vigilante citizens to come and kill themselves some hippies. Nothing happened, but the pigs and the press kept up the 'killer cult' jazz. We aren't anything like that. So we thought about getting ourselves some friendly press."

T.P. hadn't said a word, but seemed to be a rock of confidence. I told Henry I didn't do the public relations style of writing, but that I'd like to see The House and write about it. "But it's going to be my impressions, good or bad," I said. "So?" Henry said.

About two hours out of Long Beach, we turned off the highway onto a road someone had cleared through low trees and scrub. The House was a large canvas and wood lean-to about 25 feet long and nearly that deep. Two dogs, one named Tyrone, barked up to meet us. It was dark. Two fires were burning, one just outside the main lean-to, and the other in a small tent to the north about 30 feet. I met Harold and his wife, Lucy, who were oldest and married, and therefore accepted spokesmen. They welcomed me. I judged them to be 30 years old.

I ate some soup that appeared to be canned chicken noodle with numerous other things thrown in by an enthusiastic cook. Henry ate, too, and T.P. wandered off, snapping. A girl came near the fire, held out two hands and said her name was Marianne. Her blonde hair was long and looped with a bead net. Her eyes were dark. Violer came up and said hello. I could see her freckles. Two men in their early 20s, Anson and Woody, introduced themselves. It was friendly, they were comfortable and easy. It seemed unreal.

They had hung a blanket off to one side of the lean-to in order to make a sleeping room for me, and I went in with a sleeping bag, wondering if it would be enough to keep the wind from me. Taped on the wooden back of the lean-to, where I couldn't miss it, was a headline from a newspaper: "HIPPIE KILLER CULT." When I asked Harold about it later, he smiled and said, "Oh, that."

By morning, the wind had gone and we circled around the remains of the fire for a "call" or sort of prayer. No god was invoked, but Harold spoke quietly of each member of The House and how each should help the others. Then he called the name of each of us, including me, and we answered, "With us." We ended by slapping hands, almost like baseball players congratulating a homerun hitter.

I stayed the day and the night, talking a lot with Harold, poking around the camp, getting to know the others. The camp was not exactly in a culvert, but was difficult to see from two or three hundred yards away. From the main highway, it was invisible. The wooden back of the main lean-to was made of four or five wooden sections hooked together with thongs and jointed so as to block the wind. When The House moved, the lean-to could be dismantled and loaded into the pickup truck easily. There was also a small cooking tent with a corrugated tin and brick oven. Otherwise, the camp lived completely outdoors.

The House makes no attempt to be self-sufficient, although I was not told where the "family" gets its money. Marianne makes wool blankets, but the profit probably is small. Her loom is under a tree, and she said she spends three to five hours a day weaving blankets, ponchos and shawls. The men hunt small game, but the rest of the food is bought from stores, except bread. Water is taken from a stream that has in the past dried up. When it does, the "family" members are forced to buy bottled water or truck bottles of it from some other source.

They are stringy physically, but there is something hard about them, something almost coiled to spring. Harold wears his hair shoulder-length, and has a reddish mustache that curls down over his upper lip. He wears an Ozark hat, speaks quietly. It was his wife's idea to get five friends and move out into the country on property that the government or some land developer has the presumption to own. Of the five who started out two years ago, only Anson remains. The others are relatively new arrivals, like Henry, friends of friends, or strangers who knew someone in San Francisco, or who are just looking for a place to live.

The House is not a free-for-all. Newcomers wishing to join are told during "size-up" (probation) that if they are requested to leave by only one member of The House, they must leave. It is not surprising that the camp is clean and work is done routinely. Hard drugs are taboo, and so is possessive sex between unmarried people. This latter ethic is not easy to enforce, but The House has been together long enough for members to respect each other. "Any community knows what human values are without making laws out of them," says Harold. "If you don't get tangled up in laws, it's pretty easy to live together with the values of mutual respect, helpfulness, comfort and inspiration."

Maybe. Anyway, The House does glow at times. Everyone plays some musical instrument — fiddle, guitar, bass — and the feeling in the camp is an easy one. A "job" is an unknown word, but work isn't. Straight society, as Harold points out, looks too much to a person's job rather than to what kind of life he lives. The House demands work that housewives have long since been relieved of. The work is done, with skill not unlike that of homesteaders of the 1870s. "But the question we ask strangers," says Henry, "is not 'what do you do' but 'what do you like.' " There's the difference. Seeing the lives led by the "family" calls into question timetables, work schedules and production goals. Are these the things life is to be lived for? The House says no, and insofar as eight people are a small community, they have a community that many Americans want but won't admit they don't have.

Anson has it all figured out. "Why do the straights stomp down on wide-open rock festivals? Because they're afraid of crime? Hell, no. What they're afraid of is youth. What they're afraid of is love between a man and a woman who openly express it. What they're afraid of is being faced with

JOSEPH WOOD KRUTCH

Joseph Wood Krutch, 76, is the award-winning author of numerous books, a former professor at Columbia University and one-time editor of The Nation magazine.

I was born in 1893. This means that I can very dimly remember the childish excitement generated by our preposterous fun war when Teddy Roosevelt charged up San Juan Hill and the returning hero, Lt. Hobson, kissed the ladies who attended his lectures. It means also that most of the mechanical inventions which now dominate our environment — telephone, automobile, phonograph, moving picture, airplane and television — were invented, or at least came into general use, within my memory.

No thought of that ancient age is more vivid to me than the fact that in 1911, just three years after the Wright brothers first demonstrated their flying machine to the Army, I flew as a passenger in the first airplane ever seen in my native Tennessee, a Curtis biplane made of bamboo, piano wire and oil silk. I would not have believed it had I been told then, a teen-ager, that the time would come when I would see nothing remarkable in flying around the world on a jet.

But these outward changes are in the end less significant than another: The world in which I reached manhood was at the end of a golden age of optimism, confidence and security the like of which it seems improbable anyone will enjoy again for a long time to come.

Something like 300 years ago western man first began to think about what we call Progress as an ideal to be striven for and, sometimes, as no less than inevitable. What Progress meant was increasing comfort, increasing wealth, increasing knowledge, increasing understanding and, as a consequence, increasing security for those western civilizations which had come to understand Progress as an ideal.

For almost 300 years Progress really did seem to progress. Life did seem to have been steadily becoming more comfortable and more secure. But within the memory of many of us still living, this confidence and the evidence to support it faltered and was replaced by growing doubts and threatening problems.

The world in which we found ourselves living had come face to face with difficulties and dilemmas our grandfathers would not have anticipated as possible. And the decade of the 60s was the most troubled, the most insecure, the least optimistic and the most threatened decade of the past 300 years. We enter the new decade faced with a complex of problems which the more pessimistic have declared to be unsolvable. Thus 300 years of Progress have led us into a situation which — so some intelligent people have concluded — promises not the brighter and brighter future which the tremendous advances in knowledge and power seemed to promise. Rather they claim to see a decline as inevitable as that which destroyed the classical civilizations of Greece and Rome, and a new Dark Age lying not very far beyond. This is a paradox we must understand if we are to avoid its consequences.

1914

It was World War I which put an end to several centuries of increasing optimism, comfort, self-confidence and the sense that the future of civilization was secure because it had at last found the right road. No one who was not then adolescent or older can know how much we took for granted many things which, by now, have proved to be simply not true. (Just before Germany declared war against France at the beginning of World War I, the New York Times published an editorial regretting that war seemed inevitable but assuring its readers that, thanks to various international agreements, this war would be a limited one conducted with strict adherence to the rules. Yet it turned out to be the nearest thing to a total war since the Middle Ages. All the written as well as all the unwritten assumptions and agreements turned out to be no more than one of those scraps of paper dismissed as such by a German spokesman.)

I myself never came closer to the war than San Antonio, Tex., because, as a graduate student, I was sent into the psychological division of the Medical Corps. I spent inglorious days administering mental tests to the new conscripts — a process which was in itself a suggestion of a new society to come. Sometimes we held personal interviews where it seemed likely that a very low score was due to extremely limited experience rather than to mental deficiency. To a regular question "Who is the President of the United States?" a common answer was "Uncle Sam." But the one answer I remember best was given by a fellow who had never before left the rice fields of Louisiana. He looked up slyly and replied, "It ain't YOU, is it Boss?"

Those of us who lived through those days only half realized that what we had undergone was not a mere setback but the long-time reversal of the trend and the end of an epoch. Each of the five decades which followed has been troubled in ways which the 19th century had not known and the last of them all, the 60s, is the most beset by the fear that its problems are unsolvable.

DECADES I HAVE KNOWN

By Joseph Wood Krutch

Celebrating the Armistice in New York City in 1919. "Those of us who lived through those days only half-realized that what we had undergone was not a mere setback but the long-time reversal of the trend and the end of an epoch."

yet born in the 20s. To them, that decade is now a sort of legend characterized chiefly by the flapper and bathtub gin. Both of these were real enough, as I know from experience. Though first a beginning teacher, then a beginning writer and fundamentally a serious person, I too danced the foxtrot to a Dixieland band and on occasion frequented the speakeasies where one was challenged by a voice behind a closed door and usually replied with something like "George sent me." We felt very much men of the world.

It was really our reaction to the same half-formulated "after us the deluge" psychology which is so much more self-conscious today among both the peaceful dropouts and the anarchistic activists. In the 20s we still hoped that the war really had been a war to end war and really had "made the world safe for democracy." But with good reasons we were already not so sure.

I think it surprising that it has been so seldom pointed out that the 20s was also a decade which expressed aggressively its loss of another disillusion with the comforting assumptions of the pre-war years. Sinclair Lewis and H. L. Mencken may be taken as the representative men of the then-current literature and they were rejectors of what they liked to call the Puritan inheritance. "Debunking" was a newly coined word to describe the loss of faith in the supposed virtues of our American forefathers. Our heroes had not really been heroic. They all had had clay feet and many of them were rascally or stupid.

According to Mencken, the average American was — one of his favorite words — a boob. According to Sinclair Lewis, the solid virtues of the unsophisticated dwellers outside the metropolitan area, the very people who had formerly been called the backbone of the nation, were merely dull, insensitive, vulgar, intolerant and hypocritical. We had no usable past, and our only hope was in the rejection of provinciality and Puritan scruples.

I partly shared, yet was not wholly satisfied by, either the current estimate of our past or the faith that all we needed was to get rid of our inhibitions. My book, "A Modern Temper," published in the spring of 1929, was an exposition of what is now called the existentialist philosophy. At bottom I did not really share either the frivolity or the optimism which seemed so characteristic of the decade. Bertrand Russell called it "a terrifyingly honest book" but the reaction of many was expressed by one letter writer who said, "If you believe what you say you do, why don't you go hang yourself?"

There was only one thing to trust in those days — our prosperity. The financial experts assured us that we had entered a new era, that we now understood financial manipulation so well that depressions were a thing of the past. Then came the 1929 crash.

Just how nearly universal the unreasonable trust had been is suggested by the fact that even I, an intellectual and not a very highly paid one at that, should nevertheless have been the owner of what had by then come to seem a very considerable sum. National City Bank in which was invested the yet born in the 20s. To them, that decade is now a sort of legend characterized chiefly by the flapper and bathtub gin. Both of these were real enough, as I know from experience. Though first a beginning teacher, then a beginning writer and fundamentally a serious person, I too danced the foxtrot to a Dixieland band and on occasion frequented the speakeasies where one was challenged by a voice behind a closed door and usually replied with something like "George sent me." We felt very much men of the world.

It was really our reaction to the same half-formulated "after us the deluge" psychology which is so much more self-conscious today among both the peaceful dropouts and the anarchistic activists. In the 20s we still hoped that the war really had been a war to end war and really had "made the world safe for democracy." But with good reasons we were already not so sure.

I think it surprising that it has been so seldom pointed out that the 20s was also a decade which expressed aggressively its loss of another disillusion with the comforting assumptions of the pre-war years. Sinclair Lewis and H. L. Mencken may be taken as the representative men of the then-current literature and they were rejectors of what they liked to call the Puritan inheritance. "Debunking" was a newly coined word to describe the loss of faith in the supposed virtues of our American forefathers. Our heroes had not really been heroic. They all had had clay feet and many of them were rascally or stupid.

According to Mencken, the average American was — one of his favorite words — a boob. According to Sinclair Lewis, the solid virtues of the unsophisticated dwellers outside the metropolitan area, the very people who had formerly been called the backbone of the nation, were merely dull, insensitive, vulgar, intolerant and hypocritical. We had no usable past, and our only hope was in the rejection of provinciality and Puritan scruples.

I partly shared, yet was not wholly satisfied by, either the current estimate of our past or the faith that all we needed was to get rid of our inhibitions. My book, "A

largest part of what I hoped would be sufficient for me to retire on in my early thirties, had risen to over 400. It sank ultimately (if my memory serves) to something over 40. I did not, like some, jump out of the window. But like many more, intellectuals and garbage collectors alike, I realized that this was indeed "the deluge." With a similarly situated friend, my wife and I finished a bottle of Scotch between us and went to bed to wake up in a world which would never, in our lifetime, be the same again.

1930

The war to make the world safe for democracy had spawned two great dictatorships. American society had revealed itself as (Mencken's word) a boobocracy. And now prosperity had disappeared overnight. Three things that couldn't happen here had happened.

Thus the depression, a stunning, unexpected and seemingly inexplicable phenomenon, dominated the political, the intellectual and, for many, the physical life of the 30s.

First it was thought that it would cure itself, and the economic pundit Roger Babson appeared on the news reels to predict that 1930 would be "a very good year." Then the New Deal, tossing classical economic theory overboard, proposed to tax and spend our way out of it. The most conscious and conspicuous section of the intellectual community rejected both ideas, suspecting that democracy had demonstrated its inability to meet the needs of the modern world. A considerable number became card-carrying members of the Communist Party. Many more were what were called "fellow travelers," and even the most skeptical were frequently inclined to agree that communism was at least "an interesting experiment."

Before the decade of the 30s ended, the economic depression had begun to fade — just why is a question to which there are still rival answers. Perhaps it was merely because the approach of another world war "primed the pump" (to use Roosevelt's phrase). But for whatever reason, the extreme left-wing political and literary theories faded with it. The official Communist Party shrank into insignificance and most of the left-wing poets, novelists and playwrights lost their brief notoriety.

At the very beginning of the 40s, Pearl Harbor convinced most Americans that the war to end war hadn't ended it, even though they did not yet realize that what it had done instead was to mark the beginning of an era when wars, declared or undeclared, would be taken almost as much for granted as they were in the Middle Ages. There was not yet the sense of helplessness and hopelessness into which Vietnam has driven so many

THE HAIR-RAISING YEARS

The Beatles started hair growing for men.

Twiggy's short cut.

Hippie goes long.

Baby Jane Holzer's mane.

By Mary Ellis Carlton

HAIR. HAIR. HAIR.

Long, short, curly, straight, braided, frizzy, postiched, shiny, dull, teased, ironed, bouffant, pampered, tinted, frosted, tipped, streaked, transplanted, oily, dry, coarse, fine, thick, thin or — heaven forbid! — bald.

HAIR — in all lengths and all shapes — was the preoccupation of the 60s for both men and women. There's little indication the picture will change during the 70s.

If, as was true with Samson, long and abundant hair is the source of great physical strength, this — the Now Generation — promises to be the strongest in modern history. Most chroniclers would challenge such an eventuality — but all agree that, down through the ages, hair has had personal and public, sexual and political significance. It has oft been noted that changes in clothes and coifs harbingers changes in mores and manners.

That established, it's little wonder historians are holding their breath and psychologists are biting their nails. Never before has a decade seen such revolutionary changes in national headlines, both animate and inanimate.

The current hair fetish began in the early 60s. For women it was Jackie Onassis who put the bouffant message across, sexy Brigitte Bardot who got the swingers to let their hair down and Baby Jane Holzer who uncaged the lion's mane, a look that went wild in the fashion slicks.

Many women soon found the bouffant and the lion's mane weren't enough. They wanted more and more hair. Then came the fall. The hairpiece. The wig. Just about the time everyone invested in attachable hairpieces, along came Mia Farrow who, in a fit of temper, cut off her long blond hair. She not only started a hair trend (the shortest of the age), she also ended up — for awhile anyway — with Francis Albert Sinatra, object of her hair-cutting temper tantrum.

Even before Mia, England's Vidal Sassoon attracted world attention by cutting women's hair in never-before geometric shapes. His two best angles were Peggy Moffit and Twiggy.

It was those four Liverpudlians — the Beatles, shaking their manes, yelling "yeah, yeah, yeah" — who got hair growing for the men. It grew and grew (at the rate of .03 inches per day, per man) into the national phenomenon we see today. Young men looked to the stars for inspiration — to rock, folk and pop stars like Bob Dylan, the Rolling Stones, the Beatles.

Long locks started showing up on men everywhere — on the streets, on college and high school campuses (despite all those dress and good-grooming regulations), even in some offices and factories.

Schoolmasters, shop foremen and establishment officials found it difficult to keep their upper lips stiff over all this. Many gave in, doing some hair-raising of their own — on heads, on chins, on cheeks, on upper lips.

More socially significant, hair became the symbol also of protest. College students, hippies, flower children and demonstrators grew facefuls of hair like Fidel and Che and shoulder-length locks like Jesus. Much of America started looking like a studio backlot or a flashback to bygone days. Negroes, proclaiming that Black Is Beautiful, let their hair grow native. The Afro look, they said, was symbolic of a new-found pride in their heritage.

What has all this done to the hairstyling profession? It, too, is growing, say the experts. Hairdressers like Sassoon, Kenneth of New York, (who gave Jackie her first bouffant) and Alexandre of Paris, (who turned Liz Taylor into Cleopatra) have become international celebrities. The average woman from coast to coast, even more than before, makes a weekly ritual of her visit to the hairdresser. Many jet-setters like Charlotte Ford and not-so-average women like Babe Paley sometimes see a hairdresser as often as three times a day — before lunch, after lunch and again in the evening. Many actresses pack their hairdresser along with their clothes.

Hairstylists are, however, taking a new look at their concepts, now acknowledging that women will no longer allow their hair to be sprayed into rigid beehives or bouffant molds. Fashion's regimented days are over; the "one look" seasons are passe.

As we turn over a new decade, coiffures follow other aspects of fashion to which they are so closely linked — avoiding manifestos about the "hairstyle of the year" or the "cut of the year."

What's ahead in hairstyles is yet to be seen. Most predict the 70s will be hairy years, too. Some say that the trend toward beards and longer hair in the "establishment" will force the hippies and young rebels into other fashions. Whatever, stylists point out that, if anything, more hair gives leeway to frequent changes in hairstyles — from morning to night, from day to day. It's the new freedom to be individual, not a copy of somebody else. (For what local hair stylists have to say about upcoming trends, turn the page.) □

ing that Black Is Beautiful, let their hair grow native. The Afro look, they said, was symbolic of a new-found pride in their heritage.

What has all this done to the hairstyling profession? It, too, is growing, say the experts. Hairdressers like Sassoon, Kenneth of New York, (who gave Jackie her first bouffant) and Alexandre of Paris, (who turned Liz Taylor into Cleopatra) have become international celebrities. The average woman from coast to coast, even more than before, makes a weekly ritual of her visit to the hairdresser. Many jet-setters like Charlotte Ford and not-so-average women like Babe Paley sometimes see a hairdresser as often as three times a day — before lunch, after lunch and again in the evening. Many actresses pack their hairdresser along with their clothes.

Hairstylists are, however, taking a new look at their concepts, now acknowledging that women will no longer allow their hair to be sprayed into rigid beehives or bouffant molds. Fashion's regimented days are over; the "one look" seasons are passe.

What's ahead in hairstyles is yet to be seen. Most predict the 70s will be hairy years, too. Some say that the trend toward beards and longer hair in the "establishment" will force the hippies and young rebels into other fashions. Whatever, stylists point out that, if anything, more hair gives leeway to frequent changes in hairstyles — from morning to night, from day to day. It's the new freedom to be individual, not a copy of somebody else. (For what local hair stylists have to say about upcoming trends, turn the page.) □

No need to discard anything, anymore — because of stains. No matter what the stain, grass, ink, perspiration, food, paint, tar, grease, shoe polish, etc. Goop will remove that stain from rugs, upholstery, handbags, shoes, convertible tops and all washable clothing! And Goop is extra special when it comes to dirty, grimy hands. Goop reaches deep into pores, loosens grease and grime, then floats it away. Rub it in — rinse it off — there goes the dirt. Try Goop for all heavy dirt or stain problems. Goop is a real "GRIME FIGHTER"

Enter the 70s . . . the beginning of a decade that promises challenges and changes undreamed of . . . a decade of emancipation from all the old rules . . . a decade of free choice and complete individuality.

What does this mean in terms of hairstyles? Everything says Joe Oliver, owner of a posh salon in Redondo Beach, winner of 42 major hairstyling awards and chairman of the Long Beach Hairdressers Guild show of the year.

Aptly called Hair '70, the two-day event—scheduled for Feb. 22 and 23 at the Edgewater Inn—will take a totally different approach to hair fashions according to Oliver. There will be no "look of the year," no stereotyped trends, no fashion proclamations. The days of regimented hairstyles are over. The free-style era has replaced them.

Oliver notes that although there will be hairstyling competitions for trophies and the show's $500 grand award, the more than 2,500 hairstylists expected here for the event will be more concerned with structural condition of hair and individualized styling than with ornate aspects of the coiffure.

Josef Coghill, president of the guild, says trends for the coming season can be anything: windblown, short, cool and casual . . . long flowing and rippling . . . ponytailed, braided, whipped into a top-knot or swept into large curls. The word for Hair '70 is natural.

For variety in hairstyles, however, most experts predict women will be wearing longer hair in the 70s—either their own or hairpieces. Hairstyles will be less definite, tendrils will fall on purpose; coiffures will be more fluid. Hair will have a subtle discipline of its own—perhaps a short cut in front and longer in back, allowing the wearer evening pin-up privileges.

Whatever you call the 1970 mid-loss and whether you trace its origins to Moulin Rouge or "Hair," all women recognize the necessity for a professional hand behind the tumble. Call it "calculated casual," or "artful disarray," women need help in getting it that way.

Wes Stanley, a member of the show committee and known to the profession as Mr. Wesley, notes salons more and more are concentrating on hair vitality, on treatments that rebalance the hair's chemistry, and get to the root of hair problems.

The new headlines all feature marvelously natural hair—silky plants, flying tresses, twisted top-knots or pompadours. But the point is, hair must be in great shape . . . must be radiantly healthy . . . to carry off the simplicity of the new uncontrived dos.

And that's what Hair '70 is all about.

HIPPIE COMMUNE

their own desires acted out by others. Man, everybody wants to run around naked."

A little glib, but it has the stare of truth. Why is straight America so agitated by the sight of a naked human body or the sound of free laughter? Possibly they are envious. I was. My habits, my largely intellectualized values seemed slightly brittle at The House. I moved too quickly, spoke too quickly and my eyes darted around. I was not made to feel this way, but it happened. Perhaps we have lost the capacity for gentleness in the traffic of our cities. It was not until my second evening there that I stretched out, belched and took in the smell of leather, the smoke, the clear wind and the gentleness.

Even imagination does not permit a textbook discourse on hip commune society and institutions. I would use the word 'anarchy' to describe The House if anarchy were not wrongly equated with chaos. Anarchy, in a strict sense, means the absence of formal government. Social relationships in the anarchic House are like relationships between friends; they are based on a community of feeling, not on the threat of punishment by law.

"When we get a lot of difference of opinion on something, we get together and talk it out," Harold said. "We'll vote, if it comes to that. We have our problems. People get strung up now and then. We just leave them alone until they come down." Harold is quietly persuasive, and I gathered his word carries the weight of respect. He is from Los Angeles, and obviously educated. All of The House are from California except Henry, but there is some talk of moving out of the state, possibly to New Mexico, or even old Mexico. "The comrades," Anson said. "They know how to live." Not so much trouble getting marijuana. Cleaner beaches.

I had a small, willful fantasy while sitting at the fire. In it, a sharply dressed politician approached The House and was met courteously. Presently, he began to talk about voting habits of Southern California. But the conversation was not joined. I imagined him saying, "If the Democrats can pull out a few more votes from the 44th District, there'll be no stopping a sweep in precinct after precinct." And he was answered, "It's hard to dry cranberries without having them shrivel. First, you cover them with a damp rag." It would be that way because The House is totally out of touch with current

Woody drawled, puffing on a pipe. This doesn't come across as wholly genuine. I know he knows who Nixon is, and he knows I know. It's a kind of game that says, "If I pretend national politics are insignificant, they won't bug me." There's something to this, just as there is something to the unspoken but obvious pref-about to smother thought and conversation. The House has no answers. "America, my friend," its people say with poet Joni Mitchell, "how did you come to trade the fiddle for the drum?"

After spending some time at The House, it is impossible for me to see how these people are any-speaking sadly. Fiddles, wash-rub bass, played by hands that know how to get the sound. They are close to what gives them happiness, and the cool turn of a TV dial seems remote, like the workings of distant machinery. Stylized Dylan, Mitchell, even Leonard Cohen done with an Arlo Guthrie easiness that makes the hurt of the words even more painful. Or a dance around the fire, one or two joining in, the others clapping, for after a day of keeping the camp livable this is play. After a day of sun, this time lets firelight take over, the smiles of girls.

It is the play children know, and that we've forgotten. It is pleasure, fun, without the self-consciousness that twists us off in the middle of a song we've written.

I felt, throughout my stay at The House, that I wasn't being played to, and that the others were being genuinely open with me. Only T.P., who never spoke to me, remained strange. He has this thing about snapping fingers and mumbling tunes. I wasn't catered to, or ignored. I was accepted, even by T.P. When Henry backed the microbus around to take me out, The House members gathered and told me they were glad I could have stayed. I thought they were.

Henry didn't say much on the way back. I thought, with all the good things about The House, why won't it work for me and most others? Because we are too tangled in our lives to let go of the trappings as the hippies have done? It takes a decision to let go, and most of us are too old to make it by the time we are 10.

But there is something else. There is isolation and fear. Fear of vigilante committees, fear of the straight society that they try to forget, but can't. Technological America looms too large everywhere to permit the group's healthy life to expand as much as it would. Jets scream unseen overhead. You can hear them even through the guitars.

In a way, these hippies are trying to live the American frontier myth, and they might be able to do it. Inside the steel and electronics of 1970 America are flickering groups of city children getting back to the earth. They might be able to do it. But it takes a great amount of courage that won't leave them untwisted in the end. □ political maneuverings in the state, and could not care less. The group knows Nixon is president, but it might as well be Humphrey, Prince Rainier or Machiavelli.

To a conventional mind, this unconcern for politics might seem irresponsible at best. Sometimes it looks that way. "Who's Nixon?"

erence for criticizing people instead of policy.

"Why should I vote?" Anson asks. "I would be proud to vote in a community where my values would have a chance to be shared. Not in America of these times. Nor with the war." The war. It is one issue not treated with disdain. It hangs like an awful balloon thing but pure America — the America of 19th century frontier culture. Maybe this is why so many Americans despise them: they are the lost innocence of times when things seemed less mammoth, less out of control.

They are close to what gives them happiness, and the cool turn of a TV dial seems remote, like the workings of distant machinery. Stylized Dylan, Mitchell, even Leonard Cohen done with an Arlo Guthrie easiness that makes the hurt of the words even more painful. Or a dance around the fire, one or two joining in, the others clapping, for after a day of keeping the camp livable this is play. After a day of sun, this time lets firelight take over, the smiles of girls.

It is the play children know, and that we've forgotten. It is pleasure, fun, without the self-consciousness that twists us off in the middle of a song we've written.

I felt, throughout my stay at The House, that I wasn't being played to, and that the others were being genuinely open with me. Only T.P., who never spoke to me, remained strange. He has this thing about snapping fingers and mumbling tunes. I wasn't catered to, or ignored. I was accepted, even by T.P. When Henry backed the microbus around to take me out, The House members gathered and told me they were glad I could have stayed. I thought they were.

Henry didn't say much on the way back. I thought, with all the good things about The House, why won't it work for me and most others? Because we are too tangled in our lives to let go of the trappings as the hippies have done? It takes a decision to let go, and most of us are too old to make it by the time we are 10.

But there is something else. There is isolation and fear. Fear of vigilante committees, fear of the straight society that they try to forget, but can't. Technological America looms too large everywhere to permit the group's healthy life to expand as much as it would. Jets scream unseen overhead. You can hear them even through the guitars.

In a way, these hippies are trying to live the American frontier myth, and they might be able to do it. Inside the steel and electronics of 1970 America are flickering groups of city children getting back to the earth. They might be able to do it. But it takes a great amount of courage that won't leave them untwisted in the end.

A noted nutrition expert recently reviewed the entire matter of food additives in a medical journal — and his conclusions are reassuring.

In summarizing, Dr. Jean Mayer, professor of nutrition at Harvard University School of Public Health, told doctors this:

"It is essential to remind alarmed patients that our food supply is actually much safer than it used to be when spoilage and microbial infestation meant a constant risk of ... food-borne disease for both infants and older individuals."

Continued vigilance over food safety is necessary, of course, but emphasis should be placed on the fact that "we can eat with far more safety than our grandparents did."

"Cancer existed millions of years before chemical additives were invented," Dr. Mayer notes.

He says that natural foods probably contain cancer-causing substances that have yet to be identified.

Dr. Mayer, in his report, reviews the current status of food-coloring matters, preservatives, antioxidants, acids and bases, flavoring agents, artificial sweeteners, taste enhancers, "improving" agents such as enzymes (tenderizers), and jelling agents, stabilizers and emulsifiers.

Details are in Vol. 46, No. 6, Page 195 of Postgraduate Medicine.

Smoking, air pollution and poverty have been blamed for the vast increase in emphysema, a crippling lung ailment.

Dr. Irving Kass, associate professor of internal medicine at University of Nebraska College of Medicine in Omaha, says that the three factors are the main culprits.

Emphysema now ranks second only to heart disease among working men 40-65 in the matter of work disability. The death rate increased 700 per cent between 1950 and 1965.

Dr. Kass says studies at the university's regional chest center indicate that early detection of the ailment is essential if rehabilitation efforts are to be effective.

Ready-to-eat breakfast cereals enriched with phosphates can reduce tooth decay in both children and adults, a new study shows.

This is disclosed by scientific investigators with the Preventive Dentistry Research Institute, Indiana University Medical Center, Indianapolis.

The study confirms earlier surveys.

The new study involved 474 persons living in an institution for the mentally retarded. The study lasted two years and the subjects' drinking water, incidentally, was fluoride-deficient.

Daily consumption of phosphate-fortified cereals may reduce the rate of tooth decay by as much as 50 per cent.

Details are in the Journal of the American Dental Association.

A doctor warns other doctors not to jump to conclusions when diagnosing a patient with long hair and odd clothing.

In a letter to the Journal of the American Medical Association, a physician at University of Colorado Medical Center cites the following case:

A young man with long hair was brought to the hospital with the chief complaint of "peculiar behavior" for 36 hours. The examining doctor equated the patient's long hair and odd behavior with drug abuse. Later, there were second thoughts, and then the correct diagnosis of epidemic meningitis was made.

It would be tragic, the doctor notes, to allow prejudice to interfere with treatment.

Glad you asked that!

By HY GARDNER

Q: Since it's quite a rare honor, why hasn't Noel Coward used the "Sir" preceding his name. Like Sir Laurence Olivier? — Tom Ryan, Philadelphia.

A: Because, sir, he's only had that privilege since Jan. 1, 1970, when Queen Elizabeth bestowed knighthood on him. The distinguished playwright-author reportedly declined the title years ago when it was offered by the Queen's father, George VI.

Q: Was Tennessee Williams once a public stenographer in a hotel? — William E., Peoria, Ill.

A: Not exactly. "I was a professional typist . . . I can write very fast when I feel a play coming to me . . . My mother bought me a typewriter when I was 14 and I've been writing ever since," he told William Goldman, author of "The Seasons — A Candid Look at Broadway."

Q: Wasn't one of the Supremes kidnaped recently? If so, which one? — Julie Ryan, Cleveland.

A: The newest member of the group, Cynthia Ann (Cindy) Birdson, early in December. Held at knifepoint, the courageous girl jumped from the car speeding along the Long Beach (Calif.) Freeway and escaped. The next morning the bungling kidnaper confessed the crime to Las Vegas police. He turned out to be the caretaker of the Los Angeles apartment house in which she lived.

Q: Where did the word "cop" come from? — Buddy Brecher, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

A: Two schools of thought. One claims the letters mean "constable on patrol." The other goes back to Sir Robert Peel, first commandant of the London police. Since he suggested the buttons be made of copper, the officers were called "cops" or "coppers."

Q: Is it true that comedian Myron Cohen is about to get with it — go mod and sport a hairpiece? — Jennie Cohen (no relation), Brooklyn.

A: "A big, bald denial. When I had hair, I was broke!" Myron retorts. "Besides, hair represents a dirty play."

Q: I've got a bet riding on your answer. Didn't Wilt the Stilt Chamberlain once score 100 points in a single basketball game? — Robert Simmons, Abbeville, S.C.

A: Pick up the marbles. Chamberlain certainly made the opposition wilt on March 2, 1962, in Philadelphia. He tossed 36 field goals (2 points each) in a record 63 tries, plus scoring on 28 free throws — a world record. The same year he rewrote the book for points in a single season (4,029), averaging an incredible 50.4 per game. By 1967, Chamberlain was basketball's all-time top scorer, with 23,442 points in eight seasons.

Q: Wasn't the late Mario Lanza (hailed as a "second Caruso") born the same year Caruso died? — Chuck R., Des Moines.

A: Ironically, yes. The year was 1921. Jan. 31 would have been Mario's 49th birthday. His 19-year-old daughter, Lisa, will keep the name Lanza alive theatrically. She was just signed by CTA (Commercial Talent Agency), is studying drama, and is said to have a bright future as an actress.

California! A name still filled with the magic of other eras. A land of contrasts. Of missionaries and mountebanks. Of gold-fever and broken dreams. Of Klieg lights, earthquakes and hot dog stands. Of Sutter's Mill, the Gold Coast, Hangtown, Ciudad de Los Angeles, Anaheim, Azusa and Cucamonga.

Incredible California. The subject of countless songs, innumerable books and millions of feet of film. And now comes the most fitting tribute of all: The history of California will be captured for the first time in an heirloom collection of minted Art Medals.

Sixty exquisite relief art medals, issued at the rate of two medals per month by the California Commemorative Society, can be acquired in your choice of solid platinum, sterling silver or solid bronze.

This unique series will be minted for the Society by the world's foremost private mint. The Franklin Mint. Each medal will be hallmarked and will have the brilliant proof-quality finish which represents the epitome of minting craftsmanship. In solid platinum or sterling silver, each medal will be numbered on its edge to permanently register the individual subscriber's exclusive ownership of all medals with that number in the first edition proof set. The medals will be one-and-one-half inches in diameter... larger and thicker than the silver dollar.

A specially designed album, to store and display the whole set, will be furnished to each subscriber with the compliments of the Society.

Several factors combine to make this one of the most important series of fine art medals ever offered to the collector of coins, medals, historical mementos or art treasures in precious metal. They include: Historical authenticity. The California Commemorative Society has brought together a distinguished group of historians and numismatists to serve on its Advisory Board. These experts have carefully chosen the sixty most noteworthy events of California's colorful 400 year history. The result is a compelling documentary of our most interesting, romantic, exciting and controversial State. The subject matter is timeless... of great educational value for generations to come.

Strictly limited edition. No more than 5,000 subscriptions can be accepted for proof sets in each metal. Applications in excess of this number will be returned. This unusually low limit is specifically designed to enhance the future value of these proof sets. When one considers that only one out of every four thousand Californians can acquire a sterling silver proof set (not to mention collectors throughout the rest of the nation), the opportunity for appreciation is obviously substantial. This series can be considered a "rarity" from the day the first medal is struck.

Unsurpassed quality. It is only through vast experience and application of the very highest quality control standards that The Franklin Mint has earned its reputation as the world's foremost private mint. The Franklin Mint is known and respected by collectors throughout the world for its high artistic standards and flawless workmanship.

Long-Term price protection. Regardless of how high metal prices may climb during the 30 months during which the series is minted, the prices of Solid Sterling Silver and Solid Bronze medals will remain fixed at the price as indicated below for each metal. The monthly prepayment plan (in which the subscriber prepays for only the two medals issued that month) is designed to bring this superb series within the means of even the modest collector.

For the collector who must have the ultimate in rarity—the Solid Platinum Proof Sets—price protection can be offered only to the extent that the subscriber is willing to share in the bullion investment. Details of this arrangement will be sent to each applicant who specifies Platinum.

These are important considerations. But, perhaps, the most important of all is the feeling of personal pride in owning and displaying this truly remarkable series. Here is a source of great satisfaction today... a treasured heirloom tomorrow... a personal treasury of precious metal in a world that is finding the supply insufficient to meet demand. All this can be yours if you act before February 28. This unusual offer will not be available at any retail store at any price.

The Franklin Mint is known and respected by collectors throughout the world for its high artistic standards and flawless workmanship.

Long-Term price protection. Regardless of how high metal prices may climb during the 30 months during which the series is minted, the prices of Solid Sterling Silver and Solid Bronze medals will remain fixed at the price as indicated below for each metal. The monthly prepayment plan (in which the subscriber prepays for only the two medals issued that month) is designed to bring this superb series within the means of even the modest collector.

For the collector who must have the ultimate in rarity — the Solid Platinum Proof Sets — price protection can be offered only to the extent that the subscriber is willing to share in the bullion investment. Details of this arrangement will be sent to each applicant who specifies Platinum.

These are important considerations. But, perhaps, the most important of all is the feeling of personal pride in owning and displaying this truly remarkable series. Here is a source of great satisfaction today... a treasured heirloom tomorrow... a personal treasury of precious metal in a world that is finding the supply insufficient to meet demand. All this can be yours if you act before February 28. This unusual offer will not be available at any retail store at any price.

DECADES

thoughtful people, but war had lost the glamor it still had in 1918. The draftees marched solemnly away, not toward a great adventure but towards a grim fate. To all but a few anachronisms like General Patton "the pride, pomp and circumstance of glorious war" had vanished.

When I visited my native town, Knoxville, in the spring of 1945 it was buzzing with rumors. At Oak Ridge only a few miles away mysterious things were going on. Some said they had to do with the disintegration of the atom, and when this guess was passed on to me, I smiled a rather superior smile. "That," I said, "is a good many years away."

A few months later, on Aug. 6, my wife broke my early morning sleep. "The radio has just announced that an atom bomb was exploded over Japan. What does that mean?" "It means," I said, "that I'm scared to death."

1950

For the first time in history man had been given the power to destroy his whole civilization, possibly even the human species itself. This was the threat which the 40s passed on to the 50s and which is still with us.

But the 50s began to see its broader implications. For the first time since the Age of Technology began, more and more people were suspecting what a few eccentrics had long contended - namely, that technology created new problems at the same time that it solved old ones. Heretofore, it had always seemed that at least the gains outweighed the losses. But could any possible peaceful use of atomic fission be worth the burden which it had imposed upon us: a frantic, never-to-be-ended race to outstrip or at least keep up with the more and more efficient weapons designed by our enemies who might indeed be anybody whatsoever.

This struggle toward a never-to-be achieved security threatens to absorb so much of the wealth, brains and energy of our most capable citizens that there will be less and less available to sustain, much less to improve, human conditions, so that even the affluent may be gradually reduced to the level of the present-day deprived. This is the ultimate statement of the guns-or-butter dilemma. And like the late medieval knight in his armor plate who could neither mount his horse unaided nor get up if he fell off it, we may become paralyzed by the weight of all the offensive and defensive armory we have thought it necessary to provide.

In describing the decade I have, of course, left out the great achievements in science and technology, a certain number of which might be called genuine Progress. Had I, for instance, been born even 25 years before I was, I should probably have died long before I reached my present age. But it is no longer safe to assume that every discovery and invention will necessarily contribute to the improvement of the human condition. And it is no longer only cranks who suspect that we have already passed the point where technology has begun to create more problems than it is solving.

1960

The decade to which we have just said goodbye inherited unsolved every one of the new problems which the preceding five decades had found themselves faced with. War had become increasingly epidemic; we still do not know how to assure the prosperity which the 20s thought almost automatic; and the arms race is more frantic than it ever was before. Is it any wonder that for all our obsessions with security we have never before felt so insecure? And as though all this were not enough, the 60s first realized that it must face still another desperate problem. Overpopulation, the mounting volume of industrial waste and the overproduction of disposable goods which are not really disposable created a suddenly revealed threat almost as serious as that of the atom bomb. Mountainous junk piles begin to accumulate and industrial waste is poured into lakes and streams in quantities which nature, overwhelmed by technology, cannot absorb.

1970

The 70s may be the beginning of the end, or the beginning of a new civilization. If it becomes the latter, it will be, not because we have walked on the moon and learned how to tinker with the genes of unborn children, but because we have come to realize that wealth, power and even knowledge are not good in themselves but only the instruments of good or evil.

WERTHER/MASSENET: Victoria de los Angeles, Nicolai Gedda; Georges Pretre conducting the Orchestre de Paris (Angel, 3-discs). Based on Goethe's sentimental story about Werther, a serious young man, who falls in love with Charlotte, who reciprocates. But in keeping a pledge to her dying mother, Charlotte marries Werther's friend, Albert. Werther, a person of rigid honor, consequently commits suicide. This sad saga supplies the motivation for some of the most glorious pages of French Romantic operatic music. Massenet's gift for depicting feminine sensitivity and sensuality was extraordinary. This set is easily the better of the two currently available. Gedda's ineffably sweet tenor is ravishing, and Miss de los Angeles is in good form, though a sharp ear can detect occasional loss of quality in the upper register. Overall, a first-class production of an opera that deserves to be remembered.

SIBELIUS/THE SEVEN SYMPHONIES; Leonard Bernstein, New York Philharmonic (Columbia, 5-discs). The definitive complete set of the seven Finnish masterpieces that is sweeping its single competitor (Japanese) from the disc market. Bernstein's ardent, flamboyant temperament scores decisively in this craggy, haunting music which runs the gamut of Sibelius' creative genius. And the New York ensemble plays with inspired brilliance. A compelling symphonic experience!

STAFFAN SCHEJA/ROMANTIC SWEDISH PIANO MUSIC (RCA). A thoroughly enjoyable keyboard solo disc by 19-year-old Swedish lad, described by the press as "a pianistic god who made Stockholm's teen-age girls come to the concert hall." Echoes of Grieg, Schumann, Chopin, Prokofiev and even Satie abound in these miniatures that mostly reflect the "salon" idiom. They include opuses by Lars-Erik Larsson (born 1908), Eilhelm Stenhammer (1871-1927), Dag Wirén (born 1905) and Ture Rangström (1884-1947). Simple fare, but worth-while. Played with zest and sparkle.

THE EXQUISITE NANA MOUSKOURI (Fontana). Well titled! The Greek chanteuse dispenses her magic in 12 songs topped by "Les Parapluies de Cherbourg" (in French), "Kathe Trelo Pedi" (in Greek), and an original setting of "The Last Rose of Summer" (in English). Backed by varied instrumental groups. An artist-entertainer of rare distinction.

THE ARCHIES/JINGLE JANGLE (Kirshner-RCA). A youngster's frolic in light "rock-ish" musical garb, cast in the clean-cut Little League image. Twelve tunes, sparked by the popular "Jingle Jangle," "Archie's Party," "Sugar and Spice" and "Everything's Alright." For Sonny and Sis.

VINCENT PRICE/WITCHCRAFT, MAGIC (Capitol, 2-discs). Price, billed as "Distinguished Actor & Demonologist," combines the hocus-pocus of Spell-castings, Love Potion recipes and Curse invocations with some interesting insights into the historic superstitions and practices of the illiterate Middle Ages. Essentially a "talk" disc with some electronic background effects. Includes an intriguing yarn of the alleged tricking of Hitler by a British astrologist, a scatalogical description of "Satan's Kiss of Shame," and an incantation of the Witches Scene from Shakespeare's "Macbeth." Informative. □

Does the mere cost of eating out make you a little afraid of having your kitchen remodeled? Just to think about having to eat out two to three months makes a person's pocketbook shrink and his hopes of remodeling dwindle. However, the fact is, that the average contractor takes 60 to 90 days to remodel your kitchen back to a useable portion of your home. When choosing a contractor, make sure he is a specialist and you eliminate a large portion of this headache. Some of these specialists can even guarantee completion within 21 days or pay a penalty of $50 for every working day over the 21. Therefore, if it only takes 21 days to complete the job, you are actually deprived of the use of your kitchen about 5 days.

For further information call Mr. Kitchen's Remodeling Center, 1819 Redondo, Long Beach, 597-5561.

The Four Main Elements of Composition

By the Guiding Faculty of The Famous Artists School,
Westport, Conn.

Before making a picture, the artist must decide what he wants to paint in it. He has to select his subject matter, and then he has to compose it so that the picture will be as effective as possible.

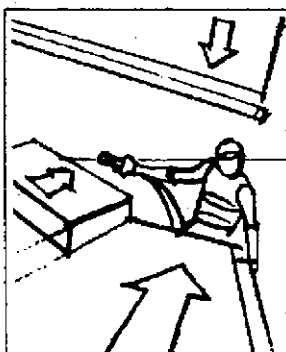

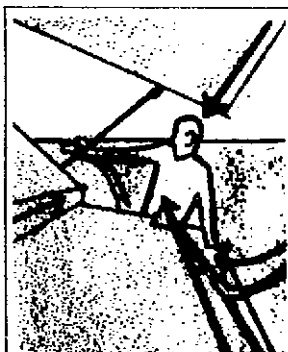

Composition means selecting appropriate elements and arranging them within the picture space so they communicate your idea and your feelings effectively. It makes a great deal of difference which elements you select and how you put them together within your picture space. A picture will be strong and interesting or weak and confused, depending on how it is composed.

Good pictures do not simply happen. They are not the result of thoughtlessly throwing together miscellaneous objects or filling up a background with details. No matter how well you draw or paint, unless you plan your picture carefully, it is likely to leave the viewer with an unsatisfied feeling. A well-composed picture, on the other hand, will give the viewer a satisfied sense of order or beauty, although the viewer may not realize how this satisfaction was produced.

Composition is made up of four main elements: picture area, depth, line and value. These elements will be discussed at length in succeeding articles of this series. Discover how each important element of good composition plays its part by studying the illustrations shown with this lesson.

Next: The illusion of depth makes composition interesting.

PICTURE AREA is the flat surface within the four borders of your picture — the surface on which you draw or paint. When you work in terms of picture area, your chief concerns are how big you make your objects and where you place them. In this illustration the artist made John Kennedy the central figure to command our attention.

LINE has two meanings: (1) The outline which encloses a shape. (2) The line of direction our eye follows in looking at a picture. The latter meaning is the one we refer to here. In composing with line, arrange your objects so their shapes or main lines lead the eye unconsciously to the center of interest, which, in this case, is JFK at the helm.

DEPTH is the illusion of distance or a third dimension. By drawing things in depth, you make them seem to exist in three-dimensional space, and to appear close to the viewer or far away. In this picture the strong feeling of depth is created by the strong shapes of sail and boat in foreground which seem close to viewer, and which form a frame for JFK beneath and behind them. The horizon seems far off.

VALUE is (1) the lightness or darkness of a particular area or shape within the picture or (2) the overall quality of lightness or darkness of the whole picture. Diagram shows how artist used value to strengthen his center of interest. Important forms, notice, are light against a dark background.

TRY THIS EXERCISE IN COMPOSITION

Here's a composition problem: using a boat, a mountain, a lake and a rock. How can we best arrange them in the rectangular picture space shown?

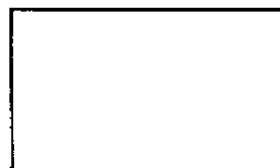

We might try them this way — with rock and boat made small and set against the large shape of the mountain.

Or the rock might be featured. Now both mountain and boat are secondary in the picture.

Here's another possibility. We might make the boat the dominant shape, move the rock to bottom right and treat the mountain as background.

When you have looked over three of the possible compositions, draw a picture area in this proportion and try your hand at composition.

MEL KELEMAN
A Classic Original

Most of the international entrees found in the better restaurants of Southern California are well known and rather standardized.

Included are such entrees as beef Stroganoff, breast of chicken or veal cordon bleu, grenadin of beef and coq au vin (chicken cooked in wine). Made from classic recipes, they are extremely popular. They make a lot of money for restaurateurs who prefer to serve the standards rather than offer experimental dishes which may not be as acceptable.

An exception to the rule is Mel Keleman, the astute, youngish co-owner and general manager at Rochelle's Restaurant, 3333 Lakewood Blvd. near Long Beach Municipal Airport. Mel is a graduate of Cornell University where he concentrated on hotel and restaurant management. During his studies he analyzed many of the classic European recipes and discovered why they are so great.

A few years ago he took a chance and decided to offer an experimental dish of his own. His idea was to create something similar to the classic entrees, but different enough so his guests would realize that Rochelle's had a specialty that couldn't be found in any other restaurant. It turned out so well that it's one of the most popular entrees on his menu.

Mel calls the dish "bocadillos al pescador." That's Spanish which, roughly translated, means "morsels of the fisherman." It includes only shellfish — lobster, shrimp and scallops — marinated in white wine and delicate herbs, then glamorized with garlic butter and fresh tomato. The sauce is light and mild. The bocadillos are $3.95 on a complete dinner which is an imaginative affair of antipasto selections (such as liver pate, marinated vegetables and pickles); French onion soup or soup du jour or mixed green salad with croustons; hot vegetables; two kinds of hot fresh bread, beverage and mints served in a sundae cup.

The beautiful Regency dining room, open every day, also has many of the standard international entrees, from $2.95, as well as chateaubriand, $11.95 for two persons; lobster, trout; king crab, prime rib and thick steaks.

GUIDE by Tedd Thomey

PEOPLE who order the clam chowder at the Belmont Buoy on Belmont Pier are surprised by how many fresh clams it contains. They enjoy it so much they write cheerful notes of appreciation in the restaurant's guest book.

"Grreattt!" wrote Kathy Hall of Palo Alto. "Right!" commented her father, William Hall, who signed his name below hers. Kathy's brother Bennett wrote: "Best shrimp and fries too!" Kathy's mother scribbled the word "Excellent!" and another brother, Randy, finished the family's remarks by saying: "Best everything!"

Others who sign the book describe their reactions with such phrases as "real good!" "A charming waitress," "Will return" and "The best always."

who is also the pier lessee, and her manager-chef, Emil Kollhop, who have worked extremely hard to make this unusual restaurant a success. Its most recent improvements include luxurious carpeting, a fishing scene mural, a stained glass wall divider and other refinements. Its many large windows offer sparkling views of the ocean and boat activity.

The Buoy is located a few hundred yards from shore at the far end of Belmont Pier, near E. Ocean Boulevard and 39th Place, Long Beach. The short walk through brisk sea air sharpens the appetite, adding even greater pleasure to each spoonful of Emil's delectable chowder. He is a lively character with many years' experience cooking in the finest East Coast and West Coast restaurants. His Manhattan-style chowder is made from a treasured recipe. Each batch requires eight hours of patient, hard labor.

The chowder is 35 cents for a cup (served with dinner only) and 75 cents for a large, steaming bowl. Open for luncheon and dinner, but closed Mondays, the restaurant also serves sea food salads, sandwiches and such succulent dinner entrees as fresh sand dabs, London fish and chips, Cape Cod scallops, northern halibut, gulf shrimp, center-cut swordfish, fried eastern clams, steak and lobster combination, live Maine lobster, beer and wine.

GUIDE by Tedd Thomey

PEOPLE who order the clam chowder at the Belmont Buoy on Belmont Pier are surprised by how many fresh clams it contains. They enjoy it so much they write cheerful notes of appreciation in the restaurant's guest book.

"Grreatt!" wrote Kathy Hall of Palo Alto. "Right!" commented her father, William Hall, who signed his name below hers. Kathy's brother Bennett wrote: "Best shrimp and fries too!" Kathy's mother scribbled the word "Excellent!" and another brother, Randy, finished the family's remarks by saying: "Best everything!"

Others who sign the book describe their reactions with such phrases as "real good!" "A charming waitress," "Will return" and "The best always."

Such comments delight the Buoy's owner, June Ascolesi,

Caricatures by Larry Lavioe

who is also the pier lessee, and her manager-chef, Emil Kollhop, who have worked extremely hard to make this unusual restaurant a success. Its most recent improvements include luxurious carpeting, a fishing scene mural, a stained glass wall divider and other refinements. Its many large windows offer sparkling views of the ocean and boat activity.

The Buoy is located a few hundred yards from shore at the far end of Belmont Pier, near E. Ocean Boulevard and 39th Place, Long Beach. The short walk through brisk sea air sharpens the appetite, adding even greater pleasure to each spoonful of Emil's delectable chowder. He is a lively character with many years' experience cooking in the finest East Coast and West Coast restaurants. His Manhattan-style chowder is made from a treasured recipe. Each batch requires eight hours of patient, hard labor.

The chowder is 35 cents for a cup (served with dinner only) and 75 cents for a large, steaming bowl. Open for luncheon and dinner, but closed Mondays, the restaurant also serves sea food salads, sandwiches and such succulent dinner entrees as fresh sand dabs, London fish and chips, Cape Cod scallops, northern halibut, gulf shrimp, center-cut swordfish, fried eastern clams, steak and lobster combination, live Maine lobster, beer and wine.

A 13-year-old Jefferson Junior High School girl made news recently when she appeared before both the Long Beach City Council and the Long Beach Board of Education to protest any relaxation of school curriculum standards.

The student, Deborah Christian, 1215 Mira Mar Ave., Long Beach, is an articulate girl with some very definite ideas about the condition of the world, and about her place, both present and future, in it.

Her views:

—I went to the City Council and the Board of Education to let them know my objections to the proposed state Senate bill that would turn required classes into electives. I just don't think this is a good proposal.

—I realize that most kids would say, "Wow, that's really great." And they simply wouldn't take courses like English and math. But later on, after they'd gotten out of school, they'd regret that they hadn't taken those courses. And that worries me.

—I have very definite ideas about what I want to do when I grow up. First of all, when I get out of high school, I want to join the Peace Corps, or a similar organization concerned with helping others. Then I want to put myself through college. I don't know right now exactly what I'll study, but I intend to use a computer to match my aptitude with the highest paid, and most needed, jobs available. After that I'm not exactly sure what I'll do, but eventually I'd like to go to some nearly deserted island — Pitcairn, perhaps — and try to make it on my own.

I don't like the term "hippie." Somehow it's come to mean something very negative. And I don't think that's deserved. I agree with most of their goals. Most people write them off as being too idealistic. But what's wrong with being idealistic?

—I don't really know why, but people just seem to stick bad names on other people. If you look different, they condemn you. But you can't judge people by their looks.

—Which reminds me of a speech contest I was in last year at school. I said essentially the same thing about not judging people on the basis of their looks; something about long hair not necessarily making people bad. Well, after the contest was over, one of the school administrators came up to me and said something like, "That was a good speech, Debbie. But I certainly couldn't agree with your statement about long hair." I didn't see much sense in arguing with her.

—Prejudice stems from people refusing to let other people be what they want to be. There's just nothing wrong with being a Mormon. Or black. Or having long hair.

—I have some comparatively weird friends. We're interested in the supernatural, and in psychic phenomena of all sorts. Like right now a friend of mine and I are in the business of buying souls.

We've drawn up a contract, and agree to pay — at some unspecified date in the future, of course — the person whatever he wants in exchange for his soul. I don't know what we'll do with them, but the collection part of it is a lot of fun.

—People say, "Wow, Debbie, you're really weird." And I say, "Of course I am. How else could I be normal?"

—I like things of an adventuresome nature:

planes, motorcycles, race cars, skiing, scuba diving — that sort of thing. Some day I'd like to own a plane, and whenever I felt like going somewhere, I'd just up and go.

—When I was younger, I was extremely timid. Then I made a conscious decision to be an extrovert. And I've been hard at it ever since. I'm constantly engaged in defending my point of view. But I also try to understand other people's points of view, and this gets in my way at times.

—I read so much, I don't even eat dinner with the rest of my family. I have a special table where I can eat and read at the same time. I like science fiction the best, but I also enjoy things about old England, the supernatural and mythology. I also read anything I can find about people escaping from imprisonment. You know, like a concentration camp.

WALTER SCOTT'S Personality Parade

Want the facts? Want to spike rumors? Want to learn the truth about prominent personalities? Write Walter Scott, Parade, 733 3rd Ave., New York, N.Y., 10017. Your full name will be used unless otherwise requested. Volume of mail received makes personal replies impossible.

Q. John Kenneth Galbraith, the Harvard economist, says inflation in the U.S. will continue until President Nixon institutes wage and price controls. Can he be right?—Marvin Ellis, Cambridge, Mass.

A. Galbraith is not alone in his thinking. Other economists believe that President Nixon has two routes to follow in order to check the inflation spiral: (1) He can introduce a temporary wage, price, and dividends freeze. (2) He can try and control a planned economic recession. Nixon is opposed to controls, but he is not by nature or tactics an intransigent man.

Q. The Broadway show, Coco—is it anything without Katharine Hepburn?—Evelyn Turner, Falls Church, Va.

A. Not much.

Q. I know that Congressmen can retire on 80 percent of their salary after 30 years of service. But does this apply to other federal workers as well?—Mike Litchfield, St. Paul, Minn.

A. No, it does not. The typical federal employee has a far less liberal retirement system, would have to work about 42 years to get the same retirement deal as Congressmen get.

Q. I see that Mamie Eisenhower has been voted by Americans as their most admired woman. May I ask on what grounds? What are her achievements?—Dudley James, London, England.

A. Mrs. Eisenhower is described by her admirers as "a good woman . . . a good wife . . . a good mother . . . a good First Lady." In the U.S., there is not much correlation between achievement and admiration. Frequently those women who are in the limelight because of their husbands' occupations make the most-admired list.

Q. I would like to know why the government of South Vietnam has banned the film, From Here to Eternity.—Luther Hadley, Tulare, Calif.

A. The film shows American servicemen patronizing a brothel. It shows an enlisted man carrying on with an officer's wife. It shows sickening brutality on the part of unprincipled non-coms. It holds the American military in bad light. It is not designed to win respect for the GI's from their South Vietnamese allies.

Q. What is the shocking secret involving Australian Prime Minister John Gorton? Is it similar to the one about West Germany's Willy Brandt?—M. T. L., Buffalo, N.Y.

A. Yes, both men are illegitimate. That fact was well known about Brandt throughout all of Germany. It was not known about Gorton until it was disclosed recently in a book by an Australian journalist, Alan Trengove. It was Trengove who revealed that Gorton's father fell in love with an Irish girl and pleaded with his estranged wife for a divorce. When she refused, Gorton and Alice Sinn consummated their love affair and John Grey Gorton was conceived.

MICKY ROONEY AND WIFE NO. 7, CAROLYN HOCKETT

Q. Has Mickey Rooney really been married nine times?—Alice Tewsbury, Tucson, Ariz.

A. Only seven: to Ava Gardner, Betty Jane Rase, Martha Vickers, Elaine Mahnen, Barbara Thomason, Margie Lane, Carolyn Hockett.

Q. Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird said there were only 119,000 people at the war moratorium in Washington, D.C., on Nov. 15, 1969. The police chief of Washington, D.C., Jerry Wilson, said there were 250,000. Who is right?—James Eaton, Madison Wis.

A. Police Chief Wilson's estimate is closer to the mark than Secretary Laird's. The Defense Secretary was provided with admittedly incorrect Pentagon information on which he based his estimate.

ESTHER WILLIAMS WITH HUSBAND, FERNANDO LAMAS

Q. I was once madly in love with a swimming actress, name of Esther Williams. Where is she? What's she doing?—Frank Solowsky, Youngstown, Ohio.

A. Esther Williams, retired from films, is married to actor-director Fernando Lamas. They live in Los Angeles.

Q. Does Sargent Shriver plan to run for President of the U.S.? Is he that ambitious?—Marilyn Flesch, San Luis Obispo, Calif.

A. Shriver will probably run for Governor of Maryland in 1970. Should he be elected, he would most probably try for the Democratic Presidential nomination. He is sufficiently ambitious to want the Presidency.

Q. Is Tom Jones leaving England to become an American citizen? Did Tom have his nose bobbed?—Elaine Packard, Greenwich, Conn.

A. Jones is not relinquishing his British citizenship. He does plan, however, to spend six months of each year in the U.S. Originally he had a beak-type nose. It was altered to its present size and shape.

Q. Is it true that the late President John F. Kennedy used to support his sister Pat when she was married to actor Peter Lawford?—B. T., Hollywood, Calif.

A. He did not. He loaned Mr. and Mrs. Peter Lawford approximately $50,000 while they were married, but this loan was in the process of being repaid when the President was assassinated.

Tractor's triangular fluorescent emblem is being used in 19 states on back of slow-moving vehicles to alert fast-driving motorists and cut down on rear-end collisions.

Spot the Triangle—and Stay Alive

by John G. Rogers

Every motorist knows the danger of slow-moving vehicles — tractors, farm machinery, some trucks. You're rolling along a highway at a fast clip, say 60 m.p.h., you see that there's someone ahead and you assume he's also moving right along. Then, suddenly, you overtake him so rapidly that there's grave chance of a crash, especially if there's no escape to right or left.

The danger is even greater if the fast-moving motorist happens to be a bit dulled from long driving.

In 19 states and five provinces of Canada, the frequency of this kind of accident is being steadily reduced through use of a simple, fluorescent emblem—a triangle. Each of its equal sides is 14 inches long. It's made of orange film and has a border of reflective red tape. In the states and Canadian provinces where its use is now mandatory on the rear of the slow movers, there's promise of reducing rear-end crashes by at least 21 percent.

The man responsible for the safety triangle is Professor Kenneth A. Harkness, of Ohio State University's agricultural engineering department. When he found there was no uniformity among states for identifying slow-moving vehicles, he obtained a grant from the Automotive Safety Foundation and set to work on the problem.

Survey's findings

With the help of Ohio law enforcement agencies, Harkness began a study of slow-moving-vehicle accidents. In a survey that covered 720 crashes he discovered:

- Almost 90 percent occurred in daytime.
- More than 90 percent were on dry pavement.
- More than half were on open, level highways.
- In more than 60 percent of the accidents, the slow-moving vehicle was struck from the rear.

Harkness drew four conclusions from his survey:

1. An intensive safety education program was needed for tractor drivers who use or cross public highways—in the 20 seconds it takes a tractor to cross a road, an oncoming car at 60 m.p.h. covers more than 1700 feet.
2. Rear-view mirrors should be mandatory for tractors.
3. Effective turn indicators, such as blinking lights, should be used on all tractors.
4. There was a great need for a unique emblem to mark all slow-moving vehicles.

Harkness made the fourth conclusion his special field of action. "There was no uniformity among the states," he recalls. "Some prescribed blinking lights, some straight lights. Some specified flags, some nothing at all. We needed something of a shape and color that would be instantly recognized anywhere."

15 shapes tested

First, the shape. Harkness tested 15 of them, including circle, rectangle, square, diamond and octagon, until he determined that the triangle is most easily recognized as a shape. As for color, he found that fluorescent orange is most visible in daylight, and added the reflective red border for nighttime. The size, 14 inches along each side, affords recognition in daylight at 600 to 700 feet by a motorist going 70 m.p.h. At night, depending on the approaching car's headlights, the distance is 500 to 800 feet.

Ohio was the first state to make use of the emblem mandatory. Michigan, which soon followed suit, discovered that within a year, rear-end accidents dropped by more than 21 percent. Other states using the emblem are Indiana, Minnesota, Montana, Nebraska, Idaho, New Mexico, New York, North Dakota, Oregon, Rhode Island, Texas, Wisconsin, California, Iowa, Oklahoma, Washington and Vermont.

With the National Safety Council, American Automobile Association and other organizations strongly behind the emblem, it's expected that more state legislatures will be acting soon.

For an extra margin of safety at night, Harkness recommends that double, red blinking lights be used. They provide general warning at great distance, and then the emblem specifies the problem as the approaching car nears. There's no question about it—that orange triangle with red border can save lives.

GREAT PARTS OF THE COUNTRY.

Lumberjacks. The days of those tough, hard driving men are far from gone. In fact, the timberlands of the great Pacific Northwest now vibrate more than ever to shouts of "Timber!" as the big ones fall. The difference is that now, thanks to scientific tree farming, new growth exceeds the harvest. The preservation of our forest bounty is a lumberman's constant concern.

The beautiful big timber country of Oregon is a great place to visit—one of the great parts of the country. If you go there in a GM car, keep a good thing going great. If you ever need replacements, use the other great parts of the country—Genuine General Motors Parts. Wherever you drive, always ask for the replacement parts labeled GM, United Delco and AC. They're made like the originals to help restore top performance. And they're available at GM dealers, independent garages and service stations everywhere.

ANALYZING HIJACKERS

What sort of men hijack airplanes or attempt to?

Dr. David Hubbard of Dallas, Tex., a psychiatric consultant to the U.S. Medical Prison Center at Springfield, Mo., has interviewed 20 persons accused of hijacking.

According to Hubbard, who has recently completed an article on the subject for The Journal of The American Medical Association, "It is utterly untrue, despite what many columnists and editorial writers have written, that these men are left-wingers or Communists. Most of the hijackers I've interviewed are rightists, ultra-conservatives, members of the radical right. Some used to be fanatical Goldwater supporters. I would say that of the 20, at least three-fourths are way over on the right, and many of the remaining fourth are former members of rightist groups, who became terribly disillusioned with those organizations."

Hubbard, who testified some months ago at the trial of an accused hijacker in the U.S. Federal District Court in Savannah, Ga., believes that emotional people can be stimulated into attempting air piracy by the widespread publicity given other hijackers on TV and in the press.

"Basically," he explains, "hijackers are unhappy people who want to do away with themselves. They pick Cuba because they are convinced it's a land of no-return. They would just as soon choose any other country if they thought the barrier between that country and the U.S. was impenetrable. People who commit suicide frequently use it as a means of calling the world's attention to their unhappy state. Hijackers hijack planes with much of that same motivation."

Hubbard testified in Savannah that of the 20 accused hijackers he had interviewed, six expected to be killed as a result of their behavior, and another five planned on assassinating Fidel Castro, which, of course, would then lead to their highly publicized executions.

CARS AND BEAUTY

Great Britain has decided to ban automobiles from the most scenic areas of the English countryside.

This May, for a starter, only residents of picturesque Goyt Valley in Derbyshire will be allowed to drive there. Ordinarily thousands of motorists from Manchester, Sheffield, and other Midland cities drive to the valley on weekends. Come this summer, however, they will have to walk or use a small tourist bus.

The government's countryside commission, charged with care of the national parks and preserving what remains of rural and beautiful England, is in charge of the experiment. If it works, automobiles will subsequently be banned from parts of the Cornwall coast in the southwest and the English lake district in the north.

Bermuda, a British island in the Atlantic, banned automobiles for years, but the pressure by American tourists to use cars nullified that ruling.

LEADING FISHERMEN

Which nation catches the most fish? Last year, Peruvian fishermen occupied the No. 1 position with a catch of 10½ million tons. Most of it was converted to fishmeal for export. Japan was second with 8.7 million tons, and the Soviet Union third with a catch of 6.1 million tons. The U.S. ranked sixth with 2.4 million tons.

INDIA HAS ACTED TO LIFT THE BAN ON KISSING IN MOVIES, BUT ONLY IF IT IS "LOGICAL." THIS IS APARNA SEN IN "THE GURU," AND WE'D SAY IT IS HIGHLY LOGICAL.

TO KISS OR NOT TO KISS

India, which has one of the highest procreation rates of any nation in the world and a population of 550 million, is involved in a kissing crisis.

Should kissing be shown on the screen? That question has become a national controversy in a land where dating is almost non-existent and marriages are parentally arranged.

A government committee, headed by G. D. Khosla, a retired state chief of justice, recently recommended that "if in telling the story, it is logical, relevant or necessary to depict a passionate kiss or nude human figure, there should be no question of excluding the scene."

Immediately Asha Parekh, one of India's sexiest stars, denounced the ruling. "Who would like to see his daughters, sisters, and wives being kissed and undressed on the screen?" she asked.

Now Indian newspapers are fanning the fires. "Kissing may lead to sexual anarchy," headlines one. "Kissing is the cause of social upheaval," writes another. "Kissing could shake the foundations of our society," editorializes a third.

Indian films do not include any kissing or realistic love scenes common to Western films. This is why in New Delhi, Calcutta and other large metropolitan centers, motion picture theaters which show Western films are jammed by Indian moviegoers, who feel they are missing something in their own culture which does not believe in the cinematic exhibition of kissing and nudity.

OFF TO SOVIET MADHOUSE FOR HIS PAINS.

WHERE DISSENT EQUALS INSANITY

The Soviet Union has devised a novel system of getting rid of political unreliaables. It sends them to the insane asylum.

There, political prisoners, whose madness was to disagree with Soviet policies in the first place, share cells with real patients, many of them psychotic criminals.

The Chronicle of Current Events, a Russian underground periodical, reports that physicians inject these dissenters with heavy doses of aminazin and sulfazin, two drugs which cause deep depression, shock and physical disorders. Medical attendants (actually KGB officers in white coats) reportedly weaken the anti-Soviet inmates with shots of sodium amine, a strong "confessional" narcotic, prior to interrogation.

By placing political antagonists in mental hospitals, the government spares the state the embarrassment and trouble of trying "uncooperative intellelectuals."

The technique works this way: Soon after arrest prisoners are sent to Professor D.R. Lunts, a cooperative forensic psychiatrist at the Serbsky Institute in Moscow. He declares them insane. The prisoners are then whisked away to a state hospital for indefinite stays.

Some of the crimes committed by Soviet "madmen": N.I. Samsonov, locked up from 1956-64, made the mistake of writing to the Communist Party Central Committee to criticize Stalin's theories. Victor Fainberg, now in a Leningrad hospital, protested the Russian invasion of Czechoslovakia. G. Forpostov's madness was to try to escape across the Russian-Polish border.

Former Maj. Gen. Pyotr Grigorenko, 63, a civil rights activist, was arrested for the second time last year. A medical board declared him "paranoid" and sent him to an asylum.

The authorities arrested Natalia Gorbnavskaya, a 33-year-old poet and mother of two, who signed two letters to the UN Human Rights Commission protesting repressive Soviet policies.

Mrs. Gorbnavskaya, charged with "defaming the Soviet state and social system," has now been sent to a psychiatric clinic for pre-trial examination. Most probably she will be ordered to one of four political mental hospitals located in Dnepropetrovsk, Minsk, Leningrad, and Chernyakhovsk.

DEFOLIANTS AND BIRTH DEFECTS

When scientists at the Bionetics Research Laboratories, Inc., outside Washington, D.C., exposed pregnant rats to small doses of anti-plant chemicals, 39 percent produced defective offspring. With increased doses, the abnormality rate skyrocketed to 100 percent.

Each week U.S. military planes spray gallons of such defoliants over Vietnam. So far our planes have sprayed the enormous total of 50,000 tons over an area of 4000 square miles.

Will this result in a generation of deformed Vietnamese children? Possibly.

A study by the World Health Organization, made at the request of the United Nations, concludes that there is a serious possibility that defoliants may cause severe defects in the developing human fetus.

The 18 world scientists involved in the study agreed that the exposure of Vietnamese citizens to such chemicals is cause for alarm.

Defoliants are intended, the WHO report states, "to destroy the enemy's food supply and to deny him concealment by foliage or vegetation." But wartime conditions make it impossible to assure that the chemicals are released only over vegetation and not close to population centers.

Moreover, defoliants, dropped over jungle, get into the air, water and finally food and thus are carried to the people. The Vietnamese may be exposed to "dosages far higher than those experienced when the same chemicals are used for agricultural purposes."

Last fall President Nixon restricted the use of one herbicide called 245T to non-populated areas in Vietnam. Other herbicides, primarily one called 24D, are still used without restriction in our war effort.

Both chemicals are used widely on crops and lawns in the U.S. 24D is one of the six best-selling pesticides, with annual sales averaging $25 million.

Even without the possibility of birth defects, defoliants may still curtail future life, the report points out. Widespread defoliation may tip the ecological balance, allowing new diseases to develop or causing a radical reduction "in the quality or quantity of the food supply."

The three U.S. experts who contributed to the report were Dr. Joshua Lederberg of the Stanford University School of Medicine, Dr. Matthew Meselson of Harvard University, and Dr. Victor W. Sidel of the Albert Einstein College of Medicine.

ABUSED AND ABUSERS

Why do some parents chronically beat and abuse their children? Many child-beaters are apparently the helpless victims of their own twisted psychologies. They beat because long ago their parents beat them.

A recent study of 34 battered children treated at a Washington, D.C., hospital reveals that more than half of their parents had previous records of child abuse. Researchers located police records of child abuse for four of the parents' parents.

What's more, within four years of their hospital stay, five of the 34 children already had tangled with the law for violent crimes. One 13-year-old was charged with assault with a deadly weapon.

The maturing child easily moves from being abused to being an abuser. According to Drs. Larry B. Silver and Reginald S. Lourie, psychiatrists, and Christina C. Dublin, repeatedly beaten children defend themselves psychologically by identifying with their violent parent. These children become adults who express themselves violently, often criminally, and, in turn, beat their own offspring.

An alternate psychological defense is to identify with the role of victim, to become the permanent victim. Children who take this path grow up to be the "wife-beater's wife."

The study notes that Sirhan Sirhan, Robert Kennedy's assassin, was often beaten by his father during childhood.

INTELLIGENCE continued

MAO'S EDITORIAL On New Year's Day, 1970, newspapers in Red China were ordered to print an editorial. Herewith some salient excerpts:

"Looking ahead into the 1970's with the whole world in mind, the people in our country are filled with excitement. From the bottoms of their hearts they wish our glorious leader and the revolutionary leader of the proletariat, Chairman Mao, a long, long life.

"In the past decade our enemy grew rotten from day to day while we grew stronger...the old world is tottering...Khrushchev, the clown, who once swaggered and played the triumphant hero, is now a pile of contemptuous dung. His successors, Brezhnev and the rest, are even worse...men who practice Fascist dictatorship at home and aggression abroad....

"No matter how they compete for spheres of influence, U.S. imperialism and Soviet revisionism are doomed...they cannot last. ...If imperialism and social-imperialism dare invade our land, we will drown them in the deep ocean of the people's war."

MOON TRAVEL Despite successes of U.S. moon shots, few authorities expect that any American now alive will ever make it to the lunar orb strictly as a tourist. Says Dr. Kenneth Franklin, research astronomer of New York's Hayden Planetarium: "Regular travel to the moon for scientific purposes will come very quickly; construction workers and other trained personnel will be going there perhaps within 20 years to build and man observatories. But as for out-and-out tourists—well, maybe some of today's youngsters will have grandchildren who'll make it."

Among the current obstacles to tourist flights are the necessity for months of rigorous training such as astronauts undergo and prohibitive costs. Based on current international coach rates of approximately 6 cents a mile, the 238,857-mile jaunt figures out to over $14,000, one-way.

Nevertheless, a Pan American publicity-minded gesture of announcing reservations brought 75,000 applicants. Trans International Airlines, a West Coast charter outfit, says it has 16,000 applications on file. Sample application to Pan Am: "When you send me my tickets, please make them one round-trip and one one-way. I'm taking my mother-in-law."

INTELLIGENCE continued

MAO'S EDITORIAL On New Year's Day, 1970, newspapers in Red China were ordered to print an editorial. Herewith some salient excerpts:

"Looking ahead into the 1970's with the whole world in mind, the people in our country are filled with excitement. From the bottoms of their hearts they wish our glorious leader and the revolutionary leader of the proletariat, Chairman Mao, a long, long life.

"In the past decade our enemy grew rotten from day to day while we grew stronger...the old world is tottering...Khrushchev, the clown, who once swaggered and played the triumphant hero, is now a pile of contemptuous dung. His successors, Brezhnev and the rest, are even worse...men who practice Fascist dictatorship at home and aggression abroad....

"No matter how they compete for spheres of influence, U.S. imperialism and Soviet revisionism are doomed...they cannot last. ...If imperialism and social-imperialism dare invade our land, we will drown them in the deep ocean of the people's war."

YOUNG PEOPLE IN HERSHEY, PA., WATCH TV RELIGIOUS PROGRAM.

OBsolete? All over the country there's a new breed of young clergymen who argue that U.S. churches are aloof from the problems of our time. "They'll send missionaries to Africa but they don't care about destitute Americans living right around the corner"—so runs a typical accusation.

This trend is particularly evident in Pennsylvania. There a 39-year-old Presbyterian, the Rev. Robert Larson, who quit his Pittsburgh pulpit to become a TV program director is using the seven-station Public Television Network to stir up debate all over the state on the question: "Is religion obsolete?" Each Tuesday evening during this month a new program goes out on the network. Sample titles: "So Where Are You, God?" and "Who Killed Brotherhood?" Then, for the rest of the week, churches, synagogues and civic centers in hundreds of communities arrange discussion groups, some of which also are televised.

Larson and like thinkers are concerned over declining church attendance among young people and they blame it in part on hypocrisy of the traditional church structure. "You can't fool these youngsters," he says, "they can tell whether the church is truly involved in community problems or is just piously ministering to the spiritual comfort of the elderly well-to-do."

Youth speaks for itself on Larson's programs. A sample remark from a Harrisburg girl: "All the churches are so concerned about getting all the members they can and keeping the members and getting the money. Everything the church does is for its own survival. They're ignoring everything that religion is really supposed to stand for." The Rev. Paul Gehris, a young Pennsylvania Baptist, contends that such a girl "needs and wants religious values more than ever. It's not religion that's obsolete, it's the vast, wealthy church corporation. And if American churches don't make some changes, they'll see more and more decline."

Larson, one of whose programs won the Brotherhood Award of the National Conference of Christians and Jews, regards a TV network as a great ally of religion: "I used to preach to a few hundred people at a time. Now we're reaching the whole state."

Cake 'n' Coffee

By Beth Merriman
PARADE FOOD EDITOR

It's a nice feeling to know that you are prepared for guests who drop in during the late afternoon or evening. In Germany and Austria there is always a cake on hand to serve with cream-topped coffee. And when one is gone another is promptly baked.

You'll like this modern version of an Austrian coffee cake, somewhat reminiscent of Gugelhupf but much easier to make, and much less rich.

Austrian Coffee Cake

- |                                 |  |
|---------------------------------|--|
| 1/2 cup milk, scalded           | 2 packages active dry yeast                      |
| 1/2 cup cold water              |  |
| 1/3 cup butter or margarine     | 1 1/2 cups quick or old-fashioned oats, uncooked |
| 1/2 cup sugar                   | 1/2 cup golden raisins                           |
| 2 eggs                          | 2 teaspoons grated lemon peel                    |
| 2 cups sifted all-purpose flour | 1/2 cup fine, dry bread crumbs                   |
| 1 3/4 teaspoons salt            | 1/4 cup blanched whole almonds                   |
| 3/4 teaspoon mace               |  |

Combine milk and water; cool to lukewarm. Beat butter and sugar together until creamy. Add eggs one at a time, beating after each addition; add lukewarm liquid. Sift together flour, salt and mace; add to creamed mixture. Stir in yeast. Beat until smooth, about 2 minutes. Stir in oats, raisins and lemon peel. Cover; let rise in warm place until double in size, about 1 1/2 hours. Brush bottom and sides of a 2-quart mold generously with melted butter; coat with bread crumbs. Arrange almonds in a decorative design in bottom of mold. Stir batter down; spoon carefully into mold. Let rise in warm place until nearly double in size, about 1 hour. Bake at 350° about 25 minutes. Cool on wire rack 10 minutes. Unmold; cool. If desired, decorate with thin confectioners (powdered) sugar icing and a candied cherry.

LET NATURE'S OWN AMAZING, FRIENDLY PRAYING MANTIS Rid your garden of insect pests without dangerous insecticides!

This is the amazing praying mantis—3" to 5" long when mature—poised for the insect-killing action that has made it nature's most prized biological control agent! Now is the time to "Plant" Mantis Egg Sacs—when it's cold. They hatch in the spring. Although the mantis kills and devours thousands of times its own weight in insect pests, it is absolutely safe and harmless to plants, humans, and animals!

IN 1 DAY, A SINGLE MANTIS CAN RID YOUR GARDEN OF:

• 100 ants • 50 caterpillars • 100 grubs • 50 borers • 75 flies • 10 Japanese beetles

... and any other destructive insects the mantis can sink its teeth into!

All caught, killed, and eaten by a single praying mantis in one day! Multiply this by a few hundred, and imagine how a family of mantids can protect your garden this coming Summer! It's nature's own safe, efficient method of biological control!

With the government banning DDT, and with warnings being issued about so many other commercial insecticides, how can you protect your garden against all kinds of destructive insects without endangering yourself and your family? Nature's own remarkable biological control agent—the praying mantis—may well give your garden all the protection you're looking for, this Summer and for many years to come!

Large commercial growers of fruits, vegetables and other food crops—understandably concerned with the problem of insecticide residues—depend on the praying mantis. And the friendly, efficient mantis does the job!

Now you can put this same safe, invaluable protection to work guarding your valuable trees, shrubs, flowers, fruits, and vegetables! They're so easy to "seed" into your treasured garden now, to keep it growing beautifully for years to come!

How to Have an Effective Biological Control System

When your mantis sacs arrive, file one to each precious plant you want to protect. They'll keep safely, even in sub-zero weather, until it's time to hatch. Each sac will produce a family of up to 400 friendly mantids. And, because each mature female deposits several egg sacs a season, you're likely to have all the mantids you need working for you every year, year after year. (But don't worry—only as many stay as can feed on the insects that show up in your garden!)

1 mantis sac only $1.00 3 sacs only $2.79

LET NATURE'S OWN AMAZING, FRIENDLY PRAYING MANTIS Rid your garden of insect pests without dangerous insecticides!

This is the amazing, praying mantis—3" to 5" long when mature—poised for the insect-killing action that has made it nature's most prized biological control agent! Now is the time to "Plant" Mantis Egg Sacs—when it is cold. They hatch in the spring. Although the mantis kills and devours thousands of times its own weight in insect pests, it is absolutely safe and harmless to plants, humans, and animals!

With the government banning DDT, and with warnings being issued about so many other commercial insecticides, how can you protect your garden against all kinds of destructive insects without endangering yourself and your family? Nature's own remarkable biological control agent—the praying mantis—may well give your garden all the protection you're looking for, this Summer and for many years to come!

Large commercial growers of fruits, vegetables and other food crops—understandably concerned with the problem of insecticide residues—depend on the praying mantis. And the friendly, efficient mantis does the job! Now you can put this same safe, invaluable protection to work guarding your valuable trees, shrubs, flowers, fruits, and vegetables! They're so easy to "seed" into your treasured garden now, to keep it growing beautifully for years to come!

IN 1 DAY, A SINGLE MANTIS CAN RID YOUR GARDEN OF:

• 100 ants • 50 caterpillars • 100 grubs • 50 borers • 75 mites • 10 Japanese beetles

... and any other destructive insects the mantis can sink its teeth into! All caught, killed, and eaten by a single praying mantis in one day! Multiply this by a few hundred, and imagine how a family of mantids can protect your garden this coming Summer! It's nature's own safe, efficient method of biological control!

How to Have an Effective Biological Control System

When your mantis sacs arrive, tie one to each precious plant you want to protect. They'll keep safely, even in sub-zero weather, until it's time to hatch. Each sac will produce a family of up to 400 friendly mantids. And because each mature female deposits several egg sacs a season, you're likely to have all the mantids you need working for you every year, year after year. (But don't worry—only as many stay as can feed on the insects that show up in your garden!)

1 mantis sac only $1.00 3 sacs only $2.79
8 sacs only $8.98 12 sacs only $8.95

FORTUNATE indeed is the man or woman who, in shifting and uncertain times, possesses an acknowledged work of art. For, as astute collectors and connoisseurs well know, the value of great art steadily increases no matter how the winds of change may blow.

Among the world's enduring art treasures, few are valued more highly than the extraordinary works wrung by Michelangelo from his agonized heart and soul. Although nearly five tumultuous centuries have passed since he gave the world his Pietà, his David, his Moses, his Dying Slave, his Allegories of the Medici, and his Sistine Chapel frescoes with their monumental Story of Creation and Redemption . . . Michelangelo's art still expresses, with undiminished power, the innermost yearnings and ideals of man. For experts and laymen alike, Michelangelo remains the most nearly universal artist who ever lived.

How fitting, then, that on the eve of the Quincentennial of Michelangelo's birth, the masterpieces of this genius of all time should be the subject of a new and unique series of art masterpieces to be created in our time . . . a set of 60 fine art medals reflecting the inspiration of Michelangelo's greatest works, chosen by a distinguished Board of Advisors:

Dr. Charles de Tolnay, Director of the Casa Buonarroti and author of a six-volume study of Michelangelo.

Dr. Umberto Baldini, Curator of Sculpture for the Uffizi Gallery.

Dr. Charles Morgan, Chairman of the Fine Arts Department at Amherst University and author of "The Life of Michelangelo."

Dr. Robert J. Clements, New York University Professor and author of "Michelangelo's Theory of Art."

Dr. Roberto Salvini, Professor at the University of Florence and a specialist on the Sistine Chapel ceiling.

A Treasure of Fine Medallion Art

Now, with The Genius of Michelangelo, the art of the medal reaches a towering peak of achievement. Clearly, this limited First Edition of 60 fine art medals is destined to become a prized possession among connoisseurs, art enthusiasts and investors. On exquisite art such as this, great collections have been founded, treasured legacies begun.

The Franklin Mint, which has conceived this remarkable series of art medals, is the foremost contemporary inheritor of the time-honored tradition of fine medallion art. It has been joined in this magnificent undertaking by the great medallion craftsmen of John Pinches (Medallists), Ltd., of England and The Wellings Mint of Canada.

To capture the greatness of Michelangelo in medallion form, the medallionists have commissioned the distinguished Italian sculptor Piero Monassi to work on the scene in Florence, Milan and Rome. Just as Michelangelo himself spent nearly five years bent and aching, on the scaffolding below the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel, so Piero Monassi will devote virtually all of the next five years sculpturing the bas-relief models from which the dies will be engraved.

Strictly Limited First Edition

One meticulously crafted medal will be produced each month for the next sixty months. Thus, the entire series will be completed in 1975—five hundred years after the birth of Michelangelo.

Each medal will measure a full 44mm in diameter and will be individually edge-numbered and hallmarked, perpetually certifying its First Edition Proof status.

This edition is limited to one set per subscriber, and the subscription rolls will close February 28, 1970. The number of First Edition Proof Sets produced will be exactly equal to the number of advance subscriptions accepted.

To further protect the integrity of this First Edition, the specially-identified First Edition dies will be destroyed after this edition is completed.

Excellent Investment Potential

Your personal First Edition Proof Set of The Genius of Michelangelo will be minted in your choice of Solid Sterling Silver or Solid Platinum. The cost of your medals—$10 each for silver; $1,000 each for platinum—will be protected against price increases for the entire five years, even if the prices of silver or platinum rise to the extent that the bullion content of each medal is worth more than you pay for it. Many leading economists believe that both silver and platinum will become increasingly more valuable over the years, and therefore this collection has excellent investment potential for its intrinsic metal content, as well as for its value as limited edition art.

To make this unusual price guarantee possible, The Franklin Mint will commit itself—for each subscriber—to purchase, at current prices, a sufficient amount of silver or platinum to cover the complete set of 60 medals. Thus you will benefit from The Franklin Mint's substantial purchasing power and commitment, while being billed for only one medal per month.

So, to begin, or to expand, your "private treasury" of fine art in precious metal . . . to acquire a limited edition as unique as it is beautiful . . . enter your advance subscription application now. Please remember that it must be postmarked no later than February 28, 1970.

After sketching the original in the Sistine Chapel, sculptor Piero Monassi perfects an oversize model to capture a maximum of detail before reduction to medal size.

A Beauty Fluid That Keeps Your Skin Youthfully Beautiful

That lovely moist bloom you've noticed on a baby's complexion is strictly by courtesy of Mother Nature; the exquisite, smooth bloom you see today on a beautiful woman's complexion is more than probably by virtue of a remarkable tropical moist oil discovered through scientific research.

Never before have women been more fortunate in their ability to help preserve the precious, youthful qualities of the complexion. The existence of this unique beauty fluid now makes it possible to cherish and moisturize the skin so that it begins to blossom almost at once with a superb petal-smooth splendor and a soft, dewy freshness. In America the moist oil discovery is of particular importance in establishing a healthy balance when complexion tends to be affected by climatic extremes.

The extremely lovely complexion of childhood is sustained through the early years by a consummate supply of natural oil and moisture. Inevitably, in the fullness of time, the skin matures and the body processes slow down — and this is where the remarkable advances made by modern skin researchers can step in to open new vistas of complexion beauty. Through the aid of the tropical moist oil, the perfect conditions under which your childhood skin once thrived can virtually be re-created to maintain a wonderfully supple, efflorescent complexion.

As water is to a flower, so this beautifying fluid is to your skin, reviving and helping to keep it flawless, fresh, constantly flourishing. Endowed with hygroscopic elements that attract and draw moisture from the atmosphere, the moist oil discourages dehydration of the epidermal (top) layer and assists in the retention of a delicate bloom on the skin all through the day.

Because it is isotonicity pressurized to balance successfully with the skin's own fluids the moist oil contributes to the stabilization of the cell replacement rate so that youth and resilience are easier to maintain. Being a perfect blend of oil and moisture that is homologous to the skin's own fluids, this beautifying combination amalgamates spontaneously with dwindling natural moist oil supplies and effectively aids in keeping dryness and wrinkles at bay.

Women of all ages smooth this remarkable beauty fluid over their complexions each night and use it as an incomparable base for make-up by day. In America this unique moist oil is available from druggists as oil of Olay, a beauty fluid with a wonderful, unprecedented penchant for keeping skin baby-like and beautiful.

Discover the secrets of gift decorating!

Before you know it, creating a decorative and useful canister like this "just comes naturally!"

Forks may begin bidding for a beautiful one-of-a-kind gift plate like this even before the paint is dry.

A few dabs of paint and a rusty, weather-beaten metal box becomes this charming bread box.

A "no-talent" housewife brought these wooden decks back to "life"—with gift decorating.

GHT decorating turned this old coffee pot into a $50.00 keepsake.

Once a rusty frying pan—gift decorating turned it into a collector's treasure.

You can create beautiful gifts like these even if you've never painted before.

IMAGINE! Just a little paint... 3 simple brush strokes... and you can turn trash into treasures, junk-pile discards into glamorous gifts—even if you've never held a brush before. In your hands a battered old coffee pot now becomes a work of art... a rusted tea kettle changes into a charming gift planter... a forgotten camel-back trunk becomes a beautiful hand-painted hope chest.

It's easy—no special talent needed

Today the Decorative Arts Institute is helping thousands of men and women create beautiful decorator pieces at home. You, too, will be thrilled to discover you can create lovely treasures—even if you can't draw a straight line. Mrs. Ruth Miner of Lubbock, Texas writes: "I never had a brush in my hand before but after the first 2 lessons I have sold to our largest department store!"

What's the secret? The discovery that with 3 simple brush strokes (the same strokes used to apply lipstick), you can decorate for fun or profit, as you choose. Quickly and easily you'll see exquisite ROSES and FLOWERS... FRUIT... CUPIDS and BOWS... BIRDS and BUTTERFLIES... come alive under your brush as if by magic!

Earn while you learn at home

Even as a beginner you may find friends, decorators, even gift shops eagerly bidding for your unusual one-of-a-kind creations—sometimes offering $10, $15, even $20 for one. Soon after starting, Mrs. Eileen Baer of Hot Springs, Arkansas wrote: "I know my work isn't real great yet, but my things are being grabbed before they're dry!"

Go on antique treasure hunts!

Everywhere you look—attics, basements, barns, sheds, junk-shops, second-hand stores—you'll find "treasures-in-the-rough"—awaiting only a few strokes to turn them into stunning objects of art. Friends may beg you to create lovely hand-painted decorator pieces for their homes, too. "My friends and neighbors," says Mrs. Marilyn Belford of Tulsa, Oklahoma, "have kept me busy painting milk cans and recipe boxes, and I've done two trunks. What a happy whirl I'm in!" And within days from now you, too, can be in a happy whirl enjoying the fun, the excitement, and if you wish, the profits of decorating gifts at home.

Enjoy 15-day Examination

The complete Course is shipped to you at once. Yes, you get everything in one big shipment... 42-piece decorator's kit—87 patterns—24 lessons—all the paints, brushes, and decorating supplies you need—and much, much more! Yet the entire Course is yours for only $39.50 complete, plus shipping, if delighted with 15 day trial first. And even this small amount may be paid in easy monthly installments. This has to be the biggest value of its kind in America when you consider that you're getting many of the basic materials offered in the nationally advertised Advanced Course which sold for $149.50.

Students create beautiful gifts, then send letters praising the joys and profits of gift decorating!

"I cleared $250.00 last month—and I didn't even leave the house!"

Discover the secrets of gift decorating!

Before you know it, creating a decorative and useful canister like this "just comes naturally!"

Folks may begin bidding for a beautiful one-of-a-kind wall plaque like this even before the paint is dry.

A few dabs of paint and a rusty, weather-beaten mailbox becomes this charming bread box.

A "no-talent" housewife brought these wooden ducks back to "life"—with gift decorating.

Gift decorating turned this old coffee pot into a $50.00 keepsake.

Once a rusty frying pan—gift decorating turned it into a collector's treasure.

You can create beautiful gifts like these even if you've never painted before.

IMAGINE! Just a little paint... 3 simple brush strokes... and you can turn trash into treasures, junk-pile discards into glamorous gifts—even if you've never held a brush before. In your hands a battered old coffee pot now becomes a work of art... a rusted tea kettle changes into a charming gift planter... a forgotten camel-back trunk becomes a beautiful hand-painted hope chest.

It's easy—no special talent needed!

Today the Decorative Arts Institute is helping thousands of men and women create beautiful decorator pieces at home. You, too, will be thrilled to discover you can create lovely treasures—even if you can't draw a straight line. Mrs. Ruth Miner of Lubbock, Texas writes: "I never had a brush in my hand before but after the first 2 lessons I have sold to our largest department store!"

What's the secret? The discovery that with 3 simple brush strokes (the same strokes used to apply lipstick), you can decorate for fun or profit, as you choose. Quickly and easily you'll see exquisite ROSES and FLOWERS, FRUIT... CUPIDS and BOWS... BIRDS and BUTTERFLIES... come alive under your brush as if by magic!

Earn while you learn at home

Even as a beginner you may find friends, decorators, even gift shops eagerly bidding for your unusual one-of-a-kind creations—sometimes offering $10, $15, even $20 for one. Soon after starting, Mrs. Eileen Baer of Hot Springs, Arkansas wrote: "I know my work isn't real great yet, but my things are being grabbed before they're dry!"

Go on antique treasure hunts!

Everywhere you look—attics, basements, barns, sheds, junk-shops, second-hand stores—you'll find "treasures-in-the-rough"—awaiting only a few strokes to turn them into stunning objects of art. Friends may beg you to create lovely hand-painted decorator pieces for their homes, too. "My friends and neighbors," says Mrs. Marilyn Belford of Tulsa, Oklahoma, "have kept me busy painting milk cans and recipe boxes, and I've done two trunks. What a happy whirl I'm in!" And within days from now you, too, can be in a happy whirl enjoying the fun, the excitement, and if you wish, the profits of decorating gifts at home.

Enjoy 15-day Examination

The complete Course is shipped to you at once. Yes, you get everything in one big shipment... 42-piece decorator's kit—87 patterns—24 lessons—all the paints, brushes, and decorating supplies you need—and much, much more! Yet the entire course is yours for only $39.50 complete, plus shipping, if delighted with 15 day trial first. And even this small amount may be paid in easy monthly installments. This has to be the biggest value of its kind in America when you consider that you're getting many of the basic materials offered in the nationally advertised Advanced Course which sold for $149.50.

Students create beautiful gifts, then send letters praising the joys and profits of gift decorating!

Mrs. John N. Mitchell, Attorney General's outspoken wife, has upset officials with her political salvos.

Mrs. Philip Hart, spouse of Michigan Senator, actually got herself arrested in a peace demonstration.

I make my own decisions

My hair is long and perfectly straight. Terrific. But I have this really curly wig too, which sort of changes my personality. It's fun.

Give me trumpet sleeves, bell sleeves, cap sleeves, long or short sleeves — anything but no sleeves.

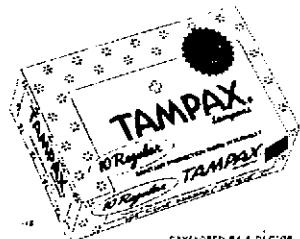

Rings are fabulous. I have about 30 of them. When I feel like it, I wear fingers full.

Remember the sack stage? I wore a belt. I still do. Or a chain or sash or scarf. Sometimes all three at once.

Skirt length? Make mine mini. Of course I may change my mind tomorrow.

But there's one thing I'll never change my mind about. Tampax tampons. I've tried other kinds of sanitary protection, but nothing else suits me. Tampax tampons and their silken-smooth applicator are easy to use and easy to dispose of. Worn internally, they're completely comfortable. No chafing. No odor. Nothing can show; no one can know. And you can buy them almost anywhere. Millions of women all over the world have used them for years. Me-too. Guess I'm something of a conformist, after all.

Washington Wives— How Much Should They Talk?

by Jack Anderson

IT has been one of the unwritten protocols of Washington that the wives of the prominent should make dutiful public appearances, as visual testimony that their husbands are proper family men, but should leave the public pronouncements to their spouses. Now the ladies have suddenly begun stepping from the shadows and speaking out on their own.

Consider the strange behavior of Washington wives in recent months:

- Mrs. Philip Hart, wife of the Michigan Senator, not only has taken stands opposite to her husband's but was arrested for her pains last November. At the Pentagon, she was rounded up with some 180 demonstrators who, in the cause of peace, were accused of disturbing the peace. It wasn't the first time she had gone to extremes to dramatize her views. She also joined a mothers' peace march, helped to establish a home for dissenting priests and, for a week, fed her family on a welfare budget to demonstrate the inadequacy of federal aid to the poor.

- When the John Mitchells arrived in Washington, the Attorney General firmly instructed his wife that her place was in the kitchen. But the hot water she found herself in was entirely political, not culinary. She lobbied with Senate wives, urging them to influence their husbands to vote for the anti-missile system and Judge Clement Haynsworth's appointment to the Supreme Court. She stirred up such controversy with her shoot-from-the-hip statements that the White House, too, wanted to confine her to the kitchen.

Seconds the motion

- For 17 years as a good Washington wife, Mrs. Melvin Laird has kept her political opinions to herself and has let her husband do the talking. She was so stirred by Mrs. Mitchell's outburst against liberals and demonstrators, however, that the wife of the Defense Secretary uttered a public cheer for her counterpart in the Justice Department.

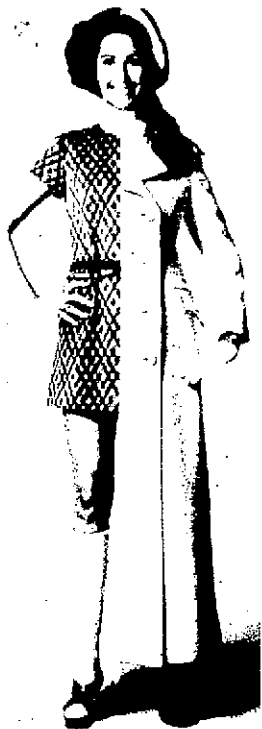

The sudden outspokenness of a few Washington wives has caused a stir in the powder rooms along the Potomac. The ladies are debating fiercely whether the wives of the high and mighty should speak their minds or should maintain a discreet silence in public. Should they avoid making statements that might embarrass their prominent husbands? Or should they be individualists, speaking out and damning the consequences?

The two most controversial wives, Jane Hart and Martha Mitchell, intensely disapprove of one another. Mrs. Mitchell speaks privately of her great "shock" to learn that a Senator's wife had been arrested at the Pentagon, and doesn't conceal her distaste for Mrs. Hart's exploits in the civil rights and anti-war movements. Says Mrs. Mitchell of Mrs. Hart: "She doesn't know the facts."

All who know Mrs. Hart—"Janey" to her friends—agree that she is a remarkable woman. She dropped out of college during World War II to drive trucks for the Red Cross. She now flies her own plane and, during her husband's campaigns, pilots him around Michigan in a helicopter. The mother of eight, she still attends George Washington University and puts to and from the campus on a bright yellow Honda. But to Martha Mitchell, these activities are unladylike.

A secretary in Senator Hart's office acknowledged that Jane, in turn, has some snappy opinions about Mrs. Mitchell. "But these definitely are not for publication," laughed the secretary. Less cautious friends say Mrs. Hart regards Mrs. Mitchell as "a kook."

PIN-WORMS

CAN MAKE YOUR CHILD ITCHY, FIDGETY

Fidgeting, nose-picking, a tormenting rectal itch are often telltale signs of Pin-Worms, ugly parasites that medical experts say infect 1 out of every 3 persons examined. Entire families may be victims and not know it.

To get rid of Pin-Worms, they must be killed in the large intestine where they live and multiply. That's exactly what Jayne's P-W tablets do... and here's how they do it:

First—a scientific coating carries the tablets into the bowels before they dissolve. Then—Jayne's modern, medically-approved ingredient goes right to work—kills Pin-Worms quickly, easily. Ask your pharmacist.

Don't take chances with dangerous, highly contagious Pin-Worms which infect entire families. When one member is infected, health authorities strongly advise that the entire family be treated at the same time. Get Jayne's P-W Vermifuge... small, easy-to-take tablets... special sizes for children and adults.

Helps Solve 3 Biggest FALSE TEETH Worries and Problems

Abingdon, Pa. 19001

WIVES CONTINUED

The blonde and bubbly wife of the Attorney General, as anyone within range of her voice knows, disapproves of "marching in the streets," undisciplined youngsters, Communists, and Margaret Mead. During the anti-war marches last November, she caused a national furor by declaring on TV: "As my husband has said many times, some of the liberals in this country he'd like to take them and change them for Russian Communists."

Lobbying by phone

Several weeks later, Mrs. Mitchell was burning the telephone wires in support of Judge Haynsworth. For three days, she called, Senate wives and threatened to "go on national television" to defeat their husbands if they opposed the South Carolina appointee. If the wives were unavailable, she delivered her message to secretaries.

Betty Fulbright, wife of the Arkansas Senator, acknowledged to PARADE that she received a call from Mrs. Mitchell. "But I don't want to go into it," she said. "I don't want to start a Kentucky feud," Mrs. Fulbright told friends, however, that she has seldom been more angry. The Senator himself came close to reconsidering his support of Haynsworth as a result of the call.

Barbara Laird and Mrs. Clement Haynsworth, on the other hand, gave their happy endorsement of Mrs. Mitchell and her views.

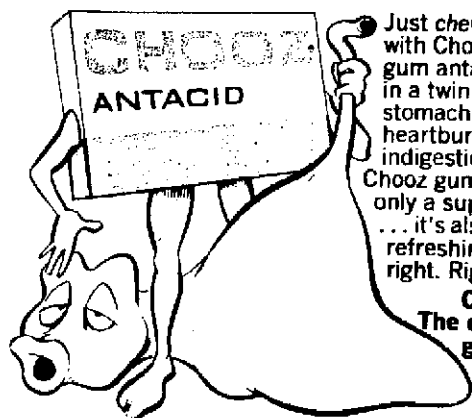

But the reactions of most wives whom PARADE talked to ran against Mrs. Mitchell. "I would never express my opinion," said Betty Fulbright. "Bill is the Senator, not me." Added Mrs. Hugh Scott, wife of the House Republican Leader: "Wives should stay out of the political picture as much as possible. Our husbands need us for companionship. They don't need us to discuss politics. I feel strongly about that."

Mrs. Birch Bayh, wife of the Indiana Senator who led the Senate fight against Judge Haynsworth, would say nothing against Martha Mitchell. "It's something each lady has to decide for herself," Mrs. Bayh said. "But I would personally never lobby." Agreed Mrs. Gerald Ford, wife of the House Republican Leader: "Lobbying is not my job."

Sen. Strom Thurmond's new young wife Nancy is careful to follow his lead in politics. They are shown here leaving church after marriage.

Another May-December couple are Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas and wife Cathleen. She also stays in the shadows, feels it wouldn't be "bright" to differ with husband in public.

WIVES CONTINUED

The blonde and bubbly wife of the Attorney General, as anyone within range of her voice knows, disapproves of "marching in the streets," undisciplined youngsters, Communists, and Margaret Mead. During the anti-war marches last November, she caused a national furor by declaring on TV: "As my husband has said many times, some of the liberals in this country he'd like to take them and change them for Russian Communists."

Lobbying by phone

Several weeks later, Mrs. Mitchell was burning the telephone wires in support of Judge Haynsworth. For three days, she called Senate wives and threatened to "go on national television" to defeat their husbands if they opposed the South Carolina appointee. If the wives were unavailable, she delivered her message to secretaries.

Betty Fulbright, wife of the Arkansas Senator, acknowledged to PARADE that she received a call from Mrs. Mitchell. "But I don't want to go into it," she said. "I don't want to start a Kentucky feud." Mrs. Fulbright told friends, however, that she has seldom been more angry. The Senator himself came close to reconsidering his support of Haynsworth as a result of the call.

Barbara Laird and Mrs. Clement Haynsworth, on the other hand, gave their happy endorsement of Mrs. Mitchell and her views.

But the reactions of most wives whom PARADE talked to ran against Mrs. Mitchell. "I would never express my opinion," said Betty Fulbright. "Bill is the Senator, not me." Added Mrs. Hugh Scott, wife of the Senate Republican Leader: "Wives should stay out of the political picture as much as possible. Our husbands need us for companionship. They don't need us to discuss politics. I feel strongly about that."

Mrs. Birch Bayh, wife of the Indiana Senator who led the Senate fight against Judge Haynsworth, would say nothing against Martha Mitchell. "It's something each lady has to decide for herself," Mrs. Bayh said. "But I would personally never lobby." Agreed Mrs. Gerald Ford, wife of the House Republican Leader: "Lobbying is not my job."

WIVES CONTINUED

Mrs. Hale Boggs, wife of the House Democratic Whip, believes Congressional wives should confine their lobbying to the home. She is rueful, however, about her influence upon her own husband. "I lobbied my husband against one bill with every weapon known to woman, including French perfume," she confessed. "But he still voted for it."

How do the husbands feel about their outspoken spouses? Sen. Philip Hart raises the flag in favor of freedom for wives. "If my wife and children become involved in national issues and make their beliefs known in a non-violent manner," he said matter-of-factly, "that is more responsive to their training than if they judged every action by its effect on my career."

Attorney General John Mitchell firmly suggested to his wife, at first, that she could best contribute to Republican rule on the Potomac by making "sure the food is good." But he now acknowledges helplessly: "There isn't anybody I know of who can stop her." Martha's only punishment for embarrassing her husband, apparently, has been the loss of her private office in her husband's department.

But far from being muted, Martha is keeping a scrapbook of her press clippings and doesn't plan to put her scissors away yet. "I am a free citizen," she has told friends. "I'll say what I please."

The White House, dismayed over Martha's utterances, has suggested delicately that her access to the press be curtailed. But if President Nixon is grieved over her free-wheeling tongue, he has no one to blame but himself. More than any other, he is responsible for emancipating Washington wives.

He has invited wives to attend meetings and briefings, to ask questions and express themselves—an invitation that has all but obliterated his promise "to lower voices." Under the new Nixon doctrine, wives participate in occasional Cabinet meetings, visit the government departments and attend affairs that used to be strictly stag. It's all part of his program to make them aware of what their husbands are doing.

Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird and wife. She has always kept her political opinions to herself, but she liked what Mrs. Mitchell said, and cheered her on.

Airborne visit

The President is so solicitous of the wives that he took seriously a jesting suggestion from Secretary of Transportation John Volpe, while they were inspecting Washington traffic patterns from a helicopter, that they fly by his 14th-floor penthouse to wave at his wife, Jennie. Nixon immediately commanded the helicopter pilot to head for the Volpe penthouse in Washington's swank Watergate complex. As the helicopter hovered at the Volpe window, the President found himself waving and smiling at a lady in curlers and a housecoat hanging draperies. Unabashed, Jennie returned the salute and continued with her work.

Among Cabinet wives, Jennie Volpe is Martha Mitchell's opposite. Jennie has never made a political speech or, so far as intimates know, commented upon a political issue. Says a Volpe aide: "She would rather spend her time making John's favorite Italian soup."

On the platform

The most articulate Cabinet wife, a political pro in her own right, is Mrs. George Romney, wife of the Secretary of Housing and Urban Development. The former Presidential contender pays her the ultimate compliment by frequently sharing the platform with her. Says Romney in praise of his wife: "Lenore's the best there is. She's a professional."

Most Washington wives still prefer to exercise their political influence through their husbands. Probably the most powerful, and most enigmatic, is Harriet McCormack, wife of the aging Speaker. She is seldom seen around Washington, grants no interviews and confides her opinions only to her husband. But it is well known in the inner circles that John McCormack never makes a move without first discussing it with Harriet. In over 50 years of marriage, he has been heard to boast, they never missed a dinner together or spent a night apart.

McCormack's aides are no less diligent in pampering the Missus. Twice each day, a top aide calls the McCormack apartment in the dreary old Washington Hotel to check on her wants. When she makes an occasional appearance at the Speaker's office, she is immediately ushered to a private room, and a secretary hustles in with vanilla ice cream.

A PARADE reporter in McCormack's office watched at length while the Speaker scribbled notes about items he wanted to discuss with Harriet. When Mrs. McCormack called, the reporter noted that the aide unconsciously arose from his chair and stood at attention as he spoke on the phone. His end of the conversation consisted almost entirely of "Yes, Mrs. McCormack" and "No, Mrs. McCormack." Similarly, the Speaker in his telephone talks with his wife echoes: "Yes, Harriet. Yes, Harriet."

Two of the most diffident wives in Washington are pretty, plump Mrs.

Judy Agnew, the Vice-President's wife, is content to let him do the talking.

Spiro Agnew, wife of the Vice President, and sofly erudite, ladylike Mrs. Mike Mansfield, wife of the Senate Democratic Leader. Both are content to remain in the shadow of their husbands.

Mrs. Ted Kennedy, wife of the Massachusetts Senator, is quiet in public but speaks up in private. "I'm his worst critic," she has admitted privately. According to Kennedy intimates, her opinion is always honest and much deeper than the public might expect from the "sexy blonde" image they have of her. Joan Kennedy has confided to friends: "If Ted can't make me understand what he's trying to do, how can he expect the public to?"

New wives quiet

A couple of the new Washington wives are both beauties, in their early 20's, married to old men. They are Mrs. William O. Douglas, wife of the Supreme Court Justice, and Mrs. Strom Thurmond, wife of the South Carolina Senator.

The two girls have much in common. Both stay discreetly in the shadows, both have trouble keeping up with their physically robust husbands. Heart trouble, however, has slowed Douglas down in recent months. Cathy Douglas told PARADE: "I travel with him. I keep up with his speeches and accompany him in his conservation activities, but as far as I'm concerned it's all just part of being a wife." She would never take issue with him in public. "I don't think that would be very bright," she said.

Nancy Thurmond, the former Miss South Carolina, is ready to follow her husband's lead on the political stump. She will speak out, or keep her mouth shut, as he directs. Explained Nancy: "He's the servant of the people, and he's very capable of handling the political affairs."

Influence at home

Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Robert Finch's wife, Carol, might conceivably disagree with her husband in public, "but it would have to be on a deep, moral issue." She prefers to exert her influence in the home. "I am probably Bob's most severe critic," she told PARADE. "We often disagree on a particular issue, and he will stop and thoroughly explain why he is taking a certain tangent. This has a certain influence on him—makes him give things a second thought. He thinks I have a good intuitive sense."

Another who keeps her place in public but gets in her two cents' worth at home is Mrs. William Rogers, wife of the Secretary of State. She is now poring over foreign affairs books so she can discuss the issues with him intelligently after office hours.

But Mrs. Hugh Scott puts into words what most of the wives acknowledged privately. "Even if I didn't want Hugh to think for himself," she confided, "he would do it anyway."

Chalk up the last score for manhood.

Wasn't I pretty-looking in this old snapshot? I was 150 pounds.

I'd probably never be married now, if I hadn't lost 49 pounds

Dear Ruth McCarthy: You don't know me, but I've been reading your stories about people who've lost weight and I'd like to tell you my tale.

I was a junior in high school. A fat, dateless teenager who spent her lonely evenings at the refrigerator. Either at my house or baby-sitting at someone else's. The bad thing about baby-sitting was that there was always food in the house, which turned into fat on my hips. Whenever I got a chance to dance (usually in the arms of my father at a family wedding), I looked like a bowl of jelly, jiggling across the floor. Sounds funny, doesn't it? But it wasn't. Particularly not when you had a slim sister, who dated regularly.

She and her boyfriend tried to fix me up with fellows, but who wanted to do the Twist with 150 pounds of fat. I kept telling myself that I'd outgrow it. I didn't. And you don't when you eat like I did.

My mother is Maltese and my father Czechoslovakian. When he married my mother, he insisted that she learn how to bake all those fancy Czech pastries. Of course, she had a few Maltese specialties of her own. And me, I just lapped them up.

By the time I'd become a junior in high school, however, I began to think more about boys than baked goods. Not too far from where I lived, in Flushing, New York, there's a very nice place that has dances for teenagers on Friday evenings. I used to go sometimes, but nothing ever came of it. I always wound up a wallflower.

Summers were hard, too. Bathing-suit time. Mine would always be one-piece. And black. I'd stay in the water, up to my neck, as much as possible. On the sand, I'd wrap myself in a robe and watch the others have fun. I'm sure they thought I was shy, but I was really ashamed.

After unhappy times like these, I'd try to "starve" myself. I'd lose a couple of pounds, but at the end of the week, I'd go on a binge and gain it all back.

Then one day I read an ad about a reducing-plan candy, called Ayds. And the word "candy" got me. This sounded like the answer to my problem.

After all, I thought, it wouldn't be like taking a reducing pill. And it wasn't, once I tried Ayds. One thing I liked, this candy contained no harmful drugs. And it was sweet enough to satisfy my sweet tooth, so I didn't feel I was denying myself at all. I just took one or two before meals as directed, with a hot drink. And it helped me control my appetite. Really. It was as pleasant as could be. I lost 25 pounds in three months. That's when my friends began to notice my looks. I even began to like the way I looked myself. In fact, I began to think about getting contact lenses. "Might as well go all the way," I thought.

When I reached 125 pounds, one of the girls got me a date for Rye Beach. It was great. And it was only the beginning. There were dates and more dates.

Every pound I lost motivated me to lose another. By the time I graduated, I had dropped to 115 pounds. And it wasn't long before I lost more. The only reason I took baby-sitting jobs from then on was to make money. Not fill up my evening.

After years of being wrapped in 150 pounds of fat, I was slim—and free.

I'm 5'2½" tall and today, I weigh 101 pounds, down from 150. In the measurements department, I've gone from 40" to 33½" in the bust; from 29" to 23½" in the waist; from 40" to 34" in the hips; and from a size 16½ to a size 5 dress.

Isn't that wonderful? And what really makes me feel good is knowing that I haven't gained any of the weight back in six years. And I haven't even had to continue using Ayds to stay slim. On the Ayds Plan, I had trained myself to eat less. And like it. And the habit has lasted.

In January, I was married to a wonderful man, who found it hard to believe I was ever heavy. During our engagement, I showed him the enclosed pictures of myself. I suppose it wasn't the brightest thing to do, but, thank goodness, it didn't scare him off. He did say though: "If I'd seen you when you were that big, I'd never have asked you out." And I'm sure that, without Ayds, I'd never have this wedding band on my finger today.

Mary Marcinko-Kane

After all, I thought, it wouldn't be like taking a reducing pill. And it wasn't, once I tried Ayds. One thing I liked, this candy contained no harmful drugs. And it was sweet enough to satisfy my sweet tooth, so I didn't feel I was denying myself at all. I just took one or two before meals as directed, with a hot drink. And it helped me control my appetite. Really. It was as pleasant as could be. I lost 25 pounds in three months. That's when my friends began to notice my looks. I even began to like the way I looked myself. In fact, I began to think about getting contact lenses. "Might as well go all the way," I thought.

When I reached 125 pounds, one of the girls got me a date for Rye Beach. It was great. And it was only the beginning. There were dates and more dates.

Every pound I lost motivated me to lose another. By the time I graduated, I had dropped to 115 pounds. And it wasn't long before I lost more. The only reason I took baby-sitting jobs from then on was to make money. Not fill up my evening.

After years of being wrapped in 150 pounds of fat, I was slim—and free.

I'm 5'2½" tall and today, I weigh 101 pounds, down from 150. In the measurements department, I've gone from 40" to 33½" in the bust; from 29" to 23½" in the waist; from 40" to 34" in the hips; and from a size 16½ to a size 5 dress.

Isn't that wonderful? And what really makes me feel good is knowing that I haven't gained any of the weight back in six years. And I haven't even had to continue using Ayds to stay slim. On the Ayds Plan, I had trained myself to eat less. And like it. And the habit has lasted.

In January, I was married to a wonderful man, who found it hard to believe I was ever heavy. During our engagement, I showed him the enclosed pictures of myself. I suppose it wasn't the brightest thing to do, but, thank goodness, it didn't scare him off. He did say though: "If I'd seen you when you were that big, I'd never have asked you out." And I'm sure that, without Ayds, I'd never have this wedding band on my finger today.

Want Bright Children?

Dr. Carlo Sirtori, president of Italy's largest private health research foundation, says that if young couples want to conceive bright and healthy children, they should go easy on drinking, smoking, overeating, and worrying.

"Away with worries, sorrows, anxiety, idle bones, and flaccid muscles," he counsels. Dr. Sirtori believes that poor physical and mental health can be reflected in both the sperm cells and the ova.

Before young couples engage in sex relations with the objective of producing a child, Sirtori advises a complete medical checkup. He points out that one newborn child in every 15 suffers some medically inexplicable birth defect, and suspects this may be caused by sex relations during pregnancy. He recommends total abstinence during this period.

Sirtori, who is president of the Carlo Erba Foundation in Rome, says that couples who plan on conceiving should spend an idyllic weekend in the mountains or seashore, away from the gasoline-polluted air of the cities.

He believes that the healthiest and most intelligent children are produced when the woman is between 20 and 30 and the man between 20 and 35.

Coming Attractions

A rash of films on campus life, campus revolution, the trials and tribulations of being a coed and college boy will soon be forthcoming from Hollywood.

Columbia has finished Getting Straight with Candy Bergen and Elliott Gould, Barbra Streisand's estranged husband. The film was shot in part at Lane Community College in Eugene, Ore.

Also ready for Columbia release is R.P.M. (revolutions per minute), produced by Stanley Kramer and starring Anni-Margret, Anthony Quinn, and Gary Lockwood. This one was filmed at the University of the Pacific campus in Stockton, Calif., also the location site for MGM's The Strawberry Statement: Notes of a College Revolutionary, based on the diary of James Kunen, a 19-year-old Columbia University student.

These films are designed to attract the 18-25 group who constitute more than 50 percent of American moviegoers.

Worth Quoting

"If there is one thing that is clear as we enter the 1970's, it is that the new generation of educated men and women will make sweeping demands of the institutions they come in contact with. The fashion and entertainment industries were revolutionized by their tastes; the colleges, the graduate schools, law firms and businesses have learned in turn that they must adjust to the values and beliefs of this new generation."

David Broder
in "The Washington Post."

The Business Cry For Youth

How many American boys want to grow up to become salesman? Not many, it seems.

Richard Baily, president of Sales & Marketing Executives International and vice president of Burroughs Corp., Detroit, says, "There seems to be a feeling among young people that business doesn't offer what they're looking for. The feeling seems to be that if you can't make it in medicine or law school, if you can't snare a government grant or get into the Peace Corps, then you have to settle for a business career."

In a recent address to other sales and marketing executives in Los Angeles, Baily pointed out that 17 percent of the U.S. population now consists of young men and women between the ages of 15 and 25 and that a large percentage of the young is turned off by sales pitches and the way business is conducted.

"They see that we can produce millions of automobiles," he explains, "TV's and the rest every year. But they also see that many of these products are defective."

"They see that industry pollutes the air and water, exploits our resources and sometimes equates men with machines as tools of production."

Baily declares that it is extremely difficult for the business world to attract the offbeat kid who is nonconformist in his attire and attitude.

"It's really tough," he maintains, "because some of these kids are the brightest and most persuasive around, and the most original thinkers at a time when we badly need original ideas."

LET ZANE GREY TAKE YOU OUT OF THE WORLD YOU'RE IN

Pick up a Zane Grey book and step into another world.

It's a world where the Plains Indians, the world's greatest horsemen, once more don their war paint to hunt scalps. And thin-lipped, soft-spoken men, squinting against the sun, carve out their destinies . . . on their own terms.

If this world is one you'd like to explore, we'll send you—for only $1—three of the greatest books Zane Grey ever wrote.

Riders of the Purple Sage, perhaps the most popular Western ever written. Against a background of fiery action, a mysterious rider and the girl he loves gamble their lives in the winning of the West.

Arizona Ames, the no-holds-barred epic of a hard-riding cowpuncher whose blazing six-shooter spread terror among the toughest badmen.

Wild Horse Mesa, a western "Moby Dick," that portrays a man's desperate search for the King of the Hooses.

These handsome, hardbound books are clothed in sunset red, desert tan and cavalry blue, and stamped in genuine gold. They're the first of what could be a library of Western classics you'll be proud to own.

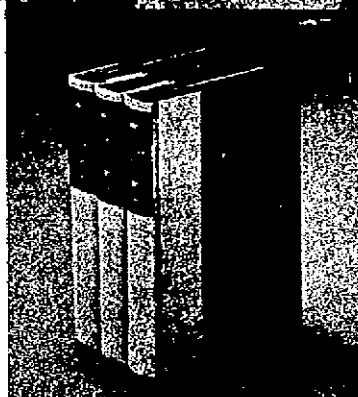

You may wonder why we offer you three Zane Grey books (which are regularly $10.17) for only $1.

It's simply this. We think you'll be impressed. And that you'll want to own others in the series as they become available.

They will include: Wildfire, The Thundering Herd, The Vanishing American, Fighting Caravans, The Hash Knife Outfit, Maverick Queen, Thunder Mountain, and many more.

Because we print in large quantities, and because we sell directly to the public, we can offer our subscribers beautifully bound Zane Grey books for only a fraction of what you'd expect to pay—only $3.39 plus a few cents shipping for each volume.

Send no money. Just mail coupon to get Riders of the Purple Sage, Arizona Ames, and Wild Horse Mesa—the whole shooting match—at the special introductory price of $1.

Please send me Riders of the Purple Sage, Arizona Ames, and Wild Horse Mesa.

If I don't want to keep these introductory volumes, I'll return them within a week and owe nothing. Otherwise, I'll pay just $1 for all three, plus shipping.

Also reserve for me additional beautifully-bound volumes in the Zane Grey Library, which I will be entitled to receive as they come from the presses.

I'll get advance descriptions of all future volumes. I may reject any books before or after I receive them. For those I do keep, I pay just $3.39 each plus shipping. And I may cancel my reservation any time. (Books shipped in U.S.A. only.)
